Suspicious of everyone, gloomy, stern and bigoted, he was false to his closest allies and was bound by no oaths or treaties, and seemed to actually delight in deeds of unrelenting cruelty. Motley, summing up his character, says of him: "There have been few men known in history who have been able to accomplish by their own exertions so vast an amount of evil. * * * The only plausible explanation—for palliation there is none—of his infamous career is that the man really believed himself not a king, but a god."

Sismondi, in judging of his career, speaks in a similar strain, in words which may fitly close this paper: "No scruple stopped him, his conscience recoiled from no cruelty, no perfidy; he went straight toward his object through more blood and more crimes than were ever lavished by any other monarch. * * * His pestilential breath dispeopled the kingdoms that were subject to him."—Temple Bar.

"Suppress Dem Puffs."

An old time darky butler, such as may be found occasionally in Philadelphia, used grander expression the older he grew. He was helping a visitor the other day to don her walking-jacket, and as he noticed that she was still struggling to push in her rebellious big sleeves, he suggested, respectfully: "Pr'aps you will hab de goodness to allow me to suppress dem puffs, madam."—N. ECZEMA

From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of this disease. I visited Hot Springs and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. When all things had failed I determined to try S.S.S. and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible eczema was gone, not a sign of it left. My general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. I have often recommended S.S.S. and have never yet known a failure to cure.

Like an open book, our faces tell the tale of health or disease. Hollow cheeks and sunken eyes, listless steps and languorous looks tell of wasting debilitating disease some place in the body. It may be one place or another, the cause is generally traceable to a common source—impure blood, and impure blood starts in the digestive organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, stimulates digestive action, searches out disease-germs wherever they exist and puts the whole body into a vigorous, strong and healthy condition. It builds up solid, useful flesh, rubs out wrinkles, brightens the eyes and makes life really worth living.

MILLION IS INVOLVED

LATE NEWS AND GOSSIP OF GOTHAM.

Sensation in Medical Circles by the Announcement of a Rival to Koch—Justice Demanded of the Rich as Well as of the Poor.

NEW YORK, April 13.—(Special) A million dollar swindle in the dock Board is the discovery made by the new president of the department, General Edward C. O'Brien, and officially announced late yesterday afternoon.

He declined absolutely to discuss the matter when approached by a reporter, but admitted that an immense swindle had been perpetrated and that the revelations would be startling.

In addition to President O'Brien, Commissioners Edwin Einstin and James J. Phelan were present at yesterday's session, when the announcement was made. Phelan is the only democrat at present on the board.

Series of Gigantic Swindles.

From a reliable source it was learned that ever since the appointment of President O'Brien in the place of ex-Judge Andrew J. White and Commissioner Einstein to relieve J. Sergeant Cram, the two republican members of the board have exhaustively overhauled the accounts of the late administration, and have been appalled at the results. The informant says that as far as the commissioners went they managed to discover a series of swindles aggregating more than a million dollars.

Just how the swindle was perpetrated was not made public, but it is intimated that wharfage and contracts had a great deal to do with it, and that in the case of one $500,000 fraud a well-known steamship company may be involved. The matter has caused a sensation.

New York's Latest Fire.

The large double, five-story brick apartment house, 75 West 92d street, came near destruction by fire last night. A fire started in the cellar just before 7 o'clock, and the flames rushed up three dumb waiters shafts. The fact that the walls of these shafts are of brick is all that saved the building. The inmates had to rush from the building for their lives. The smoke had preceded the flames and filled every apartment in less than five minutes after the fire started. Firemen, policemen end citizens aided the terrified tenants to escape. One or two narrowly escaped suffocation. The damage is estimated at $10,000. Leopold Schmid, of 114 East 122d street, owns the building. This is the sixth fire that has occurred in this vicinity within twenty-four hours.

Latest Sensation in Medical Circles.

Consul General De Kay, at Berlin, reports the discovery of a cure for consumption and cancer. The discovery was made by Dr. Lous Waldstein, of this city.

The new treatment, perfected by studies abroad, consists of injecting minute doses of pilocarpine until the lymphatic system is stimulated and the white corpuscles of the blood overcome the poisonous particles which produce disease.

The importance of the discovery is thought to be far beyond those of Pasteur and Koch.

Upon the Rich as Well as the Poor.

As an example of the very exact system of city ordinances now in vogue, Ex-Alderman and Dock Commissioner Robert Hall was fined $10 in the Yorkville court yesterday, which he paid under protest. Hall has a stable in Sixty-seventh street, near Lexington avenue, and when a district superintendent attempted to move some of Hall's carriages that were obstructing the street, Hall, it is alleged, interfered and was arrested He was very indignant.

The Observance of Good Friday.

All of the down-town exchanges and city departments were closed yesterday to observe Good Friday. The departments were closed in accordance with the resolution of the board of aldermen requesting that all public business be suspended for the day. All three parts of the court of general sessions, as well as the Oyer and Terminer, will be closed until Monday.

THE ESCAPE NOT A MYSTERY

How the Five Inmates of the Criminal Insane Asylum Got Away at Newburg.

NEWBURG, N. Y., April 13.—Yesterday after noon Dr. Allison, superintendent of the Matteawen asylum for the criminal insane, gave out the following statement regarding the manner in which the escape Wednesday night, of five inmates, was effected:

Upon the return of Quigley, a statement was obtained from him showing that the escape was due to a violation on the part of the attendants, of the rules of the institution and also to a carelessness in the manner of locking up. A portion of the inmates of the isolation building were allowed to go to the dining room to their meals, but McGuire and Perry, among several others, received their meals in their rooms.

Their food was given to them upon a plate with a metal iron spoon. The regulations are that utensils of this character should always be counted in and counted out so that nothing should be secured in the rooms. By a neglect of these precautions McGuire came into possession of these two spoons, with which he was enabled to fashion keys for the outer doors. It is not certain how he obtained the pattern, but he evidently worked in conjunction with another patient to whom he passed the keys of the door. This patient, on the way to supper, unlocked the lower lock, which was entirely beyond the reach of any patient confined in the room, and this fact led to the suspicion that the doors could not be opened without collusion on the part of some outsiders.

KIN OF THE GREAT INVENTOR.

Evanda Morse was arrested in Canada during the insurrection for carrying firearms, served through the Mexican war, and had lived in Chicago more than fifty years.

JURY TAKES ITS TIME

ISSUE OF THE TRIAL AND THE CLOSE.

Conspiracy and Not the Overt Act, the Question at Point—Has the Federal Court Jurisdiction in the Case? Features of the Trial.

ATLANTA, April 13.—The defense and the prosecution in the white cap trial consumed yesterday in argument. At 7 o'clock last night the case against John Quarles and David Butler was given to the jury. The main issue is whether the federal court has jurisdiction over the case. The theory of the defense is that it has not.

The defense does not deny that Henry Worley, a revenue informer, was hanged and that a band of ku-klux hanged him; but they rest their case, as far as this matter is concerned, on the proposition, that it was not for informing that Worley was hanged; but for betraying the oath-bound clans of ku-kluxes.

If this is proved then the case fails, for it is founded by the government on the idea that in informing against illicit distillers, Worley was enjoying a right and privilege guaranteed by the constitution and laws of the United States, which makes the determination of the ku-klux band to kill him a conspiracy under federal statute.

The defense also claims broadly that Butler and Quarles are innocent of participating in the hanging of Worley.

The government claims that Quarles and Butler are conspirators. The issue in the case is conspiracy and not the overt act.

There will not be a verdict in the case before this afternoon.

COTTON BLAZE IN CHARLOTTE.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 13.—Yesterday at 11 o'clock fire was discovered in the warehouse of the Ada cotton mills. There were 848 bales of cotton in the warehouse. The building was brick, eighty by forty feet with corrigated iron roof. A truckman going in for cotton discovered the fire. For two hours the firemen fought the fire, keeping it in the building. The end walls were then pulled down and as much of the cotton as possible rolled out. The amount of the loss is about $27,000, fully covered by insurance.

WHO WILL BE HER CHIEF'S.

NEW YORK, April 13.—In the trouble the big Tammany chiefs are having in the selection of sachems it is said that Richard Croker is to be allowed to decide who will be sachems and who will not. The nominating committee is all in a tangle, and after a very unsatisfactory meeting yesterday it was decided to cable to Mr. Croker to find out his wishes in the matter. Before he went away Mr. Croker made a list of names. Some of them were of men he wanted made sachems, and some of sachems, who will have to go, many of the latter being ex-Mayor Gilroy's friends. At the meeting next Monday night it is rumored that there will be a revolt and that the leaders of it may be found in ex-Mayor Cooper and William C. Whitney. The latter is credited with a desire to run the democratic organization in this city, and he may succeed.

ACTUAL GAINS IN THE SOUTH.

Trade Conditions Materially Improved, as Reported by Bradstreets.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Bradstreets says:

The feature in trade circles is found in the prices movement, more particularly those for cattle, dressed beef, and petroleum. Drouth; low prices and "hard times" within two years have resulted in a shorter supply of cattle, prospectively thirty per cent less than last year. Live cattle are $1.60 higher per one hundred pounds last year and $1 higher than the lowest point this year. Dressed beef is 2½ cents higher than the average last year, the highest since 1885.

Among more important southern cities reporting actual gains in the movement of merchandise are Atlanta, Augusta, Savannah and Galveston, but improvement there is slight. The outlook is regarded more cheerfully at New Orleans, where sugar bounty disbursements are expected soon, but at Jacksonville and Birmingham general trade is quiet and in some lines slow. Nashville and Memphis retain improvement previously recorded. Improved weather helps trade at Charleston. At Chattanooga dry goods and hardware are relatively most active.

THE PROSPECTS IN CUBA.

Opposite Stories by the Spaniards and the Cubans—What Campos May Do.

HAVANA, April 13.—The government officials still declare that the revolution is virtually confined to the province of Santiago and will be easily crushed, while the patriots hold to their assertions that the rebellion is widespread, and is sure of success. The government states that General de Campos, on his arrival at Santiago, will not only evidently become absolute in authority but will march directly upon the insurgents, laying waste the country in his path, but the Cubans say that this would antagonize even the friends of the government, and that Campos is more likely to offer an amnesty, and so gain time.

PAY INDEMNITY IN SILVER.

And China Will Hand Over the Result of the Bloody Conflict.

WASHINGTON, April 13,—Careful inquiries, both at the Chinese and Japanese legations and of officials of the state department and officers of the navy, who by residence in both the contending countries have become familiar with their customs and currency, seem to indicate a strong probability that the indemnity to be paid by China to Japan will be paid in silver and not in gold, though no definite official statement to the effect has yet been received here. Silver is the measure of value to a great extent in both countries. Japan has not been called upon to negotiate any European loan payable in gold for the prosecution of the war. Therefore she has experienced no special drain of gold. China, on the other hand, being heavily indebted to England and other European nations, has exported within the last few years large quantities of gold, and the national treasury does not contain any considerable amount of this metal.

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 13.—Mail advices by the steamer Empress of Japan arrived yesterday and say that two American ladies were walking in Legation street, Peking, when they were attacked by soldiers, while the native guard, posted in the street for police protection, looked on and grinned. The soldiers who attacked the ladies were beaten to death by the angry husbands. The Peking authorities have allowed the two ladies insulted to have a guard of Russian soldiers to accompany them in their walks.

BIRMINGHAM, April 10.—In a pitched battle at Little Warrior, Alabama, a mining camp 21 miles west of Birmingham last night four men were shot, one of them fatally. The participants in the fight were J. Deb Hooper, George Hooper and Charles Bredier, on one side and William Babby, Walter McPherson and E. E. Thomas on the other. Bradier was shot in the neck and will die. J. D. Hooper received a shot in his right leg and another grazed his breast, another shot struck George Hooper in the face and Bibby was shot in the right leg.

The trouble grew out of a lease on the Little Warrior coal mine formerly operated by Hooper & Co., but now leased to Thomas and Bibby. The Thomas party claim that the Hooper party waylaid in the road for them and commenced the firing before a word was spohen. No arrests have been made but the grand jury now in session, it is understood will investigate the matter.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, APRIL 18, 1895.

WHAT a wonderful state Alabama will be when her resources are all developed.

THERE is much to inspire confidence and hope in the confirmed trade reports of signs of improvement in business circles.

ALABAMA is certain to be the greatest iron-producing state in the Union. There are vast quantities of the finest quality of ores here.

THE fruit crop for this year is in a most promising condition. We are almost sure of a yield that will exceed any in the history of the state.

THE Brooklyn Citizen says that if Richelieu had lived until today he would have remarked: "The shears in the hands of an intelligent editor are many times mightier than the sword."

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND declares this country is safe "only so long as solvency is unsuspected, its honor unsullied and the soundness of its money unquestioned." The president thus makes the nation's honor and sound money synonymous. He is right. The question of sound money is a matter of morality.

THE latest southern outrage which is causing much trouble and anxiety just now is the steady absorption of northern industries. Everything that makes life worth living in New England will soon be in the South, leaving nothing but rocks and recollections for the few survivors that may linger in that blighted region.

AMERICAN woolens are still making their way in foreign markets under the beneficent and stimulating influence of the reform tariff law. With free raw wool, Yankee ingenuity and the matchless skill of American artisans the world will bow down to your Uncle Sam as a manufacturer of woolens. All the old man needed was a fair chance, and the democratic congress gave it to him.

OSCAR WILDE, who some years ago came over from London and posed as a high-toned dude or æsthete, and was received into the most select society and worshipped by a lot of women who had more money than brains, is now on trial in London, charged with a series of unmentionable and heinous crimes and with every probability of his conviction. He is confined in prison and is taken to and from the court in the Black Maria, a vehicle used by the police for conveying the vilest of criminals.

THE Age-Herald management on last Sunday morning issued a 36-page paper as an Easter souvenir edition. It was certainly a very creditable edition, being the largest paper ever issued in the state. It was not only a credit to the management but to the City of Birmingham as well, and much is due its citizens for their hearty support, which is necessary to the successful culmination of every project of that kind, and shows that its business men are a live, wide-awake class of citizens.

SENATOR HOAR attributes the fall in the price of cotton to the tariff act of 1894. He knows, of course, that there was no tariff on cotton to remove, and he must be aware also that shrinkage of demand from the mills has not been more pronounced at home than abroad. And, finally, does the Senator recall the fact that cotton suffered a greater decline in price from the year 1810 to and including the year 1892—when the McKinley act was in full force and the republican party in power—than it has suffered since?—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

"WE propose to fight the farmer's heaviest burden, the hill and mud tax," says the Florence Times. Our contemporary is right. Bad roads cost the farmer more money for horseflesh, wear and tear of vehicles and time than all his other taxes, national, state and county combined. Building good roads is the best investment the people can make. In many cases they will pay for themselves in two years, especially if increase in the value of property is considered.—Advertiser.

THE decline of prices is not the unmixed evil that some say it is. The producer may not like it, but the consumer does. The fall in prices is largely due to cheapened cost of production and cheapened interchange. The purchasing power of wages is twice as great as it was twenty-five years ago. The cheapened cost of transportation is shown in the fact that twenty years ago it cost 23 cents a bushel to transport wheat from Chicago to New York, while now it costs only 10 cents to carry it from Chicago to Liverpool. It is cheap transportation, cheap land and sharp competition from other countries that has brought down the price of farm products, and not the lack of the free coinage of silver.

A LARGE majority of the republican newspapers publish everything they can find, in fact or fancy, to show that the country has gone to the dogs under democratic rule. They will not look on the bright side of things. They never publish favorable indications. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is an exception. It admits that there is life in the old land yet. It even concedes that the cotton planters are not so bad after all. It says: "The low price of cotton is to be deplored, of course, but there must be a profit in the crop or the South would not go on raising so much of it. As a matter of fact a bale of cotton can now be exchanged for more food, clothing and other necessary articles than it could when the price was twice as high: and that is probably the reason why the product continues to be large in spite of its declining price."

A WESTERN MAN FOR PRESIDENT

Washington correspondent St. Louis Republic

It is plain that the demand of the western democracy that the next presidential candidate of the party must hail from the West has been heard in the East. Prominent democrats from all sections of the country whom I meet from time to time here concede that the next candidate will be a western man. The eastern element, however, will not surrender control without a struggle. An effort will be made to create strife between the democrats of the West and South. In furtherance of this scheme the Washington Post for some days past has been advocating the nomination of a southern man. David B. Hill telegraphed from Albany indorsing the Post's suggestion. David thought nobody should be barred, and he hoped the best man would win. The idea, of course, is plausable. It will please some ambitious and aspiring southern statesman, and later on, perhaps booms will be worked up. Here in Washington, however, the Post's scheme is generally looked upon as an effort to pull a red herring across the trail and cause a diversion. It has been assumed that in the effort to transfer control of the democratic party from the East to the West that the South would act as an ally of the West, in fact, the most active and influential factor in the movement. Knowing politicians here have no doubt that the Washington Post's scheme was well thought out in advance and that the friends of Mr. Wm. C. Whitney in New York and elsewhere have had considerable to do with it.

Whether justly or not, there is a very strong suspicion here in the minds of southern and western democrats that the eastern men will bury the hatchet and show a united front in the national convention in favor of Mr. Whitney's nomination. Gossip goes that Lamont, Hill, Smith of Jersey, Gorman, Brice and Smally have agreed on Whitney and that Mr. Cleveland has given the movement the apostolic benediction.

I am told by a prominent republican that it is the hope of the republican leaders to be able to ignore domestic affairs almost entirely during the next presidential campaign and make the fight on issues springing from our foreign relations. They will go in strong for jingoism, spread-eagleism, annexation, Monroe doctrine, big navy, absoption, conquest, war. They intend to put a chip on Uncle Sam's shoulder and dare Great Britain, Spain, Germany, Japan, or any other "damn furriner" to knock it off. They will demand annexation of Hawaii, Samoa and Cuba. They will insist that Great Britian must evacuate South America, give up all claim to territory in Venezuela and that the maintenance of fortresses at Quebec and Bermuda is a menace to the peace and happiness of the people of this country. You have probably read some of Senator Fry's late speeches and declarations. Now, Senator Frye never drinks, so his utterances need not be charged to artificial exuberance, and if the republicans organize the next senate he will probably be chairman of the committee on foreign relations. The republican leader believes that the people of the United States are ripe for aggression, eager for the enterprise consequent on war; that the young men want glory and the old men a field for investment of capital. Frye evidently would be disappointed and chagrined if Great Britain should give up Canada and Bermuda or Spain Cuba without a struggle. Frye yearns for conquest, he aches for war. And yet we had five years of beautiful fighting in this country between 1860 and 1865 and Frye did not participate.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 4.

1818 1830—Some of the more remarkable early settlers of Coosa valley, between a serpentine range of hills and mountains and the Coosa river, constituting the eastern border of the county, were Maj. Rushing, owning a fine canebrake farm at the mouth of Wauxahatchee creek, with two good millseats on a small stream running through it, a man of brains and energy, not so estimable in other respects; coming up the valley some six or eight miles, to the neighborhood called the "Kingdom," a garden spot some three miles square, and three miles east of Columbiana, Thomas and James McAdams, Samuel McClanahan, who lived near if not on the iron lands, where now stands the village of Shelby with extensive iron works; Henry Gooch, who raised a number of most ladylike daughters; a little later, George Hill, who several times represented the county in the legislature—a man of sense and great worth; about 1832, Wade Hampton Griffin, a red hot nullifier, from whom I imbibed, when a boy of twelve, my notions of the tariff; up toward the head of Beeswax creek, William Johnson, the father of a group of beautiful and refined daughters, who to the regret of everybody, died young; later Judge Tarrant. On Bullace creek, running into the river a little higher up, Henry Brasher, the ancestor of the esteemed men of the name still or lately among us; David Owen, a man well read up in Revolutionary and political history, once sent to the legislature; James Brasher, who in old age lived very humbly, making split-botton chairs for a support, a Methodist preacher, whom I first heard read Greek from the gospel of John, and who frequently said from the pulpit, "If you believe my word the original says" so and so. He was very emotional, and I think able, though a voice palsied by age, impaired the interest with which otherwise he would have been heard. Then came, above Yellowleaf creek, Rev. J. M. Scott, a man of wealth and very exemplary character, who lived to be a hundred years old; William Kidd, a man of excellent character, whose sons, Willis, Rev. William W. and John M., were of similar note; still higher up, near Harpersville, John Kidd. These brothers, William Sr., and John, were prominent, the former in the Baptist church, Big Spring, later removed to Harpersville, the latter, in the Methodist church at Harpersville. At this place annual camp meetings were held through the thirties, where many encamping in cabins and tents dispensed a wonderful hospitality to all who, men and beasts, chose to resort thither. John Kidd, a man of large means, was the leading spirit. In a noble grove of great old aboriginal oaks, a vast board arbor was erected, under which a thousand people often gathered to hear the gospel; great revivals took place, and many united with the church. The services were often protracted through the whole night, making the midnight air vocal with shouts and cries of penitence. Dr. John Singleton, father of the late Dr. William R. Singleton, so noted as a model man, was the leading physician for both communities. The Harpers, after whom the village was named, were numerous. Higher up the valley still, ultimately on Spring Creek, settled James V. McGraw, who had been the first merchant at Harpersville. He was a very worthy citizen, of great enterprise, and became a large planter as well as successful merchant. Still higher up, on Kelley's creek, the northern boundary of the county, was John Martin, father of the widely-known and greatly esteemed T. J. Martin, merchant, planter and land owner. Mr. Samuel Wallace, coming later into the country, and settling on and around the famous sixteenth section, just below the Big Spring, must not be unnoticed. He was a man of wealth, like two other esteemed citizens, parent of a number of remarkable daughters, and of Dr. Robert Wallace, a marvel of amiability, as also of the much esteemed Captain W. W. Wallace. This catalogue must here end, no doubt to the great relief of the printer. If I had the skill of Homer, who made poetry out of a catalogue of the Grecian ships with which Troy was beleaguered, I might protract the list, and mention many others equally worthy, unknown however to the writer. The Harpersville community was noted for intelligence, schools, and a high degree of culture, for those days. The first temperance society had its nucleus in that community. Having become a member at ten years of age, I attended a meeting of the society May 6th, 1830, and listened to an eloquent address by Mr. Jasper Kidd, that thrilled me with its fervor. The gifted author was just out of Lagrange college, a man whose fine person and voice, would have been attractive without his eloquence. A cousin of his, named Hall, a blind man, of superior talents, interested us very much with repeated remarks. The society was soon dissolved, the pledge being conditioned on the pleasure of the party taking it.

GOOD TIMES RETURNING.

From Anniston Hot-Blast.

There is no better evidence that good times are coming back again than the fact that within the past two weeks quite a number of the leading manufacturing firms of the country have voluntarily increased the wages of the hundreds and thousands of men employed by them. In many instances the increase fully covers the reductions made prior to the passage of the Wilson tariff bill, when the republicans were loudest in attributing the financial panic and general business depression to the democratic policy of tariff reform. The following is a list of the manufacturing firms which have advanced the wages of their employes, taken from a report published by the New York Times:

H. C. Frick & Co, the leading producers of coke in the Western Pennsylvania district, from which the iron manufacturers of the Pittsburg and Eastern Ohio districts are supplied, an increase of 15 per cent. followed by an increase of 16 per cent. for the employes of Frick & Co.'s foremost competitor. These changes practically cause a similar increase throughout the district, and effect the earnings of the thousands of men employed there.

Moses T. Stevens & Sons, manufacturers of woolens at three places in New Hampshire; an increase of 15 per cent. being a restoration of the rates paid before the reduction last year. The output of this firm is said to be larger than that of any other in the industry.

Thomas Dolan & Co., manufacturers of woolens in Philadelphia; an increase of 25 per cent. to weavers. Mr. Dolan is the president of the (high tariff) Manufacturer's Club. It is reported that other manufactures of woolens in Philadelphia were awaiting the action of Dolan & Co., and will now make similar increases in their mills.

Globe Iron Works, Cleveland, Ohio; increase of 10 per cent., being a restoration of the rate paid before the reduction of 10 per cent. one year ago.

Wholfender, Shore & Co., mills at Cardington, near Chester, Penn., increase of 5 per cent., or half of the reduction made some time ago. It is expected that the other half will soon be restored.

Washington Mills, Lawrence, Mass., increase announced yesterday. Between 3,000 and 4,000 persons employed.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter published last week the following statement, "which had been made by the representatives of one of the leading commission house:" Our mills have returned all but 10 per cent. of the reduction in wages during the last two years, and are now considering the advisability of making a further advance of 10 per cent.

The tariff was revised seven months ago, and at that time the republican press and politicians predicted that owing to democratic tariff tinkering and the blow which the Wilson bill had dealt the industry of the country wages would never again be as high as they were in 1892, when the republican party was in power and the McKinley bill in full operation. They declared that free wool would result in all the manufacturers of woolens closing the doors of their mills and throwing thousands of men out of employment, and yet within the brief space of seven months we are told that the woolen industry is in such a prosperous condition and that the output is so large a majority of the manufacturers have, of their own accord, increased the wages of their men to the old rate and others intend to make the advance at an early day.

The country is beginning to realize that the reduction of the tariff duties was a benefit instead of an injury to all lines of industry, and as soon as the Wilson bill has been in operation long enough to enable the people to fully appreciate its beneficial effects they will manifest their approval of the democratic tariff policy when they go to the polls to vote in 1896.

"When the Democratic Party Will Die," an appropriate piece published in the last issue of The Chronicle, was the best thing of the kind we have seen in some time and we have heard many comments on it, and of course these things can never happen, therefore the democratic party will live "two forevers."

BUTCH.

Those who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison, of Bolan, Worth Co., Iowa, who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Ft. Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me. he procured a bottle of it and it cured them up in a week. 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we've been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Parker & Armstrong, druggists.

Neuralgia

ATTACKS THE EYES

Makes THE LIGHT Unbearable.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY USING

Ayer's Pills

"My husband was subject to severe attacks of neuralgia which caused him great pain and suffering. The pains were principally about his eyes, and he often had to remain in a darkened room, not being able to stand the light. Ayer's Pills being recommended, he tried them, using one before each meal. They very soon afforded relief, followed by permanent cure. I am a strong believer in the efficacy of Ayer's Pills, and would not be without them for ten times their cost."—Mrs. M. E. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

The warm rains are booming vegetation.

Ye editor was at Birmingham and East Lake Tuesday.

J. L. Peters transacted business Monday in Talladega.

Miss Emma Wilson was a guest of Shelby friends Sunday.

Judge John S. Leeper is on a visit to relatives in Birmingham.

Rev. T. P. Roberts, of Sylacauga, is on a visit to his daughters here.

A. B. Milner returned Tuesday from a visit of several days to relatives in Leeds.

Wm. R. A. Milner, our clever county clerk, spent a few hours in Birmingham Tuesday.

Miss Lutie Blevins, of Calera, is a guest of her cousin, Mrs. J. H. Newton, this week.

Miss Mamie Allen, of Birmingham, is spending this week with her sister, Mrs. Henry Wilson.

Misses Belle Barnett and Minnie Hubbard spent Thursday and Friday with Shelby friends.

Mrs. Emma Roper, with Myra and Chester Browne, visited Montevallo Friday and Saturday.

Rev. W. I. Sinnott returned Monday from Hartselle, and reports a splendid meeting of Presbytery.

I. D. Mason, J. R. White and Miss Patty Mason attended quarterly meeting at Shelby, Saturday.

We are glad to learn that Henry Wilson is now steadily improving, and we hope soon to see him out again.

Mrs. C. J. Christian, who has been spending sometime with her father, has gone to Bessemer to reside.

A mare belonging to Hardy Nelson fell into a well Sunday afternoon, and it is thought was seriously injured.

A terrible storm of wind and rain accompanied by hail passed over this place about 5 o'clock Tuesday evening.

The many friends of Miss Kate Looney will regret to hear of her illness, and hope for her speedy recovery.

W. G. Parker was confined to his room several days last week with a large and very painful carbuncle on his neck.

Mrs. J. W. Johnston was called by telegram to New Orleans, Monday. Her sister, Mrs. W. S. Nelson, is quite ill in that city.

The friends of Dr. Teague wish to give him a good pounding on Friday night April 19th. All are cordially invited to participate.

Misses Hellen Oliver and Naldo Christian, two of Shelby's bright young ladies, graced our city with their presence Friday.

H. H. Parker left last Friday for Whitewright, Texas, and expects to remain several months. Our best wishes for success go with him.

Died, near Pelham, on Sunday afternoon of pneumonia, Mrs. Adalaide Roach. She leaves a husband and seven children. We sympathize deeply with the bereaved ones.

We unintentionally omitted last week to make mention of a new paper in our county, the Montevallo News, H. C. & W. B. Reynolds proprietors. We wish for it abundant success.

Quite an excitement was caused Tuesday morning by the cry of fire. A defective flue in the kitchen of the residence of Mrs. Laura Armstrong was the cause. No damage was done.

We call the attention of our readers to the change of "ad" of the Sylacauga Racket Store. If you want to buy good goods cheap don't fail to patronize the Racket Store.

H. E. Reynolds left yesterday afternoon for Blocton, where he will engage in the newspaper business. We regret his departure, but hope that he may have more success than usually falls to the lot of county publishers.

Pelham and vicinity was visited Tuesday afternoon by a fearful hail storm, which must have almost completely destroyed the fruit crop. The hail stones were as large as marbles and completely covered the ground.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Nothing affords a newspaper man more pleasure than to commend real merit, more especially when it is richly deserved. Everybody knows and admires Tom Caldwell—"our Tom." He is a Columbiana boy, and we are all proud of him. Tuesday, while in Birmingham, we called on him at his office, and we found him, as usual, up to his ears in work, but with time plenty to be polite and to greet us with a cordial welcome. Two or three years ago he formed a partnership with J. A. Hood, a practical machinist, and established a machine and foundry plant. By close attention to business, with rigid economy, and following the "pay as you go" plan, they have added constantly new and improved machinery until today they have a magnificently equipped plant, and a large and ever increasing patronage. But it is useless to say more. We all know Tom. If you need any work in his line, give him your order. His "ad" will be found in our columns.

Take Notice.

I have now completed my two regular rounds for assessing the taxes of Shelby county for the year 1895. Please turn in your assessments to the different deputies in your respective beats, and thereby save the ten per cent penalty.

The Columbiana Literary Society.

Our Society met persuant to adjournment on Friday evening, April 12th, at the residence of Mr. E. B. Nelson. A "Washington" program had been arranged for the evening, and opening with that patriotic song, "America," and following with the well prepared papers on the life of Washington, the exercises proved quite interesting as well as instructive. Another excellent feature of the program was the monthly oration by E. B. Paul.

On Friday evening next, April 19th, at the residence of Mr. J. W. Johnston, a public entertainment will be given for the benefit of the school fund, the program as arranged for the evening appearing elsewhere in these columns. In the Spring

Every one should pay attention to the condition of his health. Nearly every person needs a good spring medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by disease.

will purify, vitalize and enrich the blood, create an appetite, and enable the body easily and safely to meet the coming changes in temperature. It possesses precisely those elements of support and assistance which the body at this season craves. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the "ideal spring medicine" and the Great Blood Purifier.

Health Broken Down

From any cause, finds a corrective and health-restorative in Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier:

Hood's Sarsaparilla Makes Rich Red Blood

"I had a severe attack of rheumatic fever which left me in bad condition, weak and with kidney troubles and headache. I was much alarmed and knew my condition must be improved or I would never get well. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and it did me a great deal of good. My general health is much improved, and the headaches, which formerly lasted three weeks at a time, never trouble me. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a good medicine and I highly recommend it." ELLA C. ELLIS, Roxbury, Vermont.

Her Own Private Notions on the Subject of "Women Votin"—"Let the Best Man in the Family Do the Votin for the Concern."

[Copyright 1895.]

"From all I can see and hear in passin back and forth it looks likee is a right smart stir and confusionment goin on this country about women votin," says Aunt Nancy Newton one night after supper as she knocked the ashes out of her pipe and laid it up on the window sill. "The votin fever aint broke out as yet amongst the female generation in the Panther Creek regions, but if the thing keeps on spreadin at the present lick I reckon we will feel a tech of it by-and-by. As for me, 'I can't exactly say that I would love to vote, but if they was to go ahead and fix up the machinery so as I would have to vote I'll lay I wouldn't make as big a mess of it as some of the men folks I know."

Women Who Ought to Vote.

"The more I think about that votin business the more I git myself all muddled and mixed up with it," the dear, delightful old soul went on, and there was a look of great botheration on her kind and wrinkly face. "Now it looks to me like a woman that is free, white and full grown ought to do most anything in reason that she wants to do. But I don't believe the common run of women in this country ought to vote jest simply because I know they don't want to vote. From the way I look at the thing, this country has got as many voters as she needs right now, and maybe some to spare. Whereas, it seems to me like as women commence to vote men ought to quit. Naturally of course there ought to, at any rates, be one voter in every family, and if you could only but manage so as to make the voter either a man or a woman, owin to the general circumfluence of the surroundins, my notion is that you would then be wobblin around powerful clost to the bull's eye.

"Now there is the Strickland family —Dunk Strickland and his folks. In that case it would be plum right and proper for Dunk's wife to do the votin for the concern. For why? Jest simply because she is the mainest man in the family to start with. Dunk, you understand, never was very many at anything. He wouldn't quit drinkin whisky till Mises Strickland lit in and broke him, which I reckon you remember how she took and weaned him off from the bottle. She tried everything else till she saw it want no use, and then finally at last she went in kersnooks with him. When Dunk went to town she went with him. If Dunk nibbled at the bottle she would nibble too. When Dunk got drunk she got drunk with him, and if Dunk got mad and flew up and cussed out creation she would git mad and fly up and follow suit, you understand. When they got home if Dunk pitched in and broke up the dishes she took the chop axe and sailed out and cut down the young orchard, and there they had it—up and down and over and under till it was a plum scandalation on the settlement. But she stuck to him and stayed with him and went all the gates that he could go till by-and-by he pot sick and tired and took out and quit. It went mighty hard with Mises Strickland, but she had went in proposely to wean Dunk, you understand, and when she weaned him she weaned him right.

"It is true Dunk Strickland don't drink whisky now—cause he dasseet do it—but yet still he aint worth his room in this world nor in the future hereafter. He is too mortal lazy to eat enough when he is hongry, and the whole kit and bilin of them would of been in the Poor House before now if he didn't have sich a monstrous peart and stirrin woman for a wife. As it is, she tends to the business and runs the machinery for the concern, and she ought to do the votin likewise if she wants to. I can't say that it would suit her to vote, but I do say if in case it would she ought to have her way about it."

Let the Best Man Vote.

"And then there is Toney Ashcraft which married Mary Ann Stringer—I think it would be nothin but right and proper for the woman to do the votin for that concern. You are bound to remember Mary Ann, because you went to school with her over at the Cross Roads, and she was a bustin big gal then—big enough to knock a cow down and milk her before she could git up. Well, she has been growin reglar and constant all the time, whilst Toney, as you know, never was much bigger than a minnit, and if he keeps on swinkin I reckon he will jest naturally dry up and blow off some of these days. Mary Ann could pick him up by the nap of his neck and the seat of his breeches and throw him over the garden palins, or take him down and spank him like he was a baby. And you wouldn't have to lay around in the settlement very long in orderment to find out that Mary Ann is general boss over there at the Ashcraft place. All she has got to do is to step out and make a cross mark and spit in it, and Toney he comes to taw. He dassent do anything else.

"Mind you now, I aint tryin to throw no blame onto Mary Ann. Toney aint fitten for nothin in the green world but to loafer around the house and chop a little wood and tote water and rope off the calves and string beans, and the like of that. If Mary Ann didn't furnish the muscle as well as the brains the whole concern would soon go down to rack and povery and ruination. It is nothin but natural and right for Mary Ann to take the lead and be the boss. It has so come to pass in the general run of things that she is jest naturally the best man on the place, and you can't blame her for that. Neither could you blame her if she was to pitch in and do the family, and I would ruther like to see the thing fixed up so she could likewise also tend to that branch of the business."

"She Aint Gone Nowhere."

"It raley seems to me like anybody that knows the widder Bartley will have to own up to it that there is one woman which ought to vote. Now the widder, you understand, she aint no widder in weeds by a whole lot. It didn't take death and the graveyard to make out a case of divorcement between her and Steven Bartley. She jest simply got to be about three times too many for poor Steven, and so finally at last he packed up a few duds and moved his washin off somewheres out west. Since that time the widder has been runnin the place accordin to the way it suits her best. And the men folks of the settlement have now give it up that she is a stavin good farmer, too. She don't plow and she don't split rails, but she does most anything else that comes to hand, and I reckon no doubts she could do that in case of a pushency. She can drive a pair of mules or ride a horse along with the best man in the country. She uses a side saddle like other women, but I have my doubts if she would do that only Steven bought the saddle for her before he had to change his base. As I was comin up here the other day I met the widder way over there in Murder Creek swamp on her return back from the flat woods, where she had been lookin after some stray cattle. She was ridin of a big ball-faced sorrel horse, with a whip in one hand and a spur on one foot, and she had the old horse wevin along at a two forty lick.

"The men folks tell me—which I reckon they ought to know—that the widder can now hold her hand with the best of them when it comes to cussin and drinkin whisky. No longer than yistiddy Andy Lucas told me of how he met the widder along the big road the last time she went to town and she pulled a pint bottle on him as natural as you or Blev Scroggins would of done it. So I am plum willin to leave it with you, Rufus, if the widder aint fitten to be a voter. Whensomever it comes to that pass where a woman has got to do the farmin and the cussin and the drinkin for a family it seems to me like she mought as well go on and do the votin.

"And what is moreover, the widder would love to vote. I know she would cause I have heard her say if she was only a man she could beat the livin socks off of Gus Crittenden any day in a race for Congress. It is a pity the widder want a man to start with. I maybe mought be wrong, but it is my own private notion that the good Lord aimed to make a man out of her when He mixed up the materials, but owin to a slippunce in the makin she come forth in the general shape of a woman.

"But whilst I hold to the opinions that some women ought to vote, understand it aint because I think the country needs them in her politics, but because it would look more natural and right. My own notion is that if the men folks can't save the country—which I sometimes doubt right serious—then she is a gone goslin anyhow."

And where is my Aunt Nancy Newton at this present time. She aint gone nowhere.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—The Japanese mikado is a man of much energy and endurance, in spite of the fact that he is a great cigarette smoker. He is fond of outdoor sports, and has warmly encouraged the introduction of football into Japan. He is a hunter and fisherman, and is quite a good shot with a rifle. His devotion to lawn tennis is marked, and he wields a very clever racquet.

—The late Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes left an estate appraised at $72,117.32. The personal estate is estimated at $67,117.32; the real at $5,000. A copyright owned by the deceased is put in as of an unknown value. The personal property consists principally of stocks and bonds. The value of the books in the library and reception-rooms of the residence is fixed at $804.50.

—Kate Field says she thinks that Worth made for her the only dress that he ever made of American material. She took him a piece of American satin for the purpose and at first he refused point-blank to touch it. "The manufacturers at Lyons would never forgive me," he said. "They would accuse me of treachery." But eventually Miss Field's persuasion prevailed.

—Oscar Wilde is a walking epigram factory. When an idea comes into his head that seems available as a disguise for truth he writes it down at once. It doesn't matter whether he is at a stately dinner party or in conversation at a club. His pad and pencil are always with him, and the pockets of his clothes are never free from slips of paper containing startling paradoxes clothed in crisp language.

—That nursery tale which has charmed generations of children and their elders, known as "Blue Beard," was written by a French author. The original of the character of Blue Beard was a marshal of France, who lived in a Brittany, and who was charged with murdering several wives and over one hundred children. Being convicted of sorcery, he was burned. A singular peculiarity of his hair and beard was its inky glossiness, which in a certain light appeared of an indigo tinge, and so won him the appellation which has rendered him immortal.

—A story of Rochefort is revived on the occasion of his return from exile. When Victor Hugo was in exile in Brussels he asked Rochefort to stand godfather to his son Charles. Rochefort accepted, and in looking for a suitable present saw in a curiosity shop window a silver table ornament which attracted him and which he bought, though the price was 35,000 francs. When after 1870 Rochefort was sent to New Caledonia and his property confiscated, Victor Hugo sold the ornament for the benefit of Rochefort's family. It turned out that it was the work of Benvenuto Cellini, and it brought in 200,000 francs.

SHERIFF WILKINS FREED.

Years of Slavery and How He Escaped—Health Is Improving—Has Gained Fifteen Pounds in Weight—Talks About His Deliverer Daily.

URBANA, Ohio, April 16, 1895.—(Special).—This town is in quite a boil of excitement since the facts about the improved physical condition of many of our leading citizens became known. Anderson & Cramer, the big wholesale and retail druggists, were called on and frankly admitted that they were the first to start the good work, as Mr. Anderson termed it. "Yes, we introduced No-To-Bac into this town about three years ago. The demand at the start was very light, the folks had no faith in it, but we sold to a few people, and to our great astonishment every one reported a cure. Since that time we have sold hundreds of boxes, and every one under a guarantee to cure or refund the money, and strange as it may seem, we have never had a call to refund money. This is indeed a great record of merit, and it is because of this merit that the big sale has resulted. As every cure brings in at least twenty-five customers, we know that No-To-Bac can be relied upon in every respect, and No-To-Bac not only relieves the nervous irritation and makes the use of tobacco entirely unnecessary, but at the same time builds up and fortifies the general physical condition. I just saw two of our prominent merchants pass down the opposite side of the street, they were cured by No-To-Bac a year ago, and they have not used tobacco since and have been greatly improved in health. We have a great many customers, men who are well advanced in years, who have been cured of the tobacco habit by the use of No-To-Bac, and who continue taking it right along for its tonic effects. As a natural invigorator and stimulant we believe there is no preparation in America to equal it."

"You know R. P. Wilkins, our sheriff, don't you?"

"Yes, of course I do."

"Well, you want to interview him."

Mr. Wilkins was called upon, and said: "Yes, November 4th, last I bought my first box of No-To-Bac from Anderson & Cramer. I had little faith, and to my great surprise, after using part of the third box, I was completely cured and did not have the least desire for tobacco. I had been a perfect slave to tobacco for over twenty-five years; I smoked from twelve to fifteen cigars a day; to-day I feel better, I sleep better, think better, and I have gained fifteen pounds in weight, and there is not a day passes that I do not recommend No-To-Bac to many of the tobacco users who I know are destroying their lives and vitality by the use of the weed."

Further investigation revealed the fact that there are 500 people living in this town and the surrounding country who have been cured by No-To-Bac. If the cures go on at this rate it will not be very long before the tobacco industry is going to be seriously affected. The sale of No-To-Bac has been phenomenal.

The public should be warned, however, against the purchase of any of the many imitations on the market, as the success of No-To-Bac has brought forth a host of counterfeiters and imitators. The genuine No-To-Bac is sold under a guarantee to cure by all druggists, and every tablet has the word No-To-Bac plainly stamped thereon, and in the purchase of the genuine article you run no physical or financial risk.

"WHAT is the use of continually worrying about your health?" said the censorious citizen. "Life is but a span, anyhow." "I know that," was the reply, "but there are spans and spans. I'm looking for something on the Brooklyn bridge order."—Washington Star.

The Door of Life.

The fear of pain and the dangers of parturition fill many a woman's breast with dismay. There is no reason why childbirth should be fraught with danger and distress. It is a natural function, and should be performed in a natural way without undue suffering. Nature never intended that women should be tortured in this way.

Taken during gestation Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its dangers to both mother and child, by preparing the system for delivery, thereby shortening labor, lessening pain and abbreviating the period of confinement.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

This Means Business.

On the principal lines of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway passenger trains are electric lighted, steam heated and protected by block signals. With these modern appliances, railway traveling at high speeds has reached a degree of safety heretofore unknown and not attainable on roads where they are not in use. Electric lights and steam heat make it possible to dispense with the oil lamp and the car stove. Block signals have reduced the chances for collisions to the minimum by maintaining an absolute interval of space between trains.

WHY CUBA WILL LOSE

Insurrection Leaders Not Capable of Intelligent Action.

INSIDE FACTS FROM THE VERY FIELD.

The Uprising Deplored by the Better Class of Men, Even Though They Were Anxious to be Rid of Spanish Rule—Mismanagement.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, April 16, via Tampa, Fla., April 20.—The staff correspondent of the United Press, J Frank Clark, after remaining in Havana for a week, meeting residents of all shades of opinion, Spaniards, Cubans, Englishmen, Americans, the United States consul, and the governor general, proceeded to Santiago de Cuba, the province where the insurgents have made the most progress, and is able to give the facts in regard to the revolution and the status of affairs on the island of Cuba.

The Censorship of the Press.

In the first place the censorship of the press, telegraph and cable exists only to the extent that matter of an incendiary or seditious nature is suppressed. Cipher dispatches are not allowed unless the key is furnished to the authorities. The newspapers of Havana and other cities publish the news of military movements, engagements, casualties in full, even getting out extras when anything of unusual interest received. They have reporters in the field, and La Caricatura has an artist who follows up the army corps, and exercises much license in illustrating. When it is remembered that the entire island of Cuba is under martial law the freedom of the press is remarkable. The authorities, however, do not comprehend modern sensational journalism and when a special correspondent from the United States attempt to cable his paper a story of the general uprising against Spanish rule, the same is not transmitted.

Progress of the Insurrection.

As to the progress of the insurrection, it has for the last month been practically nil. In the first place no general rising of Cubans has taken place, no provisional government has been formed, no stand against the government has been made, no engagement of sufficient importance to be designated as a battle has occurred. In every department, except the province of Santiago de Cuba, the few men who attempted to rebel were promptly arrested. The plan mapped out by Marti and other enthusiasts in New York was not endorsed by the better class of resident Cubans, without whose financial aid and personal influence no uprising in Cuba can succeed.

Where the Cuban Cause Failed.

Had the movement been supported by the influential Cubans and properly led, some show of success might have been looked for. The leaders are not capable of intelligent or systematic handling of men, many of them have been outlaws and bandits for years. Others are negroes or half-bloods. Some bands are entirely made up of colored men and the difficulty in some respects resemble a race war. Such are the people for whom more or less sympathy in the United States has been aroused. False reports of battles fought and victories won have been manufactured in the cigar factories of Tampa and Key West. As a matter of fact no city and no town has been taken and no battle of of any importance fought. When the signal for a general rising was given nearly two months ago the garrison at Santiago de Cuba numbered 100 men.

The insurrection is deplored by the better class of Cubans as well as all residents interested in mercantile or producing operations.

VOLUME OF TRADE INCREASES.

General Trade Conditions in the South Not Materially Improved.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Bradstreet's says:

The volume of general trade has maintained the previous week's proportions, and at some points shows noteworthy increases as compared with the total a year ago. The reaction in petroleum prices appears to have been overcome, and the tendency is again upward, based on a drop in stocks from about 11,000,000 barrels of Pennsylvania oil in January 1894, to less than 3,000,000 barrels of merchantilable oil. So marked and rapid has been the appreciation price of petrolium that speculation in it has been excited. Further advances in quotations are noted also for wheat, on improved demand for export; cotton, on a widened consumption, present and prospective; print cloths and other cotton goods, because of higher raw cotton. General trade conditions at the south are no better and in some respects less satisfactory. Improvements in demand is not announced at any point. In Texas high winds and lack of rain have hurt crop prospects and farmers in some localities have not planted yet.

Two of the men, Patrick Harvey and Henry Blake, were instantly killed and seven others injured, two of them, John Conly and J. J. Hand, fatally.

Dun's Report on Failures.

NEW YORK, April 20.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their review of trade say: Failures for the first eleven days of April amounted to $5,413,765, of which $1,424,338 were of manufacturing concerns. THE OSCAR WILDE CASE AGAIN.

Remarkable Testimony Regarding Wilde's Friend, Young Alfred Taylor.

LONDON, April 20.—Oscar Wilde and his friend Alfred Taylor were arraigned in the Bow street police court at noon yesterday for further examination. Wilde looked greatly fatigued and really ill. His hair was ruffled and his general appearance indicated carelessness.

Charles Parker was called to the stand and testified that Taylor upon one occasion had told him that he had gone through the marriage ceremony with young Mavor, he (Taylor) wearing woman's clothes. After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast, followed by an orgie, the disgusting details of which were fully recounted.

A detective testified that he had searched the room occupied by Taylor in Chapel street where he found checks payable to Mavor and telegrams from Wilde to Taylor arranging and cancelling meetings. Other witnesses were called to the stand and gave similar damaging testimony.

At the conclusion of the examination Wilde and Taylor were fully committed for trial in the central criminal court. Old Baily. Application was made for bail, but it was refused. Wilde in reply to the question whether he had anything to say, said: "Not at present."

BELLIGERANCY OF CUBANS.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—A bill recognizing the Belligerancy of the Cuban revolutionists has been prepared in this city and will be introduced in congress when that body convenes in December next. It was drafted at the suggestion of certain representatives and senators who are in sympathy with the efforts of the Cubans to throw off the yoke of Spain and these gentlemen will use their influence to pass it through both houses. Such action on the part of the United States would of course be of great service to the revolutionists. It would result in the free shipment of arms and men to the island in support of the insurgents cause and would give them the moral and material support which they so greatly desire.

Spanish officials say that but for the hope that the United States may recognize Cuban belligerancy, the revolution would collapse within thirty days. Mr. Marti, in pursuance to the programme already outlined, will be elected president of the Cuban provisional government, which it is proposed to establish at an early day.

DETAILS OF THE PEACE TREATY

Further Features of the Agreement That Have Not Been Published.

LONDON, April 20.—The Central News dispatch from Tokio gives additional details of the treaty of peace, the principal features of which have already been published. The treaty secures to Japan entire freedom in the importation into China of steam engines and machinery for manufactures and the same privileges are accorded to Japan in the matter of importing goods into China. The latter also grants to Japan extra territorial rights wherein the matters of tariff and the dispensation of justice Japan reserves every privilege. The indemnity is payable in seven yearly instalments at five per cent. Payment of the obligation within three years cancels the interest. In addition to these provisions China engages not to punish prisoners nor to inflict punishment upon Chinese who may have furnished supplies to the Japanese army and navy. China also binds herself to return Japanese prisoners unconditionally. The exchange of ratifications of the treaty will take place at Chee Foo not later than May 8th.

THE WOMAN IN THE CASE.

Who It Was That Planned and Devised the Stamp Counterfeit.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Charles O. Jones the newspaper artist has been positively identified as the mysterious George Morrison, dealer in counterfeit stamps. M. D. Whitman, agent of the American Express company at Elgin, Ills., was shown the prisoner and identified him as the man who shipped from that point $225 worth of stamps to W. L. Thompson, editor of Heart and Hand. The woman now under arrest in Hamilton, Ont., known as Mrs. M. T. Mack, is Tinsey McMillan, of Chicago. She is the principal in the stamp forgeries, and her only associate is Jones.

The Event in the Turf World.

CHICAGO, April 20.—The date of the National Derby, to be run at the Harlem track, was definitely settled yesterday, when the Chicago fair grounds association officials agreed upon Saturday, June 22, as the best time. That is the date on which the American Derby would have been decided if that event had not been declared off, and it is thought to be the best date to secure a large list of starters from the east.

Will Swell the Treasury Receipts.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—It was authoritively stated at the treasury department yesterday that the reports of collectors so far received show that the amount of income tax receipts no doubt will reach the estimate made before the decision of the supreme court was rendered. This is interpreted to mean about $15,000,000.

BOMBS IN THE MAILS

YOUNG MAN RECEIVES THE MACHINE.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 20.—An infernal machine of the worst type came in the mail yesterday to William Marquet, a young tailor's apprentice. A string was employed to set off its deadly contents. By chance the string was insecurely fastened to the sliding lid of the box and coming loose only a big fright was produced. The box, which was marked "dominoes," was charged with enough loose dynamite to destroy a big building, while a dynamite cartridge was buried therein. A fuse and match head led up to the cartridge, against the match rested a wooden block, and this was to be driven against the match by a small steel trigger held in its place by a piece of wood also connected by a string to the sliding lid. The opening of the cover was to light the match. The postoffice inspectors of the government and the local detectives are working on the case. Suspicion rests on a well known electric railway conductor whose alleged intimacy with a very pretty young lady of excellent family, the boy had discovered. It is thought to guard his guilty secret he devised this means of putting the boy out of the way. The box was postmarked Ridgedale, which is a suburb reached by the car line on which the conductor runs. Investigation may develop an immense social sensation.

HOLIDAYS TO POSTMASTERS.

Laws Regarding Same Amended by the Postmaster General.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The postmaster general has amended the postal laws and regulations regarding holidays. The amendment states the postmasters may observe as holidays January 1, February 22, May 30, July 4, the first Monday in September known as labor day, December 25th, and such other days as the president of the United States and governors of their respective states may designate as fast or thanksgiving days or proclaim specially as holidays. On other occasions their offices can be closed only after permission obtained therefor from the department, to be obtained through the first assistant postmaster general. Upon holidays postoffices must be opened sufficiently to meet the public convenience. Mails must he made up and despatched as on other days. When a legal holiday falls upon a Sunday the following Monday may be observed, unless specially provided for by state authority.

COAL CREEK AGAIN QUIET.

Frank Hendricks Yet Alive—The Safety of Morgan Entertained.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., April 20.—All is quiet at Coal Creek. The miners still remain out of the Royal mines, but there has been no further disturbance and none is expected. The report sent out that Frank Hendricks, one of the men shot, had died, was premature. There is little doubt but that his wounds will prove fatal, but he is yet alive. Morgan, who was pursued by indignant miners, has not been heard from and no doubt of his safety is entertained. There is no trouble at any of the other mines in the Coal Creek district.

Discharged for Incompetency.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The dock board met at noon yesterday and in secret session voted to discharge four hundred men who have for years been in the employ of the department. This action was the result of a communication from Chief Engineer Green of the board dated February 26. He stated that the men whose names appear on a list that he submitted were incompetent and were a constant drain on the finances of the department.

REGARDING RANSOM'S HEALTH.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The state department at last advices had only the one dispatch from Secretary Butler soon after Minister Ransom's arrival, which stated that he was fatigued with the long trip but would shortly be at his post. Such friends af the minister as have seen the subjoined item from the local columns of the Kansas City Star of the 15, which reached here today are not in the least uneasy. They say that ex-Governor Crittenden certainly took three or four days at least on the trip and that he may have stopped on the way several days. He arrived there on the 11th inst. The Star says:

"T. T. Crittenden, consul general to Mexico, arrived in the city yesterday morning from the City of Mexico. Mr. Crittenden says the city has been crowded all the winter with visitors from the United States."

SOLDIERS' COLONY IN GEORGIA.

Contract Closed, and Twelve Thousand of Them Will Locate in the Fall.

ATLANTA, April 20. — The soldiers' colony company of which P. H. Fitzgerald, of Indianapolis, is at the head, yesterday closed a bargain with Governor Northern, of Georgia, and the Immigration bureau for a solid tract of one hundred thousand acres located in South Georgia. While the originators of this colony are federal veterans, any moral person may obtain a home in the colony upon equal terms. Twelve thousand persons will be located this fall, beginning in September. This is the largest colonization scheme of the age and has been gotten up on the share plan during the last few years. Having secured all the needed money they have not only selected a site, but have bought the land outright. The papers of Georgia print long complimentary editorials on Mr. Fitzgerald's selection of a site in this state and assure his friends of a warm reception.

COSTING MARVIN A FORTUNE.

The Bankers Scrape in Jacksonville Was no Cheap Affair.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 20.—The trouble John L. Marvin, president of the Merchants National bank, had with City Attorney Barrs last Monday evening is costing him dear. Thursday Banker Marvin was arraigned in the municipal court on a charge of carrying concealed weapons and fined $500 by Judge Cromwell Gibbons. Yesterday he was arrested in the same court on the charge of discharging fire-arms in the city limits and on this charge Judge Gibbons also fined him $500, making a total of $1,000, with costs to be added. Marvin is yet to be tried on the more serious charge of shooting at Barrs with intent to kill. Judge Gibbons, who imposed the fines on Marvin, is an adherent of the Barrs faction of the democratic party. Marvin's attorney gave notice of appeal.

Politics in the Old North State.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 20.—A prominent democrat who was here today said many populists were in a mind to leave that party and that some were taking that step. He said further that the way to deal with them, in bringing them back to the democratic ranks, was not by harsh words, but by kind argument, and showing them they had made a mistake. The populists got their recruits from the democrats and the republicans calculate on getting theirs from the populists. This the democrats must counteract.

SCOTTSBORO, Ala., April 16.—The much sought for remains of W. D. Cunningham, whom Joel Dennis, his partner in business, confesses to have killed and thrown in the Tennessee river last December, south of this place, in Jackson county, has at last been found by a steamboat crew near Florence in the river hanging on a bush. The body was very much decomposed, but papers found in his pockets fully establish his identity.

Dennis is now in jail for murdering Cunningham and will now be indicted and tried for the crime., action by the grand jury at a recent term of court having been postponed on account of there being no proof against Dennis, except his own confession, which would be inadmissable without proof of the corpus delicti. Cunningham was a well known young man, who was raised near this place, and had been engaged in the saloon business at McGinnts' Ferry for some time before his sudden dissappearance last December.

HEARING ON THE INCOME TAX.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—There seems to be no chance for a rehearing in the income tax case this term, although it is reported from Nashville, Tenn., that Justice Jackson is anxious to come to Washington if the court grants a rehearing before it adjourns next month. While the justice himself may think he is able to make the journey, private advices from his home at Nashville state that his doctors would not listen to his coming north before next October.

The opinion in the supreme court circles is the court could not possibly grant a rehearing this term, because it is at present so busy with cases that are set for hearing that they would not be able to reach the income tax and give it sufficient time before the regular adjournment about the middle of May.

It is understood that the chief justice has informed Justice Jackson of the situation, and it is accepted here that there will not be a full bench before the fall term.

SENATOR CHILDS MAY RESIGN.

All the people of Long Island want the school and Senator Childs is so intensely interested in the bill that his friends say he even thinks of resigning if a republican governor will not stand by him. He has had two conferences with Governor Morton upon the subject.

Senator Gorman For National Chairman.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—An evening paper says Senator Murphy of New York, is of the opinion that Senator Gorman should be chosen chairman of the next national committee, adding: "Arthur P. Will be Submitted to the People.

The Goulds May Go to Court.

DEATH BY HIS HANDS

A Prominent Savannah Business Man Suicides in New York.

DEITSCH DESPONDENT BY A FAILURE.

NEW YORK, April 20.—Morris Deitsch, the southern manager at Savannah, Ga., of the firm of Bennett, Sloan & Co., tea importers, at No. 100 Hudson street, this city, committed suicide during Thursday night at the Grand Union Hotel, 42nd street and Park avenue, by shooting himself in the head with a revolver.

Mr. Deitsch arrived at the hotel Wednesday and told the clerk that he wanted one of the best rooms in the house. He was assigned No. 88 on the second floor. He was seen about the hotel at various times until 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Yesterday morning a chambermaid knocked at the door and receiving no answer notified the officers. Yesterday afternoon she went to Deitsch's room again and was still unable to arouse the occupant. A porter of the hotel was sent to the room and the door was broken open.

Mr. Deitsch was found dead seated in a chair, in his night robe, with a bullet wound in his left temple and a 32-calibre revolver lying on the floor at his feet. The blood from the wound had run down over his night robe to the floor, where it formed a crimson pool. Upon the table in front of him were half a dozen telegrams addressed to his friends. The first of them bore this inscription:

"Bennet Sloan & company,
100 Hudson street.

All efforts of mine of no avail. Therefore best to quit for good.

MORRIS DEITSCH."

"All arrangements fail me."

Two other telegrams which were duplicates, were addressed to W. H. Houseman, No. 132 Peary street, Savannah, Ga., and to S. D. Houseman, National Hotel, Washington, D. C.

Business troubles assigned as the cause.

ANOTHER OSCAR WILDE CASE.

Prominent Business Man of Indianapolis Arrested on a Charge Like Unto That.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 20.—A sensation was sprung here yesterday by the arrest of DeWitt D. Nay, 56 years old, well known in the city, and prominently connected with a large business house, on a charge of practicing base crimes. The police for some time have been watching a certain block in the heart of the city, supposing that a gambling room was in operation there. Yesterday morning three officers burst into a room on the upper floor and upon the evidence in sight the arrest was made. The apartment was handsomely furnished and occupied by a colored man. The place, it is now learned, has been frequented by prominent men who met there and indulged in practices that characterized the Oscar Wilde affair. Nay refuses to talk, but the evidence seems convincing against him. Many boys have told revolting tales of their visits to the place. Other arrests will probably follow.

RELIES UPON UNITED STATES.

Matter of the Boundary Dispute Between Venezuela and British Guiana.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The state department has published the diplomatic correspondence exchanged between this government and Venezuela extending over the period between October, 1893, and December 1894, relating to the boundary dispute between Venezuela and British Guiana which, while adding but little to the general knowledge of the subject, indicates the serious turns affairs may take unless an impartial arbitration of the conflicting claims is secured. The account of the negotiations which have taken place between Great Britain and the South American Republic occupies over sixty printed pages. Venezuela makes it clear that she relies wholly upon United States intervention to secure a fair consideration of the matter.

ATTACKED BY AN OUTLAW.

BRISTOL, Tenn., April 20.—While Aaron Hamilton was crossing the mountains in Buchanan county, Va., on his way to Taswell to deposit $3,000 in a bank he was attacked by Bill Jerolds, a noted coutlaw of Pike county, Ky., who fired upon him from ambush. Hamilton returned the fire and put several balls in Jerold's body. The doctors say he will die.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, APRIL 25, 1895.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is marshaling his hosts under the banner of sound money, and will make that the campaign issue of 1896.

MANY farmers pay too little attention to the comforts and pleasures of the wife and children. They give more thought to their stock than they do to their families.

FIVE negroes, two men and three women, were taken from the officers and lynched, in Butler county, on last Saturday night for the murder of a young man named Murphy.

OSCAR WILDE, has been indicted by the London grand jury, and his trial set for next Friday. Poor devil! He has struck the very bottom, and must finish his life an object of world-wide loathing.

DURING 1894 there was imported into the United States 28,325,213 yards of cotton cloth with a value of $3,480,806. Every yard of this could have been profitably manufactured in the South.

THE advantages that Alabama offers to industrial enterprises are becoming better known every day. There is no doubt that there will be great development in this direction in the near future.

THE secretary of agriculture has ferreted out a pretty slick species of unlawful conversion alleged to have been committed by several certain members of congress, who sold to the trade for spot cash the pro rata of agricultural seeds issued to them in trust to be distributed to their constituents.

THE Chicago Times-Herald and Evening Post, which were owned and managed by the late James W. Scott, has been sold to H. H. Kohlsaat, recently proprietor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. The papers will now become republican organs of the McKinley protection order, thus leaving Chicago without a democratic daily.

CONGRESSMAN SIBLEY, who is to be the silver party's presidential figurehead, is a tall and slender man of about forty-two years. His face is beardless and he is said to have the grace of a courtier, though he has been known to forget his manners in striving to be alliterative. Mr. Sibley is a rich farmer and has an interest besides in several manufacturing industries.

THE long-contested gubernatorial election case in Tennessee is ended by the seating of Peter Turney. It is claimed that he was elected by 1,900 majority. We are afraid that the methods used to bring about this result will prove disastrous to the democratic party in that state, as it is the opinion of the better class of democrats that Evans, the republican nominee, was fairly elected, but counted out.

MARSHALL FIELD, the head of the big Chicago dry goods firm, was interviewed on the business situation. He says that business has improved all along the line. "A very marked improvement in our trade has set in," said Mr. Field, "and we have reason to believe that it will continue to improve. The new tariff is all right. Business is better because there is an increased demand for goods reduced in values by new tariff schedules. The manufacturers will not suffer; they have sufficient protection under the new law."

SOME definite idea of the growth of the bicycle business in this country may be gained from the fact that whereas the total number of bicycle manufactories in the United States was but six in 1885, with an output of only 11,000 wheels, and in 1890 but seventeen, with an output of 40,000, at the present time there are 426 factories, which will make an aggregate of nearly or quite half a million machines this year. The increase in the last five years has been nothing short of marvelous, and it is probable that the next five years will see a very great advance upon the present product of these fast multiplying concerns. In the next generation the man who cannot ride a bicycle will be almost as rare as the man who cannot walk.

It's hardly worth one's while to write or talk logic and sense to a man who, because wheat, cotton and silver have gone down, since 1873, concludes the first two mentioned must have fallen, solely because the last mentioned fell. A man built so that he can thus "reason" has lost his logical faculty—if he ever had it. But we want to test this theory of silver causing the decline of all materials of international trade, by the facts of the market. The silveroon tells us that wheat and cotton went down in the period of 1835-47, because the price of silver was high, caused by its scarcity. Well, if that were true, then prices must, mind you must, have fallen in the same ratio that silver rose; but prices of wheat and cotton fell, respectively, 47 and 67 per cent., while silver rose less than 8 per cent. in those thirteen years. Again, we are told that wheat and cotton have fallen, precisely in proportion with the fall in silver, since 1873, the year of the awful "crime" against that helpless metal. Well, the truth is that wheat has fallen plump 75 per cent., from the price of 1873, cotton has fallen 66 per cent., and silver has fallen about 48 per cent. We submit that such a barometer as the silveroons set up is a fraud, which no thinking man will tolerate, until he becomes addled.—Chattanooga Times.

THE ALABAMA EXHIBIT.

The value of an exhibit from Alabama at the Atlanta exposition cannot well be overestimated. From all over the world visitors and interested seekers after information concerning the South will throng that exhibition from the day it opens until it closes. The interest that the last two or three years of friendly advertising has awakened throughout the North and West will culminate in the largest movement South this fall that has ever been known, and this exposition will be the place that will serve as the deciding point for distribution both of capital and of immigration. If Alabama has a creditable exhibit, and in the hands of those who understand the states's advantages, there is no danger but that Alabama will get her full quota of capital and immigration.

There is no time, however, for any delay. Where there are no commercial bodies let any public-spirited citizen take the matter in hand. Call a few friends together, start a soliciting committee and raise all that can be raised for the exposition fund. Every community in the state should be at work, pending the action of the board of managers. The Alabama Commercial association is in good shape to see that the board is an active and efficient one should any of those selected not serve, so there is no reason for delay. Let the work of raising the fund be taken up and report be sent to the secretary and treasurer at once, that the board may be the better prepared to intelligently do their part of the work.—Age-Herald.

LESSON OF THEIR LIVES.

A dispatch from Columbus, Ohio, tells of the death in the penitentiary at that place of Rube Smith, the last surviving member of the famous Burrow's gang of outlaws who terrorized Western Alabama, Mississipi, Arkansas and Texas for years. Smith was serving a life sentence for the part he played in the Buckatunna, Miss., train robbery. His death forcibly recalls the fate of the other members of the gang, which should teach a wholesome lesson to the youth of the land who are too often disposed to look upon such characters as heroes and not infrequently attempt to emulate their deeds of fool-hardy daring.

Rube Burrows himself was hunted for years like a wild beast, and finally shot down while attempting to murder his captor. His brother, Jim, died in the Arkansas penitentiary. Joe Jackson, another member of this gang, with the certainty of a life sentence in the penitentiary, even if he was so fortunate as to escape the gallows, preferred suicide, and leaping from the fourth story veranda of the Mississipi penitentiary at Jackson was crushed to death on the pavement below. Now, Rube Smith, the last survivor, has died behind prison walls, far from home and kindred.

The net sum of the stealings of the entire gang during a period of five years or more is said not to have exceeded $5,000, yet rather than lead the lives of peaceful citizens, willing to earn an honest living, they sacrificed all, even life, for pillage. The outlaw of modern times and, especially the train robber, as recent experiences have shown, has a rough road to travel. The terrible fate of the Burrow's gang is sufficient to blot out all the halo of romance and glamor of heroism popularly supposed to hang over the lives of such desperadoes and to again verify the scriptual injunction that the way of the transgressor is hard.—Birmingham News.

There is a steady decrease in the number of saloons in Savannah, Ga., There were 337 in 1892, 332 in 1893 and this year only 288 have, according to the requirements of the law, registerd in the ordinary's office.

Magnetic electric machines were made in Paris in 1832 and in London 1833.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 5.

1816 1830.—Cahaba valley is separated from Coosa valley on the east by a line of hills and mountains. The two valleys lie parallel to each other, extending nearly north and south. Its general width is two and one-half miles, but broadening at the upper and lower ends of that part of it within the country of Shelby to some five miles. Of the early settlers of the upper end I have no information; in the lower end were Col. Isaac M. Johnson, settling near Pelham; Moses Johnson, "Uncle Mose," as he was familiarly called, who for a long time collected the taxes of the county, north of Montevallo, and William Johnson, on Beeswax creek in Coosa valley, as elsewhere mentioned. The father of these worthy citizens, however, brought them into the country, Abraham Johnson. The history of the family is quite romantic. Abraham Johnson was a Virginian, born in 1756, a soldier in Washington's army, and was with him at the seige and surrender of Yorktown. Removing thence to Tennessee he presently came into Jefferson county, this state, and there opened the first farm ever settled in the county; making a crop there with three boys, while the rest of the family were left in Tennessee; he returned to them leaving two of the boys in Jefferson county among the Indians. They had a joyful meeting with the boys who had staid sometime alone, but were unmolested, safe and sound. The venerable father and grandfather lies buried in the family burial ground near the former home of William Johnson, head of Beeswax creek, now occupied by Mrs. John Johnson. In the same neighborhood with Moses Johnson were the Crosses, Harless, Harkins and the Crowsons, Rev. Moses and Richard. After the Wilson family settling there, was Montevallo at first called Wilson's Hill. The heads of this family were Benjamin and Jesse Wilson, the former father of Dr. John Wilson, so well known as an honest man, who had no patience with shams, pretensions or untrustworthiness. Edmund King was a cotemporary settler, a man of wealth, having a large farm just out of Montevallo, afterwards planting on a large scale on the Alabama river below Selma, in Dallas county. Mr. King was a man of peculiarities, somewhat angular, but withal of substantial worth. A story was told of him having a suit with a mechanic before a justice's court for $50. The mechanic employed a lawyer, but Mr. King argued his own case. It was given in his favor, whereupon he took out $50, and clearing his throat a time or two, as was his wont when a little excited, handed it to his antagonist, saying' "Here, I didn't care for the money but wanted my rights." Daniel Watrous was among these early settlers, an able lawyer, who did a fine practice, farmed somewhat extensively and accumulated money. He had little expense as he was a bachelor. As he grew old he became careless about his practice, turning it over to his pupils, F. W. Bowdon, and especially to John S. Storrs, a clever young lawyer, who, after a successful career, as lawyer and legislator, the successor, we may say in both respects, of Col. Watrous died in the prime of life. Samuel W. Mardis, a singularly gifted lawyer, rose into great reputa- along side of Col. Watrous, often represented the county in the legislature, afterwards, having removed to Talladega county, in the congress of the United States, managing a case or two of great importance in the supreme court of the United States at that period. James M. Nabors was a most worthy representative of the county in early days, both in the lower house and in the senate of the state. His brother, Abe Nabors, to his infinite mortification, being elected tax collector, defaulted for the whole amount of taxes and his securities had it to pay. It was lost in gambling. The honest fellow, however, before many years came back and paid up the whole amount, interest and all. A little below Montevallo, on the French Nabors' place, settled Mr. Sterrett or his widow, the father of the well-known citizens, Judge and Dr. Sterrett. He died and his widow became successively Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Woods. "Aunt Sallie Woods," as we called her in late life, was a remarkable woman, managing her business, complicated by the decease of several husbands with great skill, said to have attracted the attention of Judge Allen so as to terminate in their marriage. She was often criticised, but I always replied none but a superior woman could have raised such a family as David, Alphonso and Major Sterrett; Andrew B. Stevens, a model young man as I knew him in college, Mrs. Dr. Moseley, Mrs. Browne and Mrs. Brooks. Becoming acquainted with her in 1836, when I first went to the university, I was admirably entertained when stopping at her house. Never after college days would she charge me, though frequently stopping with my family, we became close friends. I was told by a man who had been her overseer, that she was a most just and generous proprietor, and remarkable for her liberalities and attention to the poor. Let her, though late, have due credit; such energetic characters are always criticised. I honor those who do something, though the strain of great trials leave scars on the mind and heart that make character less lovely than it might otherwise be.

Of the earlier business men of Montevallo or other communities of the valley I can supply little information. Mr. William Johnson, of another family connection than those mentioned above, afterwards a famous merchant at Selma, told me he sold goods at Montevallo in 1816. There must therefore have been considerable population thereabouts at that date. I saw the place first in 1830. There was then apparantly a business done there quite equal to any period since, except while the Selma and Dalton road stopped at the place. I knew well, a little later, a Mr. Fancher, whose headquarters were there, who peddled all over the county. I presume he came to the place in the early twenties, as I was a little fellow, no little interested in his grooming his own fine span of horses, as he often stopped over night at my father's. I think he located as a merchant finally, giving up the peddling business.

Good schools were maintained, I suppose, from the beginning at Montevallo, as several young men were prepared for the University in the early thirties, some of them for the higher classes—Burwell Boykin, Thos. A. Walker, George D. Shortridge, son of Judge Eli Shortridge, who resided there awhile, F. W. Bowdon, Sr., and perhaps Andrew B. Stevens.

This birdseye view must suffice, perhaps; after all an outline picture of the times may afford as much interest as a detailed account. If many parties equally worthy of notice are omitted let it be attributed to no partialities, but to necessary defect of information or to the currents of rumor over which I have had no control. A paper descriptive of the more numerous if less prominent class of people, and another on the early religious history of the county, I hope will leave me to an accurate description of the physical features, and especially the agricultural possibilities of our territory, the real inducement to writing these sketches.

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.

A withered leaf, a silken thread,
Some grasses frail and sere,
Are lying desolate and dead
On Love's fantastic bier.
But yet a ceaseless song they sing
Of cruel, hopeless pain;
For, in the sweetest thought they bring
I hear the sad refrain:
"It might have been!"

A glove that dropped from fingers fair,
A ring with rubies set,
A little tress of golden hair
With tears of sorrow wet.
Her heart was light, so mine alone
Hath learned to love and grieve;
And so, through life's dull monotone,
The golden tress doth weave—
"It might have been!"

The boat lies idly at my feet,
The sky is blue above,
The sunlit waves make music sweet,
And all is fair but Love;
For in the cup that memory takes
I taste again the lees,
And one long, silent chord awakes
And whispers to the breeze—
"It might have been!"

The fondest love the heart has missed
May come again some day,
Though eyes that wept and lips we've kissed
Have coldly turned away;
But in the love that lives apart
Through waste of weary years,
A voice will haunt the aching heart,
And murmur in its tears—
"It might have been!"
—Montreal Star.

A Besetting Sin.

The writer was once on a time sitting across the street from a chapel of colored people in Jacksonville, Fla., and heard the following unique and original exposition by the preacher of the parable of the rich man and Lazarus:

"An' now, bredren, an specially you sisters, why do ye spose de rich man wanted de water on de tip of his tongue only, and not all ober he hull body? I will tell yer. Mind now, and specially you sisters—because de sins ob de tongue are so much wuss dan all de oder sins ob de body, dat dis tongue burned so much mo' dan de rest ob him, dat he forgot eberything else in its fire. Ah, sisters, tink ob de words dat are running off yo' tongue continually, and look out for de tip ob fire in de nex' world."—Ram's Horn.

Those who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison, of Bolan, Worth Co., Iowa, who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen of Ft. Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine, and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me. he procured a bottle of it and it cured them up in a week. 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Of course a man is expected to take his wife's word, but she should see that he doesn't have to take too many of them.—Exchange.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Joel Falkner transacted business in Birmingham last week.

The weather is fine and the farmers are making good use of it.

Several of our citizens met at the grave yard Saturday and put it in nice order.

J. A. Stewart, who has been working with Mr. Hammett's bridge crew, has returned home and will likely stay awhile.

Mr. Joe Allen, of Griffin, Ga., is visiting the family of his brother, A. B. Allen.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Butler, of Jemison, have returned home after several days visit to relatives here.

Mr. D. Ray, of Cresswell, who has been attending our school has returned home to visit friends.

There will be an all-day singing here on the first Sunday in May conduct by Prof. J. M. Garrett, of Eden, Ala.

Miss Bettie Hunt, of Jemison, returned home Monday accompanied by Mrs. R. E. Cosper who will spend sometime visiting relatives there.

Died, Mr. O'Barr, a few days ago of old age; he had just reached his ninetieth mile post when he died. We extend our sympathies to the bereaved relatives.

Memorial services will be held here Saturday before the second Sunday in May. A program has been arranged for the day. Everybody invited and no one slighted.

We are glad to note the improvement in the condition of our friend A. B. Allen who was stricken with paralysis in last March; he is now able with a little help to get down to his office.

We must say to "Jumbo" that he is very badly mistaken as to Mr. A. C. Wilder's visiting "friends" here for it was a "friend," singular number and feminine gender. Come again, A. C. and be Frank—.

Our school under the tutorship of Prof. J. P. Kinnett, assisted by J. S. Falkner, has vacated until July. The closing exercises were very interesting as a nice programme had been arranged. It was enjoyed by all who attended.

BONAMI.

I recommend Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. There is no better liniment made. I have sold over 100 bottles of it this year and all were pleased who used it. J. F. Pierson, druggist, South Chicago, Ill. It is for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

THERE IS NO TIME.

There is no time such fault to find,
No time for envy vain;
There is no time for words unkind,
Nor giving needless pain.

There is no time on coming years
To speculate and plot;
No time for burning, blinding tears,
O'er things we value not.

There is no time to fret and scold,
To fling the taunting jest;
No time to be so harsh and cold
With those you love the best.

There is no time to criticise
The acts of others so;
No time your work to thus revise;
As written, it must go.

There is no time on doubt to waste,
No time for petty strife;
To do the best you can make haste,
For short, so short, is life.
—Kathleen Kavanagh.

ONLY ONE MOTHER.

You have only one mother, my boy,
Whose heart you can gladden with joy,
Or cause it to ache
Till ready to break—
So cherish that mother, my boy.

You have only one mother who will Stick to you through good and through ill
And love you although
The world is your foe—
So care for that love ever still.

You have only one mother to pray
That in the good path you may stay;
Who for you won't spare
Self-sacrifice rare—
So worship that mother alway.

You have only one mother to make
A home ever sweet for your sake,
Who toils day and night
For you with delight—
To help her all pains ever take.

You have only one mother to miss
When she has departed from this,
So love and revere
That mother while here,
Sometime you won't know her dear kiss.

You have only one mother, just one,
Remember that always, my son;
None can or will do
What she has for you,
What have you for her ever done?

ADMITTED

READ RULE XV.

"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition."

Why was Ayer's Sarsaparilla admitted? Because it is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, nor a secret preparation, not dangerous, not an experiment, and because it is all that a family medicine should be.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Dr. John Blevins, of Calera, spent Monday in town.

James Harris, of Montevallo, paid us a short visit Monday.

Wherever there is a sin it is sure to be followed by a sorrow.

C. L. Meroney, of Montevallo, paid us a pleasant call Tuesday.

Mrs. J. G. Parker visited relatives in Montevallo Friday and Saturday.

I. D. Mason left yesterday for Knoxville, Tenn., to be absent several days.

Editor Graham and Maj. Huggins of Calera, were visitors in our city Tuesday.

J. W. Thompson is visiting his daughter Mrs. Harrell at Bessemer this week.

Earnest Averyt with his sister Miss Agnes, attended the pound party Friday night.

Mrs. Thomas, of Talladega, is spending sometime with her brother J. L. Peters.

Our town is unusually quiet these days, everybody being at work in their gardens or on their farms.

Miss Imogene Cooper, of Shelby Springs, was a guest of her friend Miss Ethel Greek, last week.

"Judge" John Russell, chief justice of the Harpersville supreme court, paid our city a visit yesterday.

The Chronicle job department has been quite busy the past week turning out commercial work for Shelby and Montevallo.

Mrs. Mollie Dorwin went to Longview yesterday to be at the bedside of her sister, Miss Lula Bentley, who is ill with pneumonia.

The weather is getting quite warm these days, and "spring fever" is becoming very prevalent, several cases having already been reported.

Dr. T. G. Nelson dropped down Tuesday and returned to Harpersville yesterday morning. There seems to be a strong attraction down this way.

If it takes our devil fifty minutes to go a quarter of a mile, how long will take our city council to transact business for the benefit of the town?

Prof. T. K. Roberts killed a 20-pound turkey Saturday morning last. It must have proved a dainty feast, as it was his first—we mean, of course, the first he ever killed.

An exchange says that silver trays are in demand. That may satisfy the demands of that print shop, but it's silver dollars we want in this one. So don't be backward, gentleman, just roll them in.

The Christian Endeavors of Shelby county will meet here in convention tomorrow. Columbiana and her hospitable people bids them a cordial welcome. We hope to see a large, enthusiastic gathering. True, this is our first, but let's make it a good one.

Last Sunday was the loveliest Sabbath day of the year, the weather being warm, a clear sky and just a slight breeze, which brought an increased attendance at all of the Sabbath schools. The regular services at the Methodist church were well attended both morning and night. The communion service, which was held at the conclusion of the morning service, was participated in by an unusually large number.

The Delineator for May

is called the commencement number, and is the third of the three great issues of the season. The article on Gowns for Commencement Day is most attractively illustrated, and is planned to give ample time for preparing the attire for this important occasion. Another timely article is Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's on Weddings and Wedding Ceremonies, given with fac-simile invitations to some very distinguished social events. A very interesting paper on Oberlin College is from the pen of Edith Dickson, and Mae Harris Anson writes clevely of Government Clerkships as an Employment for Women. The papers on the Experiences of a Training School Life, Edited by Mrs. Frederic Rhinelander Jones, are continued, while the very helpful series on How to be Well is brought to a conclusion. A notable article in this number is A May Day Festival, arranged for school and other entertainments by Mrs. Lilla Viles-Wyman, and there is also a Studio Party that offers occasion for pleasant diversion. Of practical and profitable occupations there are the papers on Kindergarten Work, Venetian Iron Work, Burnt Work and Crepe and Tissue Papers, each of which is contributed by an expert. There is a very suggestive and valuable illustrated article on the Laying and Decoration of the Dining Table, another on Seasonable Cookery, with a Review of the Markets, and most pleasant gossip in Around the Tea-Table. Mrs. Georgen's article on The Cultivation of The Voice will be appreciated by all who are interested in the subject, and the chapters on Mother and Son, and draw to a pleasant ending. The Fancy Work Departments are well filled with novelties, new designs being shown in Knitting, Crocheting, Tatting, Netting, etc., etc.

After a man has had thirteen children he seldom stays at home from his business to celebrate because the youngest has just cut another tooth.—Somerville Journal.

The sale of iron has been better this month than since the furnace closed down.

Capt. T. G. Bush and Mr. Jacobs a former president of the company will visit Shelby this afternoon.

Arrangements were made last evening for a joval day for the children on the 4th Sunday in May.

Messrs. Ham DuBose, Offie Leeper, and Wm. Callahan, honored Shelby with their presence Sunday afternoon.

Mr. David C. Glenn visited his old home near Talledega Springs and reports everything is favorable and encouraging in the way of farming and all other interprises. Three saw mills are in full blast in the neighborhood.

Prof. Franklin is looking forward for a gala day at the conclusion of school the latter part of May. The students are preparing themselves for the occasion and a rich treat awaits the visitors and no doubt great honor will be bestowed on the professor and school.

The notorious John Bradford, col, was killed at Bessemer several days ago over a game of craps. He drew his pistol on his pal who snatched the weapon and killed John who had killed and wounded several others sometime previous. He had served a term in the coal mines.

Shelby enjoyed a rich season on Saturday and embracing Easter. Dr. Newman the ruling elder preached several highly entertaining and instructive sermons. He was happily disappointed both by the inteligence and religious zeal of the community.

At the business meeting of the Epworth League last Monday night the following officers were elected for the ensuing six months: Frank H. Spears, president; A. H. Avery, first vice-president; Miss Mamie Glenn, second vice-president; Miss Isla Averyt, third vice-president; Miss Naldo Christian, treasurer; Arthur Carter, secretary Miss Flossie Keifer, organist. A "Welcome Committee," and a "Lookout Committee," were appointed by the president. Regular time of meeting at 2:45 p. m. every Sunday. All invited to attend.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Mr. Williamson has indulged in a handsome new typewriter.

Mrs. A. G. Weldon spent Sunday in Columbiana visiting friends.

Prof. Hutchings, after stopping with us for some time, has returned to Fayetteville.

Sunday evening strolls seem to be the prevailing fashion among the young people.

Rev. J. B. Kilpatrick preached two excellent and instructive sermons at the Presbyterian church Sunday and Sunday evening to an appreciative congregation.

Col. W. T. Smith left here last week for Huntsville to accept his commission to travel in North Alabama for a well-known tobacco firm in Kentucky. We predict that he will make it a complete success for he is a man who scorns defeat.

Mrs. Wellington has returned from Montgomery, where she went three weeks ago to have an optical operation performed, and although not restored entirely to her wanted sight, she is greatly improved and may nature perform her part and she be soundly and permanently restored to her natural sight. Surgery is a great thing and Messrs. Adams and Longshore spoke at K Springs on Friday last.

Turkey hunting seems to be all the go here now with the boys.

The beautiful spring has come when many a heart beats with joy.

Some indications of more weddings. How is that, Prof. Spearman?

William Crane lost a fine horse a few days ago and has another one sick.

T. B. Holcomb contemplates adding a grist mill to his saw mill in a few days.

The rain, hail and wind on the 16th did great damage to this section of the country.

Rev. C. W. O'Hara, of Columbiana, filled his regular appointment at Liberty on the second Sunday.

Rufus Lester, of Coon town, was up on the second Sunday wearing a smile from ear to ear. Rufus, what does that mean?

In Old Age

The vigor so earnestly craved for is given by Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it restores the vitality and purity of the blood, and thus strengthens and sustains all the bodily organs.

"I could fill a newspaper with words of praise for Hood's Sarsaparilla for it is the best medicine for the blood. I am an old man 70 years of age and I feel very thankful to Hood's Sarsaparilla, for I believe it saved my life. I was troubled very severely with my stomach and from disordered blood having sores on my cheek. Some thought I had a cancer but Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me. The pains in my stomach left me, it regulated my bowels and that dull feeling was driven away. The sores on my cheek healed and I am in every way greatly improved. I cannot find words good enough to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla." ARCHIE MCALLISTER, Young Hickory, New York.

STEEL TANKS

We furnish steel tanks with covers, all galvanized after completion, in nests of ten, 8 to 12 feet high and 30 to 36 inches in diameter, at 2½c. per gallon. They do not rust, shrink, leak, give taste to water, nor allow foreign substances to get in. They can be put in garret or barn and thus are protected from freezing. They take no setting up, are cheaper than wood. Tank substructures of all sizes made to order. Send for price list and designs for substructure and ornamental water supply.

AERMOTOR CO. CHICAGO.

2½ CTS PER GAL.

Did you ever stop to think how completely the Aermotor Co. made the modern windmill business? How it has monopolized this entire line of manufacture because of its ideas, inventions, designs, qualities and prices, or forced others to be literal and servile imitators? Witness the steel wheel, the back geared pumper, the high geared power mill, the steel towers, fixed and tilting, the galvanizing of work after completion, the grinder centrifugal feed, the improved irrigating and other pumps, the all steel pole saw—one of the most popular things we ever put out—the steel storage and stock tanks. Everything we have touched we have bettered and cheapened. It is the thing we have delighted in and it has paid. We have established a score of branch houses, so as to have all these goods near those who want them. The Aermotor Co. has but one more ambition. It wants to build and fill one more new building. It has 2 acres of land at its present location unoccupied by buildings. It expects to commence in June to cover that 2 acres with a single building, 7 stories high. This will give it 14 more acres of floor space. Then when the public demand requires more goods than can be produced with this added space, it will refuse to extend further, or make any effort. It will have done its share to supply that demand. It will then turn away all new comers, UNTIL THAT TIME IT EXPECTS TO CONTINUE TO SUPPLY THE WORLD WITH THE GREATER PART OF ITS WIND WHEELS, TOWERS, GRINDERS, FEED CUTTERS, PUMPS, STEEL FRAME BUZZ SAWS, STEEL STORAGE AND STOCK TANKS, STEEL SUBSTRUCTURES, ETC., ETC., GALVANIZED AFTER COMPLETION. IT WILL CONTINUE TO DEAL MOST LIBERALLY WITH THE PUBLIC, FURNISH REPAIRS AT A LOW PRICE, AND BE THE GREAT MODEL SQUARE-DEALING WIND POWER AND WATER SUPPLY HOUSE OF THE WORLD. AERMOTOR CO., CHICAGO.

GIANT KELP IN CALIFORNIA.

Ocean Plants Which Have Stems Three Hundred Feet Long.

From San Diego, all along the coast northward, great beds of a remarkable seaweed exist. This weed is commonly known as the giant kelp.

It has an uncommon economic value. Its growth is peculiar. A full-grown specimen has a stem measuring three hundred to four hundred feet in length, clutching the bottom of the ocean, while it bears at its summit on the surface of the water an air bulb, from which a tuft upward of fifty feet long of streamerlike leaves extends, each leaf being thirty to forty feet long.

The stem which anchors this floating mass, though no thicker than a common window cord, is of great strength and flexibility, and has for ages been used by the Indians for fishing lines, being first cut of the required length, which is where the stem begins to expand into the hollow tube, and varies from ten to fifteen fathoms.

It is then soaked in fresh water, in a running brook, until it is nearly bleached, then stretched, rubbed to the required size, and dried over a fire. When dried, it is very brittle, but when wet it is exceedingly strong, and equal to the best flax or cotton fishing lines.

Sometimes these lines of ten to fifteen fathoms each are knotted together, making one line of two hundred fathoms or so, for deep-sea fishing. Until within a few years, northern coast Indians used the upper or hollow portion of these great kelp stems, the air bulb of which resembles great black balls as large as a football, as receptacles for holding dogfish oil, which, together with the paunches of seals and sea lions and whale gut, properly prepared, were the utensils found in every house for holding the family supplies of whale, seal, or salmon oil, used as articles of food, or for dogfish oil, used for trading purposes only.

In preparing kelp for holding oil, the Indians peel off the thin coating of silex as one might peel the skin from an apple. When the skin is removed, the tube of kelp is placed above the fire, and as it dries the salt it contains exudes on the surface. This is carefully removed by rubbing, which manipulation also serves to soften the kelp and render it pliable.

It is then again placed over the fire, and the process continued until all the salt is removed; then the tube is blown up like a bladder, and allowed to dry until it will retain its shape, and it is then filled with dogfish oil, and is ready for the market.—N. Y. Herald.

A QUESTION OF EMOTION.

Opinions Differ as to Which Sex Has the Deeper Feeling.

In a recent interview, Mr. F. E. Weatherley, the famous song writer, was asked whether he preferred his songs to be interpreted by men or women. He replied: "Why, by men, most decidedly. They feel more deeply than women. Take 'Douglas Gordon,' for example; a woman will sing that, and sing it with effect, no doubt, but the instant she leaves the platform she is ready to laugh and joke. Very different with a man; he will feel the pathos to the innermost fibers, and when he leaves off singing, can scarcely find words to speak to anyone." These be strange words, indeed, and many of us will be inclined to take them with many a grain of salt. He is a bold man who thus roundly declares that men feel more deeply than women, even if the adjective "singing" be added to both substantives. It is generally accepted as a fact that the singer, or actor, who feels most acutely, makes the audience feel most acutely; and the singers who have most deeply moved the world have often been women. For instance, can the effect produced on an audience by Jennie Lind be said to have been ever equaled by a man? Sims Reeves, in his best days, was never her rival, electrical though his delivery of certain songs was.

Individual men may be more sensitive, more emotional, than individual women, but we firmly believe that men en masse are decidedly less quickly swayed than are women en masse, and, consequently, sway others less. One curious thing may be noted here. It is that a fine boy's voice will reach the very soul of an audience more surely than the voice of almost any mature person of either sex, and this when the boy himself remains almost unmoved. There is a pathos in the timbre possessed by no one who has left extreme youth behind, and yet extreme youth is generally so heartless. Few women will be inclined to agree with Mr. Weatherley's curious statement, and even the men will probably remain unconvinced by it.—The Gentlewoman.

DEATH RATES OF THE RACES.

Diseases Which Most Afflict the Component Elements of America's Population.

In the reports of the vital statistics of the eleventh United States census the corresponding data from Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, and from the New England states as a whole, taken with those from New York state and New York city, and with those derived from a special investigation of over ten thousand Jewish families, including over fifty thousand persons, leads to the following conclusions as being probable for the United States:

1. The colored race is shorter lived than the white and has a very high infantile death rate; it is specially liable to tuberculosis and pneumonia and less liable than the white race to malaria, yellow fever and cancer.

2. The Irish race has a rather low death rate among its young children, but a very high one among adults, due to a considerable extent to the effects of tuberculosis, pneumonia and alcoholism.

3. The Germans appear to be particularly liable to disorders of the digestive organs and to cancer.

4. The Hebrews have a low death rate and a more than average longevity; they are less affected than other races by consumption, pneumonia and alcoholism, but are especially liable to diabetes, locomotor ataxia and certain other diseases of the nervous system.—Medical Record.

COMPLETELY PARALYZED!

Physicians Are Astounded by a Peculiar Case.

[From the Times, Philadelphia, Pa.]

Stricken with Landry's Paralysis, and yet cured. That means but little to the average layman but it means a miracle to a physician. Such is the experience of O. E. Dallimore now a resident of Madison, N. J. and a rare experience it is.

"Yes, it is true that I had Landry's Paralysis," said Mr. Dallimore to a reporter "or else the most celebrated physicians of London were mistaken.

"It was on the 15th of March, this year," he continued, "when I was in New York city, that I first felt the symptoms of my trouble. I experienced difficulty in going up stairs, my legs failing to support me. I consulted a physician who informed me that I had every symptom of Locomotor Ataxia but as the case developed he pronounced it a case of Landry's Paralysis and knowing the nature of the disease advised me to start for my home and friends. I gave up my work and on April 1st started for London, Ont. A well known physician was consulted but I grew rapidly worse and on Saturday, April 7, several eminent physicians held a consultation on my case and informed me that I was at death's door having but three to six days to live, still I lingered on, by this time completely paralyzed, my hands and feet being dead, I could hardly whisper my wants and could only swallow liquids. Oh, the misery of those moments are beyond all description and death would really have been a welcome visitor.

"Now, comes the part that has astounded the physicians. Rev. Mr. Gondy, a clergyman who visited me in my last hours, as he supposed, told me of the marvellous cures of paralysis that had been performed by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I started to take the pills about April 28 and a week after that felt an improvement in my condition. There was a warm, tingling sensation in the limbs that had been entirely dead and I soon began to move my feet and hands, the improvement continued until May 28 when I was taken out of bed for a drive and drove the horse myself. By the beginning of July I was able to walk up stairs alone and paid a visit to Niagara.

"Slowly but surely I gained my old health and strength leaving Ontario for New York on October 11 and be ginning my work again on October 26, 1894. Cured of Landry's Paralysis in eight months." To confirm his story beyond all doubt, Mr. Dallimore made the following affidavit.

Sworn and subscribed before me December 3, 1894 AMOS C. RATHBUN, [SEAL.] Notary Public.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Add the salmon, let it get thoroughly hot, and serve.—Boston Budget.

LIGHT LAUNDERING.

How Doilies, Scarfs, and Tea Cloths Should Be Got Up.

The laundering of the many doilies, bureau scarfs, and small draperies now so plentiful in the modern house is really quite an item. A rumpled centerpiece detracts from the beauty of the dainty lamp upon it, and thus the housewife finds another care added to the already full list of duties. Sometimes it is necessary to do this laundering one's self, and at all times it is wise to direct it carefully.

Plain white toilet cloths should be washed in a hot suds, and if badly soiled and yellowed, should be boiled for two minutes. Then the cloths should be rinsed thoroughly in clean, cold water, and finally dipped in slightly blued water. A rubbing board should not be used in this work, but the soiled spots may be rubbed hard in the hands. Muslin and scrim must be handled gently and be squeezed in the water rather than rubbed, even by the hands. Scrim and muslin should be stiffened by dipping them into thin, boiled starch. They should be thoroughly dried, then dampened, and rolled up tightly for an hour before ironing. When scrim or muslin is ironed, be careful to pull out the edges straight, and, having the flat-iron clean, press out the ruffles or lace edges first.

Linen and denim, whether embroidered in white or colors, do not need any starch. They should be ironed when damp, and then will be sufficiently stiff. Wash them in lukewarm suds, rinse carefully, and hang them where they will dry quickly, but not where the sun will pour down on them. Do not use hot water, especially when colored silks or linens have been used, and hasten the laundering as much as possible. Iron embroidered cloths on the wrong side till perfectly dry.

Ribbons used to ornament various pieces of fancy work often need washing. Wash them in the same way as embroidered cloths, and protect them from the iron with clean brown paper or a cloth. Be sure to iron them before they are wholly dry. Scarlet washes best among the colors for ribbons, and the satin-finished ribbons will appear after laundering almost as fresh as new, but moire ribbons lose their unique finish.—N. Y. Times.

RENOVATING OLD CRAPE.

It May Be Made to Look Just as Good as New.

To those who are in deep mourning it may be useful to know how to renovate crape.

I learned how from a fashionable New York dressmaker who, in turn, got her information on the subject from an equally successful dyer and cleaner.

Go into the kitchen, have the clothes boiler two-thirds full of boiling water, throw in five or ten cents' worth of gum arabic, place a new sheet of heavy brown wrapping paper, doubled, over the top, arrange your crape on this, and await results. The fire in the range must be brisk, so that the water will boil steadily while you are at work. Feel the crape, and in a few minutes you will find it moist and sticky. Now, with your two hands, press out the creases, smoothing here and arranging there, so that all parts get an equal steaming and all turned in and rumpled places are renewed. If your paper be too thick, try it single and take another piece when it becomes wet. I have succeeded best with it doubled, tripled and sometimes quadrupled But it depends.

If it be trimming you are doing over, be particular about these creased and wrinkled places; the careful manipulation of your hands over the broad, smooth surface of the paper, and the constant steam will make the material stiff, crisp and like new.

If it be a large piece of crape, as, for instance, a veil, be careful to fold it so that the folds will come immediately in the back or in any part of the head gear where they will not look badly. I always do over my own crape, and as dampness takes all the stiffness out of it, I find it as a home-made process great economy.

If one can not conveniently get to a kitchen and a large boiler a small oil stove or alcohol lamp with a wide open saucepan will accomplish wonders with small pieces of crape, and the result will repay you for your trouble.

To do over small pieces of velvet place a wet handkerchief over a hot flat iron standing on its end and draw the wrong side of the velvet over the handkerchief. Save several irons on the range and wet the handkerchief each time you change your iron, until the pieces are steamed to your satisfaction. Take an old handkerchief and do not burn your fingers. A large piece of velvet could be successfully steamed over a kitchen clothes boiler without the sheet of wrapping paper and without the gum arabic.—Detroit Free Press.

OPINION IS DIVIDED

The Question of Whether Durant is Guilty or Not.

THE ACCUSED REMAINS ON TRIAL.

Defense Making a Strong Case and While the Chief of the Police Believe They Have the Murderer, Evidence Is Not Yet Convincing.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—There was as large crowd as ever at the Durant examination yesterday. The defense apparently have no hope of preventing the prisoner being held and are devoting their efforts to obtaining information for use at the trial.

Wolff was the first witness. He repeated the story told at the inquest of his being present at Dr. Vogel's on the night of the murder, Durant arriving about 9:30, leaving the house with Durant and several young ladies, of accompaning Miss Low home and about midnight seeing a man who resembled the accused near the church.

During Wolff's cross examination he was requested to take off his coat but he refused to do so. Consul for the defense appealed to the court and Wolff finally removed the garment. He then admitted to counsel that it bore a resemblance to the one worn by Durant. On the night in question witness wore a dark coat and vest and light trousers which were now at the ranch at which he was employed and could be secured at any time.

George R. King, organist of the church, was then called for the first time. He had been organist for two years, was secretary of the Sunday school and had helped to arrange the Sunday school library in company with Durant, who was superintenpent of the Sunday school. He had no key to the side door of the church but had one to the library. He put the new lock on the library door, being assisted by Durant who was the only one other than himself who had a key to it. The lock (which was produced) caused a great deal of discussion among counsel. It was apparent that the defense would maintain that Durant, having a key could have unlocked the door and that in his case there was no need why he should break the lock. The prosecution, on the other hand, is of the opinion that as only he and King had keys to the room, he knew that to have unlocked the door would have pointed to one of them immediately.

Chief of Police Crowley is of the opinion that there is not a single fact that points other than to Durant. "Mr. Gibson has a perfect alibi," he said. "We have studied him very carefully."

Speaking of the Lamont case, Chief Crowley said the police department would present if possible, a stronger chain of circumstantial evidence than in the case of Minnie Williams.

Chief Crowley added that at this time it would not be prudent for him to make public all the evidence in the case, but he intimated that new witnesses would be produced to show that Blanche Lamont was last seen alive with Durant and in the immediate vicinity of Emanuel church. It is now understood that District Attorney Barnes will elect to try the Lamont case in the superior court before taking up the case of Minnie Williams.

The Durant case was continued until next Tuesday. It is said the defense at that time will have Wolff present, dressed as he was on the Friday night and see whether the witnesses who saw the man near the church that night will swear whether or not it was Wolff.

FATAL LEAP FOR LIBERTY.

Prisoner in an Alabama Jail Who Tried to Escape Is Killed.

SCOTTSBORO, Ala., April 27. — Just about 11 o'clock yesterday while Sheriff Robinson was returning to the jail from the court house with Newton Ward, a prisoner, he made a break for liberty. The sheriff ordered him to halt, but he continued to run and was shot four times by the sheriff. He died within an hour afterwards. Ward was in jail on a charge of burglary which he acknowledged but was taken to the court as a witness against another party for complicity in the burglary. Ward had previously served ten years in the penitentiary for killing a man named Williams in Marshall county.

DECISION ON THE GOULD TAX.

Justice Andrews Holds That the Assessment on $10,000,000 Is Final.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Justice Andrews has handed down a decision in the supreme court, special term, affirming the assesment for 1893, made by the commissioners of Taxes and assessments on the personal estate of Jay Gould, which they valued at $10,000,000, Justice Andrews holds that the decision of the assessors is final. The case was appealed on a writ of certiorari obtained by George J., Edwin, Helen M., and Howard Gould, as the executors of their father's will. They claimed that the assesment was illegal because it was made before the executors had come into possession of the property. They also claimed that the assesment was exorbitant and unjust.

Justice Andrews says that the question involved in the contention of the relator's counsel had been decided adversely to them by the general term, and this decision, not having been overruled by the court of appeals, the assessment must be affirmed and the writ dismissed, with costs. The suits over the assersments for 1894 are still pending.

The bulletins, it is believed, will be of great value to all persons seeking foreign markets for their products, as it will enable them to select the most advantageous markets and give them in advance all the information desired relative to the prices asked and received by their competitors.

BROKER IN MARRIAGE

Latest Charges Against Young Harry Raymond.

PUGILIST ED SMITH ALSO ARRESTED.

Charged With Being an Accomplice of Raymond—Story of a Young Woman's Downfall and Her Subsequent Engagement.

ATLANTA, April 27.—Denver Ed Smith, the pugilist, was arrested here last night with Harry Raymond. The latter is suspected of being a crook and has been arrested twice before within a few weeks. When the arrest was made last night the police stated that it was merely a bluff and done to frighten off the crooks who are reported heading this way. Yesterday it developed that the arrests were made to baffle a scheme in which Raymond was to marry a young woman here under the promise of getting $500.

One year ago a young man named Ed Pine left here to avoid marrying Miss Alice Buford. Pine wants to return and Raymond was told that Pine's family would give $500 to any one who would marry the girl. Raymond became a suitor and pretending to be a wealthy New Yorker, made rapid headway. The wedding was to occur on Tuesday. The go between did dot produce the money at the appointed time and Raymond refused to go on with the marriage. The money was promised for yesterday but again it was not put up. The detectives got on to the plot and arrested Raymond to break it up. Denver Ed Smith was arrested as a party to the conspiracy. It turns out that he knew what was going on but had no connection with it. The wedding is off indefinitely.

SEABOARD GAINS A POINT.

The Railroad Now Virtually Free From any Boycott.

ATLANTA, April 27.—The Seaboard Airline has obtained an injunction against the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway and the Western and Atlantic railway restraining them from proceeding under the decision of Judge Lumpkin until the United States supreme court can decide the issue which have been carried before it. The order, granted has the effect of placing the status of the issues between the Seaboard and the Western and Atlantic about the same as it was before the circular was issued by the Southern railway and Steamship associatin, boycotting the Seaboard and refusing permissions to its roads to grant prorating arrangements to the Seaboard. Under the restraining order granted by Judge Lumpkin, the west is again opened up to the Seaboard and the Seaboard is virtually free from any boycott until the supreme court decides the question involved in the case which was submitted to Judge Lumpkin.

DISREGARDS THE INJUNCTION.

Dispensary Constables Continue to Confiscate Liquor Shipped to South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 27.—Following out his declaration of intention to disregard Judge Goff's temporary injunction, restraining all state, county and municipal officers from interfering with liquor shipped into this state, while in transit and in the hands of consignees until May 2, Governor Evans' liquor constables yesterday afternoon seized a barrel of bottled beer, shipped by express from Augusta, Ga., to D. J. Goble, this city. They broke it open and conveyed its confiscated contents to the state dispensary. State liquor commissioner Mixson yesterday issued a circular to constables commanding them to be particularly vigilant in detecting and seizing liquors. The further action of United States Judges is awaited with the keenest interest.

MERITS OF ALL THE POINTS.

The Income Tax Rehearing to Probe Into Every Involved Question.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—When the United States supreme court, on May 6, again takes up the income tax question it will once more go into the merits of all the points involved and will not, as its order made Tuesday apparently stated, confine the arguments to the question whether or not a rehearing of the cases shall be granted. This unexpected explanation of the court's order shows that what it intended to state in its ambiguous announcement was that it had granted the petition for a rehearing, and if the bench were full on the date named, would reopen the cases on May 6. The order of the court, it is stated, was drawn hastily and it was not noticed at the time that it was ambiguous and apparently justified the conclusion that the court had decided simply to hear argument on the question of granting a rehearing. Attorney General Olney and others directly interested in the trial understood the courts order in the same manner as did the public. The attorney general, however, was at some loss to understand just the extent to which the court desired him to go in his argument. In reopening the cases the court, it is stated, will not vacate the order it has made already, but will let its decision stand for the present, and will only modify the original entry in the event that, as a result of the reargument, a majority of the court decide to overrule the conclusions heretofore reached.

NOTHING NEW FROM HOLLAND.

Officers Led Off on a False Scent—The Shortage Now Reaches $75,000.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 27.—Business goes along as it was wont to at the Merchants' and Farmers National bank, and Examiner Miller is still at work. But there are no tidings of James R. Holland, the defaulting and missing cashier. Speculation is rife. Some figure him in New York, others in Texas, others still in Mexico and many believe he is in Charlotte or its vicinity still. The officers are working every clue. Yesterday morning a negro reported that Holland had tried to engage him to drive him (Holland) Tuesday to the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Alfred Kirkpatrick, in Sharon township, but that he was afraid and declined to do so; but that he saw Holland get in his buggy at his home Tuesday night, and drive away toward Sharon. Union this information Marshall Allison, and Police Sergeant Baker went to Sharon yesterday and made every investigation, finding nothing except that the story was false. The shortage in his accounts is found to be in the neighborhood of $75,000.

COULD THE PASTOR BE GUILTY

And Durant the Victim of His Spiritual Adviser's Crimes?

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27.—The police are quietly investigating certain rumors connecting Dr. Gibson with the murders in Emanuel baptist church. During the past few days some sensational stories have reached the ears of the police which implicate the pastor. While Chief Crowley still believes Gibson innocent of any connection with the horrible crimes, he considers the rumors of sufficient importance to warrant investigation. He detailed several of his best men yesterday to inquire into the rumor with instructions to sift them to the bottom.

It is known that the defense will attempt to show that Gibson murdered the unfortunate girls. Durant, while declaring his innocence, has frequently said that the pastor knew more of the terrible crimes than he cared to tell, and rarely missed an opportunity to direct suspicion toward his spiritual adviser. The latter stoutly maintains his innocence of connection with the murders and is apparently anxious that a thorough investigation be made.

HAWAII'S COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

Colonel McLean Leaves to Assume the Duties of His New Position.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Colonel R. H. McLean, who has just been appointed by President Dole as commander-in-chief of the Hawaiian forces, left Washington yesterday for Hawaii to enter upon the discharge of his duties. The action of President Dole in appointing this gentleman to so important a command is more far reaching than was at first supposed. The Hawaiian army at present consists of 700 well trained men with an auxiliary in reserve of 1,500 militia. These troops have been likened to the Swiss, on account of their excellence in marksmanship.

HONORS TO THE DEAD

Memorial Day Generally Observed in the South.

THE DEMONSTRATION AT COLUMBUS.

In Atlanta the City Assumes Holiday Attire, and the Occasion Is One of Business Suspension—In Other of the Southern Cities.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 27. — While memorial day has always been observed in Columbus, where the beautiful custom was first inaugurated, not in several years past has the demonstration been so universal, and the character of the celebration so varied as was the demonstration yesterday. The weather was cloudy and pleasant. Business was suspended throughout the city after 2 o'clock, and the magnificent exercises at the opera house caused that edifice to be packed to its utmost capacity, hundreds being unable to obtain admittance. The tablaux was presented by charming young women personating the different southern states in the order of their secession. They were costumed in white with large red sashes and bearing shields with the names of the states in gilded letters. Recitations and popular southern songs were rendered and an eloquent address was delivered by Hon. Lionel C. Levy.

THE BRADSTREETS REVIEW.

Conditions of Trade in the General Merchantable Lines.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Bradstreets says: The feature of the week is the continued strength of prices of staple after the striking advances of preceding weeks. There is a firmer undertone in nearly all lines of trade, but at a number of points gains in industrial are more marked than in commercial lines.

The flurry in patroleum is succeeded by a very dull market. Woolen dress goods mills have secured a number of orders for fall delivery which accounts for the moderate activity in the market for wool. Cotton goods are firm on the advance in cotton and higher wages paid eastern mill operatives. The number of strikes for higher wages increases. About 25,000 people have stuck in April, most of them for an advance. The number of voluntary advances reported in wages is large. During the past two weeks the wages of 50,000 operatives, most of them in textile lines, have been advanced without strikes. As most of those who struck for, received higher wages, fully 75,000 industrial operatives appear to have had their wages advanced since the begining of April.

Among leading southern cities, Nashville, Savannah and New Orleans alone announce any improvement in feeling or demand, and in those instances it is pronounced.

DECLARES THEY ARE AFRAID.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 27.—Secretary Hinrichsen in speaking of the action of the Honest Money league of Illinois in refusing to participate in the state convention said: "The gold crowd are simply afraid to go into the fight for they know it would exhibit their weakness. The whole outfit could not carry a ward in Chicago or a county in the state. Their manifesto will be a positive help to the silver movement for it will convince the people that the alleged "honest money" people are pure gold bugs."

South Carolina Dispensary Suit.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 27.—In the United States court yesterday Bryan & Bryan, attorneys for John Donald, against M. T. Holley, et al, filed a bill for injunction and relief. The defendants, state constables, are required to make a return in Charleston May 1, to say why the relief prayed for shall not be granted, and they be restrained from making liquor seizures under the dispensary law.

VASTLY MORE DISGUSTING.

The Evidence Against Oscar Wilde Seems More Convincing on Trial.

LONDON, April 27.—The trial of Oscar Wilde and Alfred Taylor for unnatural crimes began in the central criminal court of the Old Bailey yesterday. Charles Parker and other witnesses who testified at the preliminary hearings were called to the stand and repeated the stories they had previously told. Wilde looked careworn and anxious, and was much thinner than usual. The fact that he had his hair cut added to his attenuated appearance. Taylor retained his air of unconcern. Both prisoners pleaded not guilty. The opening speech of counsel for the prosecution was a repetition of his previous arguments. The evidence given by the young man Parker was vastly more disgusting than the testimony he gave at the hearing in the Bow street police court. Upon cross-examination he swore that Wood and Allen received 400 pounds black mail from a gentleman with whom they were guilty of misconduct in that gentleman's lodgings and that he himself had received 30 pounds from the same person for the same reason.

MONROE DOCTRINE ELASTIC.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—While there are well-known considerations of policy which influence the administration in the Nicaraguan matter to a different and less strenuous course than it was thought some weeks ago it would take, some of its friends frankly aver that they are disappointed in what seems to be understood yesterday as its attitude. The Monroe doctrine seems to be very elastic or very intangible if an invasion of American territory to punish as an offense what many of our own intelligent and well-informed countrymen regard as a virtue, namely, the expulsion of the British interlopers and disturbers of the peace, can be permitted by a powerful republic whose creed is "no foreigner's foot on the continent except where the foreign government already has possession."

NEGRO'S BODY FOUND IN THE WOODS

Howard Harrison Iron Company Sends a Representative to Japan—The District Grand Lodge B'Nai B'rith. Other State News.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 23. — The body of Jim McLamore, colored, was found in the woods near Blossburg, fifteen miles west of Birmingham Saturday night about 10 o'clock, with a bullet hole through his neck. His pockets had been turned inside-out and all his money taken. He had been paid off during the day. Yesterday afternoon, Charles Steel colored, was arrested on suspicion of being the murderer. A few hundred yards from where McLamore's body was found, two white men were attacked by two negroes and ordered to deliver up their cash. The white men were unarmed and instead of handing over their money they ran and were pursued about 100 yards by the negroes. For several months this company has been in negotiation with parties in New York, looking to the placing of a large order of pipe in Yokohoma, Japan, but for some reason the order was placed with a Belgium company. The Howard Harrison company believe they can make iron pipe and sell it as cheaply in Japan as can any other company on the globe and to satisfy themselves of this point they decided to send Mr. Nichols to Yokohoma to see what could be done. While in Japan he will also bid on another large order of pipe.

Two Hundred Recruits From Alabama to Aid the Rebels.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 23.—Friends of the Cuban revolutionists in Birmingham have been advised that a force of between 300 and 400 men, who were enlisted by agents of the revolutionists in Alabama and Louisiana, has been shipped from a point near Cedar Keys, Fla., and expect to land at an obscure port on the Cuban coast. The recruits, it is stated, went in two small schooners disguised as trading vessels. But when they shipped is not made known, except that it was during the past week.

About 200 of the recruits were from Alabama, and a number being from this vicinity, and the remainder from Louisiana. It is said they carried no arms or ammunition except such as they could conceal on their persons.

The agent expects to ship another force soon if the first runs the gauntlet successfully.

THE CHRONICLE

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, MAY 2, 1895.

CALL things by their right names. A free silver coinage man is a monometallist, not a bimetallist. Free silver by this country alone means what it does in the semi-civilized countries—distinct monometallism.—Youngstown Vindicator.

A DESIGN will soon be adopted by the Cotton States and International Exposition for its award medals for exhibitors at the exposition. By authority of congress, these medals will be struck by the United States mint, and to this extent the government puts the Cotton States and International Exposition on the same footing with the World's Fair, the medals for the prize winners at which exposition are now being struck by the national government.

BY the time the new crop of vegetables will be ripe, a canning factory with a capacity of 25,000 cans per day, will be in operation in Montgomery. Mr. James O'Brien is the proprietor, and will manage the industry. He has located it on his beautiful suburban home about two miles west of the Court Street fountain. He is confident there is a fine profit in the industry, and believes it will prove a blessing to the farmers of the country in that it will give them a ready market for their fruits and vegetables.

DURING the year ending June 30th 1894, there were imported into the United States 1,184,081 bushels of beans and peas, and 3,002,578 bushels of potatoes, representing $2,395,163 that should have been retained by our farmers. Scotland alone sent us more than 1,600,000 bushels of potatoes, and nearly half of the beans and peas came from Ontario and Quebec. If foreign farmers can raise these things and ship them to us, paying duty upon them, at a profit, it is good evidence that our farmers are not raising enough of them.—Montgomery Advertiser.

IT has been a long time since a land company was incorporated in Jefferson county. It used to be an every day occurrence, along in '86 and 87 for the announcement to be made that a big land company had been formed with a large capital, to develop a new suburb or town. The fact that a new land company has been incorporated is another evidence of a boom coming. The West Alabama Land Co. has filed articles of incorporation, Gen. E. W. Rucker, of Birmingham, Wm. A. Handley, of Roanoke, Thomas B. Lyons, of Virginia, and Leonora D. Murphy are the incorporators.

THE exhibit to be made by the war department at the Cotton States and International Exposition will include many rare relics of revolutionary times and of the early days of the republic. Historic flags used by Washington in 1781, a Bunker Hill flag, and flags used at White Plains, and by the Continental troops will be on exhibition. Groups of lay figures will represent officers and privates of the army in uniforms and accoutrements used from the times of the revolution to the present day. All forms of army wagons, pack mules, ambulances, etc., many of them used on historic fields, will be shown. There will also be models of harbors and river works, and a complete field signal outfit, including field telegraphic and telephonic instruments. Among the arctic exploration relics will be seen a hatchet carried to the farthest northern point, instruments and equipments used by General Greely, and many other relics of far northern explorations. The exhibit of the department will be very complete and fully illustrative of the history and growth of the army in the different branches of service.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

CORDIALLY INDORSED.

RESTORES Natural Growth OF THE HAIR —WHEN— ALL OTHER Dressings FAIL.

"I can cordially indorse Ayer's Hair Vigor, as one of the best preparations for the hair. When I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, all the front part of my head —about half of it— was bald. The use of only two bottles restored a natural growth, which still continues as in my youth. I tried several other dressings, but they all failed. Ayer's Hair Vigor is the best."—Mrs. J. C. For Whooping cough Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is excellent. By using it freely the disease is deprived of all dangerous consequences. There is no danger in giving the remedy to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Who hath fly-specked ginghams? Who hath calico made "before de war?" Who hath stale baking powder without end? He that knoweth not the way of the printer. The non-advertising merchant goeth forth to his lair at the rising of the sun and lo! no man interfereth. He standeth round all day like a bottle of castor oil and all the people with shekles come not to his shanty. He advertiseth not his wares and his face is forgotten upon the face of the earth.

A lady at Tooleys La., was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Tisler, a prominent merchant of the town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Our sister town Montevallo is making a strong effort to get the Girl's Industrial school, and we earnestly hope she may be successful. A better location could not be found in the state, if educated, refined, moral people are desirable associates for our daughters. We are informed that one gentleman offers to donate $5000, and others in proportion. Such liberality is worthy a rich reward.

If King Solomon was alive he would now say: "Go to the traveling ,man learn his ways, and be wise." Mr. C. W. This remedy is gaining a wide reputation for its prompt cures of rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings, and lameness. 50 cent bottles are for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

"Are you for silver or gold?" asked the statesman. "That depends," replied the politician. "Which have you got?"—Chicago Post.

Shelby Siftings.

Mr. E. T. Witherby is visiting Mobile to attend the Sunday school convention.

Miss Emma DuBose, of Columbiana, spent Monday night with Miss Jessie Carter of this city.

Messrs. John Averyt, Clarence Abbett and Prof. Franklin, attended the Baptist Union in Birmingham last week, as delegates from here.

Next week is the time appointed for a number of our fellow citizens to repair to the banks of the Coosa river to engage in fishing. They anticipate a pleasant and successful time.

Maj. T. H. Hopkins was warmly greeted by his many friends in Shelby on the 28th. He is here to audit the company's books, and will return to Montgomery this afternoon.

Both ladies and gentlemen who visited Columbiana to attend the Christian Endeavor gathering, speak in highest terms of every one with whom they came in contact. Their time was pleasantly and profitably employed.

Now that April is numbered among the things that were, let us retrospect, while times continues depressing: Refreshing showers have fallen, gardens are flourishing, good stands of cotton corn and other grains, an excelent fruit supply is assured, the school is prospering, great interest is being manifested in every branch of the various churches, 1,500 tons of iron were shipped during this month. Most assuredly we should all be thankful to the Most High for His blessing.

Harpersville Echoes.

Miss Sallie Martin spent last week with East Lake friends.

The strawberries are getting ripe and the crop promises to be very fine.

Say, Buddie, do you belong to either one of the societies? If you don't you had better "jine."

The mail is being carried now from here to Pell City on a bicycle, the round trip being 42 miles.

Col. Kidd has enough hound puppies at his house to put nine at every man's house door in Shelby county.

There was quit a number of the Vincent people attended preaching here at the Methodist church last Sunday.

A. D. Smith a staunch democrat of beat 16 was circulating among his many Harpersville friends Saturday evening.

Mr. G. W. Thompson killed that old gobbler one morning last week which has baffled the skill of the hunters lo these many years.

The two Tom's swear by all that is good and bad that they will never, no never, drive any more dead steers to Birmingham to sell for beef.

Col. Kidd and T. H Davis carried a drove of milch cows to Birmingham. This makes nine or ten droves of cattle carried from here since last November.

We are pleased to announce that the Rev. Mr. Giles has agreed to preach here again this year. His regular times will be on the third Sunday and Saturday before.

There was a heavy rain accompanied by hail fell near here last Friday. One third party man said that the hail at his house was as large as a hen egg, but I don't believe it.

We are all in favor of Montevallo getting the Girls' Industrial school located there. Shelby county is entitled to it, and the leading men of the county ought to go to work for it. Montevallo is the place and Harpersville will work to that end.

Mr. Cleveland is for sound money, gold, and other as smart and as good democrats are for silver and it is very interesting to read on both sides and we really don't know who is right, but any way we want more money, and a few dozen dollars would be very acceptable just now for our flour barrel is getting very low, sugar most all gone, shoes worn out, and our old hat is all full of holes.

JAKE.

ROOM FOR MISSIONARY WORK AT HOME.

There are millions of foreigners in the United States today, multitudes of whom are as degraded as any heathen, and still they pour in upon us—a quarter of a million, a half million a year. Of every ten of our own population, three are foreigners, or children of foreigners.

In one state, not in the far west, there are over 200 neighborhoods entirely destitute of religious services by any denomination.

In several states more than half the people can neither read nor write.

In some towns there are not forty people who ever professed Christ, multitudes of children who never heard the name of God except in oaths, and who do not know what a Sunday school is like, and mothers who say that for twenty years they have buried their dead without a prayer at the grave, wondering if there are any real Christians anywhere.

In some 1,300 communities between the Mississippi and the Pacific, not one word of the gospel has ever been spoken.

While $1,000,000 has been spent for missions $900,000,000 have been spent for intoxicating liquors, and millions more for tobacco, opium, etc.

To what does these facts point? Can it be, "Millions for Mammon, coppers for Christ?"—"Our Home Field."

In order to reduce his weight
He purchased him a wheel;
Before he'd ridden it a week
He fell off a good deal.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 6.

I have, in other connections, spoken almost exclusively of those who on account of their talents, energies and enterprise impressed themselves on the community and made themselves conspicuous. This has been the habit of history from the heavy tome down to the pamphlet; but it is no more history than that which, in describing the physical features of a country, merely sketches the mountains and great vales, without reference to minerals, soil and products. It is meet, therefore, in this paper to give some account of the more numerous class of the people; of the class who i n former ages built the pyramids, turned Rome into marble; reared the cathedrals of the Middle Ages; who have founded modern cities; who run the factories; dig out of the earth the subsistence of mankind; mann your navies and fill up the ranks of your armies.

The first settlers of our county, mostly from the rural districts of South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia, were "A stubborn race flattering and fearing none, who would shake hands with a king on his throne, and think it kindness to his majesty." They lived at home, owning their own cabin and eighty acres of land; the housewife spinning and weaving the cloth that clothed the "gude" man and his children, and the husband and father often tanning the leather and making the shoes of the family on the spot. Girls competed with each other in making the finest homespun garments and converting them into the neatest dresses. Conscious that they were the "bone and sinew of the country," when they needed anything not made at home they marched into the store and asked for what they wanted in a firm tone and untroubled manner, the soliciting party being the merchant, who felt sure of pay at the end of the year. They never thought of trading beyond their income; never dreaded pay day. The result was quietude, confidence and serenity. They despised caucuses and wireworking. Every one who chose ran for office, and everybody voted for whom he pleased. On going into a strange community, you could determine the property status of every family at the church or on other occasions of public gatherings by their apparel. This class of people were cherished by the law-makers, their rights jealously guarded, their significance understood. Men were esteemed according to character, not outward appearance. It was not their object to shine, but to deserve esteem by probity.

The people of those times were not free from the infirmities of human nature; many of them loved whisky, which on public days they drank freely. It was not poisoned as now and did less mischief on this account, as well as because they did not drink it regularly, only at public gatherings. They thought it took six days in the week to do their work, rarely lounging around the village store for any purpose. Intoxicated men sometimes exhibited pugnaciousness, disdaining the use of any but nature's weapons, considering it cowardly to use others, even a stick. Larger men were not permitted to impose on smaller ones. I could name several who gained prowess, considered a distinction, in these primitive bouts; but it would be invidious and unnecessary to a picture of the times. Shooting did, however, sometimes take place, even in a clandestine way, at a little later period. Mr. Hugh McCormick, regarded an overbearing man by some, was in the transition to later methods killed with a shot gun, between the court house and Owen's tavern. Though there were many surmises it was never legally ascertained by whom the homicide was committed. The Mexican war, in the early forties had much to do with introducing the practice of using weapons into the rural districts of the country. The practice had earlier become common in the larger towns and cities—pistols and bowie knives. Gamblers especially often killing each other with these fearful instruments. The law soon effectually put down the nefarious practice.

A very unique element of the earliest settlers of Coosa valley, on Four Mile, and later on Yellowleaf, were the "Dutch," as we sometimes called them, though they were not Hollanders. They were from that part of Lexington district, South Carolina, between Saluda and Broad rivers, known as the "Dutch Fork," and the lower part of Newberry district. There, they were distinguished for industry, uprightness and enterprise. Among them were the Summers and Fairs, particularly the latter, since widely known as prominent citizens in lower Alabama. The Shelby settlers, the Salsers, Weavers, Farrs, and others, whose descendents still abide among us, neighbors of my parents when I was a boy, were worthy of their South Carolina progenitors. It may be well to note the romantic history of these people. They were originally in part, Palatines from the "county Palatine" on the Rhone, and neighboring portions of "faderland," first brought to England by George III. to rescue them from Catholic persecution; to which, as Lutherans, they were especially exposed. Maintained for a time at the public expense, murmurings arose, and they were presently removed to the colonies of America and valuable reservations given them in North and South Carolina. George III. was a good man as this act tends to show. Much inclined to piety, who once severely rebuked his bishop, the bishop of Canterbury and primate of all England, for holding what he regarded a revel in his palace—notwithstanding his high notions of parliamentary prerogative which provoked the rebellion of the colonies. His German proteges, therefore, were in a very perplexing predicament when the revolution came on. However, with few exceptions, they took the American side.

The old man George Salser used to have his German almanac and his German testament, one of which he sometimes read, to the great amusement of the young people unused to German gutturals. A foreign accent always attracted great attention in those days when few foreigners were seen in the interior of our country.

Mr. C. A. Guider, a well-known manufacturer and lumber dealer, at McGuffey, Ohio, has found, as have many others, that Hood's Sarsaparilla, by keeping the blood pure, prevents as well as cures disease. He writes:

Hood's Sarsaparilla Makes Pure Blood

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has a very conspicuous place on our cupboard. I took it for rheumatism or rather to prevent rheumatism, for which I find it very satisfactory. also for catarrh of the head and for a blood purifier, in fact for general debility. It has proved highly successful. I could not get along without Hood's Sarsaparilla. We buy it in half-dozen lots, and myself and family take it whenever we do not feel well. I am 58 years old and during the war served three years in the calvary service. I was thrown four times from a horse, hurting my back, from the effects of which I have never fully recovered. Hood's Sarsaparilla, however, always gives me relief." C. A. GUIDER, McGuffey, Ohio.

The Sage of Rocky Creek and the Milligan Generation.

[Copyright 1895.]

That's what makes me tell you what I do about book learnin. There is nothin better in this vain and fleetin world here below, exceptin it mought be a little more of it. And yet still at the same time I am bound to maintain that books and schools don't make a man have sense. Some people jest naturally have sense, whilst some have fits. And likewise also if a man has got the brains to start on, you understand, he never will be a fool. Brains are brains and a fool is a fool—schools or no schools, books or no books.

"Same as Quality Folks."

Old man Zeb Milligan, which use to run a little store over at Dooley's Cross Roads, was a man amongst men in his day and generation. He couldn't tell the Bible from a blue-back speller exceptin by the general color, and he wouldn't know his own name from yours if he was to see them both in plain print as big as a painted horse rack. But old man Zeb had sense, you understand—sense the same as quality folks, and sense till you couldn't rest. He never was much of a man for dabblin in futures. It was mostly all spots with him. And whilst he didn't keep no books, he could sell a hundred dollars worth of stuff on a credit to a hundred different men like today, and keep the accounts straight in his head for twenty years to come. The mainest thing with old man Zeb was his head. It was as long as a flour barrel and as level as a squash, which the general machinery of it run as smooth and steady and reglar as a clock—never missed a lick nor jumped a cog.

But I reckon no doubts when the good Lord made Zeb Milligan he busted the moulds and took out and quit. In so far back as the records run the onlyest man exactly like him that ever breathed the breath of life and walked the downward road into the valley of dry bones, you understand, lived and died right there at Dooley's Cross Roads and in the surroundin country.

Old man Zeb was red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed, but the old people still livin in that settlement till now will tell you that his strange and pecurious appearments didn't make a blame bit of difference with the general shape and size and gearins of his head. He first turned up in the settlement many years ago as an orphant boy that had run away from his folks way back in Georgy, and all he had in the way of this word's good's was a few plain duds tied up in the wallet on his back. In the common run of time he didn't turn out to be a Governor or a General or a President like so many poor orphant boys which you have heard tell of and never saw. But he took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves and spit in his hands and went to work. He took his text and stuck to it. About the time he got good grown he married himself off with a peart and stirrin woman and opened up the little store at the Cross Roads. Right then and there he drove his pegs down, and there he stayed and stuck and stuck and stayed till he got old and rich and ready for the last roundup.

A Cat in the Meal Tub.

By-and-by one day it come to pass that a new man by the name of Milligan moved into the settlement and went to farmin of it down on the head waters of Deer Creek. His fool name was John Henry Milligan, and it leaked out presently that he had come from Georgy and was a half brother to old man Zeb. But as time went by everybody took notice that the Milligans over at the Cross Roads and the Milligans down on Deer Creek didn't mix and mingle and keep company together very much to speak of.

It stood to reason with me that there must be a cat of some description in the family meal tub, so I saddled up and lit out one mornin and went over to the Cross Roads to look for the bristles and the claws.

"I don't give a durn for no durn man that don't give a durn for me," says old man Zeb soon as I got him good warm and wound up on the main question. "I am the onlyest full blood and genuine Milligan in this country, and so far as I know they have stopped the breed back there in Georgy. I was left an orphant boy, you understand, when I want no bigger than a pound of soap after a hard day's washin. In the main time the old man he had took and married his secont wife before he died, Which his widder she had one son by the name of John Henry. For a hundred years before that time, which I could give you the proofs if I was back there in Georgy, all the men folks and some of the women of the Milligan generation had been red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed. Now I have got the general family marks and brands on me, which you can see for yourself, Rufe. They stick out like a whitewashed fence around a country graveyard. I moved my washin from the State of Georgy when I was nothin but a yearlin boy, and right now if I was to go back there in the old settlement every man I met in the road would say good mornin Mister Milligan.

"But the widder's son John Henry, whilst he was borned into the family, you understand, never did have the reglar Milligan appearments and he ain't got them till yet. You will take particlar notice, Rufe, that he is neither red-headed nor freckly-faceted nor web-footed. The widder she maintains all along that he was a Milligan, but he never did look like a Milligan and durn my cats if I believe till yet that he is a Milligan. The widder and John Henry use to poke fun at me because I was red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed, and that didn't sound like the Milligans by a whole lot. They pitched in after the old man died, you understand, and brow-beat and bull-ragged and ding-donged and bedeviled at me till finally at last I had to pack my wallet and run away from home.

"Now bless goodness here comes John Henry pilin in from Georgy and tryin to scrape up acquaintance and claim kin with me. But he didn't give a continential durn for me back there in Georgy then, and I don't give a conti nenti al durn for him down here at Dooley's Cross Roads now."

Played a Waiting Game.

Thus and so the game stood for years and years. The Milligans over at Dooley's Cross Roads and the Milligans down on Deer Creek didn't mix and mingle and keep company together very much to speak of. John Henry talked a heap with his mouth around amongst the neighbors and tried his level blamdest to put out some scandulatious reports on old man Zeb, and old man Zeb he paid his double-breasted compliments to John Henry in plain United States without any Bible words to speak of. And naturally of course in the run of time they worked up a terrible high pitch of hate and rivalment amongst themselves, and the family split got worse and worse and still more wider every day.

Finally at last one day old man Zeb sent for me in a monstrous hurry to come over to the Cross Roads right away immediately, which he wanted to hold a little confabulation with me. When I got over there the old man was walkin up and down his front piaza, wavin his hands and gesturin and talkin to himself and carryin on at a high and furious lick. He was so mortal mad till he was foamin at the mouth and cussin John Henry for every livin thing he could lay his togue to.

"If I can but only live twelve months longer I'll be doubly dadburned if I don't scotch the snake and kill it too," says he. "Some people have called me everything they could think of, Rufe, exceptin a fool, but if I can't beat John Henry out at his own game, then I am not only a natural-born fool, but the durndest biggest fool—and more different sorts of a fool—that ever lived in this green old world."

I wondered in my soul what in the thunderations had got the matter with old man Zeb all of a sudden and I didn't have to wait so very long to find out.

"I have found out the whenceness as to what brought John Henry into these parts, and likewise also the wherefores of his hangin around here so infernal reglar and constant," the old man went on presently. "He had found out some how back there in Georgy that I was tolerable well fixed in regards to this world's goods, and somebody must of told him how I come by the old Callins plantation down on big Wolf creek. You see the plantation come down to us through my good wife Jo Anna, which you understand she was a Callins before we married. The old Callins plantation, which is way yonder the finest in these diggins, has come down from one generation to the next all along the line, and accordin to the will of old man Asey Callins when we are dead and gone it will go to the next of kin. The Callinses are all now dead and buried, you understand, and me and Jo Anna ain't got no children to take the plantation when we are gone. Whereas if somethin can't be done to block the game the man that calls himself John Henry Milligan, which he don't look like the Milligans and I have some durn serious doubts in the case, will move his washin right on down to the old Callins place, the finest and most richest plantation in this country. Somethin must be done, Rufe. Me and Jo Anna are both knockin along down towards the foot of the hill—both of us turned seventy and livin on borrowed time right now. But your uncle Zeb Milligan aint gone nowheres as yet, Rufe, and somethin must necessary compelled to be done in orderment to scotch the snake and kill it. Proverbly John Henry thinks he can play a waitin game and win that plantation. Well, proverbly, he mought, and then again proverbly he mought, not. But at any rates if I can have my own way about it, Rufe, that plantation never will be handed down to a man that spells his name Milligan, but is neither red-headed nor freckly-faceted nor web-footed."

"Where Did That Baby Come From."

After some other and further confabulation old man Zeb cooled off and I went on back home. That was in the summer time, and along in the fall of the next year after that the dadblamdest most terriblest confusionment you ever heard tell of broke out one day over there at Dooley's Cross Roads. A bustin fine baby had turned all of a sudden in the Milligan family, and old man Zeb was swellin and swashin around on a high horse. The new baby at the Milligan place was a boy, you understand, and he was also red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed.

By dinner time that day the news had leaked out down into the Deer Creek regions, and John Henry he come bilin over to the Cross Roads like the woods was on fire. He couldn't believe the news till he rode along by old man Zeb's house and heard the baby squallin and carryin on natural and big as life. Presently he met some of the neighbors that had been to see the sight, and when they told him it was red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed he got pale clean back behind his ears.

After that John Henry put out some scandalatious reports as to where old man Zeb found the baby, but that was neither here nor there with old man Zeb. The mainest thing with him at that time was a baby, and a Milligan baby.

The next day old man Zeb hooked up a horse to his spring wagon and went over in the Flat Woods and brought a young widder by the name of Callie Hasselton home with him to help at Jo Anna nurse the baby. And between them three they named the baby Zeb, and he waxed fat and strong as the days went by. When finally at last old man Zeb and aunt Jo Anna died little Zeb was way up somewheres in his teens. The widder Hasselton she lived over there at the Cross Roads with him till she was about grown and then she died.

And so it come to pass that John Henry played a waitin game and lost. A man by the name of Milligan now owns the old Callins plantation, you understand, but he is red-headed and freckly-faceted and web-footed.

BEGINNING OF THE DEFICIENCY.

Effect of the McKinley Bill on the Nation's Finances.

Our republican friends are fond of talking about the deficiency in treasury receipts. They unhesitatingly ascribe all this to the passage of the new tariff bill. They say that it is not yielding revenue enough, and they hold out the idea that it will never afford sufficient money to pay the expenses of the government.

It is an odd proof of the rapidity with which everybody forgets former conditions that comparatively few now remember that after the last presidential election practically everybody recognized the need of changing the tariff laws, because the McKinley bill was not affording revenue enough. As to the republicans, they were so hot for a revision of the tariff that they insisted that a special session of congress should be called for the purpose in March or April, 1893. They expressed the hope that the revision might be carried out in such a way as not to destroy American industries, but, at all events, they wished the work done at once. In February, 1893, Secretary Foster prepared to issue bonds, but was stopped by the president, who preferred to transfer a bankrupt treasury to his successor. Everybody understood that a revision of the laws was necessary in order that the government should have the means to meet the enlarged scale of expenditure, rendered necessary by the legislation of the Fifty-first congress.

Some remarks submitted by Senator Gorman near the close of the recent session of congress, with reference to the present deficiency of revenue, have often been gleefully quoted by the republicans. This speech of Senator Gorman was withheld for revision, and has only recently appeared in the supplement to the Congressional Record. An examination of the full text of the speech shows that it contains a good deal of matter which republican newspapers do not care to quote. As they have made Senator Gorman their own witness by introducing what he had to say about the present administration, we will undertake to give some of the results of a cross-examination.

In one of the tables submitted by Senator Gorman he shows that on the 30th of June, 1890, during the administration of Mr. Harrison, there was a cash balance, excluding the gold reserve and available cash for current expenses, of nearly $90,000,000. This was while the McKinley bill was under consideration, but before its passage. From that date to the close of last year the expenditures exceeded the receipts and available cash by $56,816,-119.83.

Later on, alluding to the excess of expenditures, Mr. Gorman said:

"Mr. President, that was the case before the present administration came into power. During the last administration the very question was presented here, and I stated the views then as I do now, that the revenue laws up to that date had failed to produce a sufficient amount of money by $150,000,000. It was nearer $250,000,000. When the present administration came into power they were interfered with by the commercial conditions that no legislation of congress was responsible for. They have been intensified in the last two years. The revenues have fallen off and the expenditures have increased year by year."

Mr. Gorman then proceeded to give figures showing that the revenues for the two fiscal years from July 1, 1890, to June 30, 1892, amounted to $747,500,-231.55, and the expenditures for the same period to $792,377,527.28, showing a deficiency of $44,827,295.73. All of this period was under the Harrison administration, and all but three months of it under the McKinley bill. For the fiscal year 1893 the figures of Senator Gorman show an excess of expenditures over receipts of between four and five millions. The fiscal year 1893 was mostly under the administration of Mr. Harrison and wholly under the McKinley bill. Thus in these three years the deficiency of revenue, as compared with expenditures, amounted to nearly fifty million dollars.

The fiscal year 1894 was wholly under the McKinley bill, and showed a deficiency of $70,000,000 in revenues as compared with expenditures. The last six months of 1894, forming part of the present fiscal year, showed a deficiency of some $27,000,000. Two-thirds of this period was under the new tariff, and one-third under the McKinley bill. Of the total deficiency of $146,809,224.03, between July 1, 1890, and January 1, 1895, only $27,000,000 occurred in the last six months of 1894, and only two-thirds of this time was under the new tariff bill. Thus, of the deficiency up to January 1, 1895, the McKinley bill produced $120,000,000.

In view of these statements, what amount of wisdom is there in the current proposition to reenact the McKinley bill in order to produce sufficient revenue? — Louisville Courier-Journal.

Income Tax Revenues.

Though the central principle of the income tax remains, the division of the supreme court invites further attacks and the law cannot be deemed settled until a positive affirmation or rejection is obtained. By the elimination of rents and the interest on state and municipal bonds, the revenue to be derived from the tax will be reduced. The proceeds will, however, be very useful to the treasury in meeting the difficulty caused by the extravagant continuing appropriations of the notorious Fifty-first congress and the depression of business. Luckily for Secretary Carlisle, the business revival is rapid. The operation of the new tariff law is as satisfactory to the treasury as to consumers. The revenue cut off by the decision will be small when compared with the total receipts and will not materially affect the government's resources.—St. Louis Republic.

DISTORTING FACTS.

McKinley's Efforts to Deceive the People Regarding the Tariff.

No recent political speech has attracted more general attention than that which Gov. McKinley delivered at Hartford. In many respects it was a remarkable utterance and there were tears in the voice of the little Napoleon when he insisted that the American people failed to appreciate the institutions under which they live. When an analysis of his eloquence came to be made it was made apparent that his patriotic solicitude was not for the institutions of the fathers, preserved and strengthened through intervening generations, but a gnawing fear that the peculiar principles of government which he had done so much to make operative had waned in popularity and were remembered like a calamitous event, for the evil wrought. The governor was talking for an ambitious purpose and conveniently withheld the deference due to truth.

Pointing to the circumstance that in 1894, under the new tariff law, internal revenue receipts were $155,000,-000 while the customs receipts were but $131,000,000, he drew the conclusion that more burdens were imposed on our people than formerly and less upon the goods of foreign countries. Somehow he neglected to quote from a recent official report showing that both internal and tariff taxes per capita were lighter in 1894 than under the McKinley law. In 1890 and 1891 the per capita internal tax was $2.28; in 1892, $2.35, and in 1893, $2.41, while in 1894 the burden upon the people per capita for internal taxes was but $2.15. Thus the democratic law has benefited the people even in the species of tax which the governor cites as a democratic means of oppression.

So far as tariff taxes are concerned the relief was much greater. The tariff tax per capita in 1892 under the McKinley abuse was $2.66, and in 1893 was $2.97; yet in 1894, with the results of democratic reform in operation, it was $1.90, showing a very appreciable and gratifying reduction of the expenses which the people must bear. With these misstatements upon a subject regarding which the governor holds himself an infallible authority, it is not surprising that in dealing with other matters of public interest he should show himself utterly at sea. He is so defiant of the verities of history as to make the astonishing statement that in March, 1893, the Harrison administration turned over to the Cleveland administration a surplus of $124,000,000.

This can be regarded as nothing less than a willful misrepresentation and expressive of the utmost contempt for the intelligence of the American people. There was not a dollar of available cash turned over, apart from the gold reserve, and even then Secretary Foster had given orders for the preparation of plates from which to print bonds to be sold for gold. What the Harrison administration did leave was a bankrupt treasury as a result of corrupt special and extravagant legislation to meet which cost the country one of the most trying periods of depression it has ever encountered. All that the modest government asks from the people is a chance to reenact the laws which brought the nation to the verge of financial ruin.—Detroit Free Press.

INCREASED WAGES.

Business Improving Since the Adoption of the New Tariff Law.

Several increases of wages—some of them affecting large groups of employes—have been reported in the last few days. The most important of these advances are those which have been made in the coke district of Western Pennsylvania and in two prominent woolen mills. The list is as follows:

"H. C. Frick & Co., the leading producers of coke in the western Pennsylvania district from which the iron manufacturers of the Pittsburgh and eastern Ohio districts are supplied: an increase of fifteen per cent.; followed by an increase of sixteen per cent. for the employes of Frick & Co.'s foremost competitor. These changes practically cause a similar increase throughout the district, and affect the earnings of thousands of men employed there.

"Moses T. Stevens & Sons, manufacturers of woolens at three places in New Hampshire; an increase of fifteen per cent., being a restoration of the rates paid before the reduction of last year. The output of this firm is said to be larger than that of any other in the industry.

"Thomas Dolan & Co., manufacturers of woolens in Philadelphia: an increase of fifteen per cent. to weavers. Mr. Dolan is president of the (high tariff) Manufacturers' club. It is reported that other manufacturers of woolens in Philadelphia were awaiting the action of Dolan & Co., and will now make similar increases in their mills.

"Globe iron works, Cleveland, O.: increase of ten per cent., being a restoration of the rate paid before the reduction of ten per cent. one year ago.

"Wholfender, Shore & Co., mills at Cardington, near Chester, Pa.; increase of five per cent., or half of the reduction made some time ago. It is expected that the other half will soon be restored.

"Washington mills, Lawrence, Mass.; increase announced recently. Between three and four thousand persons are employed.

"The American Wool and Cotton Reporter published a few days ago the following statement, which had been made 'by the representative of one of the leading commission houses:' 'Our mills have returned all but ten per cent of the reduction in wages during the last two years, and are now considering the advisability of making a further advance of ten per cent.' Name of the firm or company not given."

The tariff was revised seven months ago. Our high-tariff friends have contended that the reductions of wages made in 1894—the causes of which they have industriously and persistently misrepresented—could not be followed by increases so long as the new tariff should stand. There has been no increase of tariff duties in the last two months, or since August 28. Still, there are prominent manufacturers who voluntarily have increased wages in the last few weeks, and it is quite probable that others will follow their example. —N. Y. Times.

——Hon. Thomas B. Reed evidently hadn't read the late reports of the treasury when he wrote his "last tribute" to the Fifty-third congress. He assumes that there is an immense treasury deficit in consequence of the reduction of tariff taxes, whereas the records show that the deficit is now small and growing beautifully less. About the time the presidential election is on the deficit will be changed to a surplus, and business will be as prosperous as before the odious McKinley law strangled industry and destroyed prosperity.—Kansas City Times.

——It is almost comical to see the advocates of taxed wool insisting that wages in the woolen mills are not being advanced and that their business is not benefited by free raw material. It only demonstrates anew the truth of the saying that none are so blind as those who will not see.—Boston Herald.

Consumption kills more people than rifle balls. It is more deadly than any of the much dreaded epidemics. It is a stealthy, gradual, slow disease. It penetrates the whole body. It is in every drop of blood. It seems to work only at the lungs, but the terrible drain and waste go on all over the body. To cure consumption, work on the blood, make it pure, rich and wholesome, build up the wasting tissues, put the body into condition for a fight with the dread disease.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery fights in the right way. It will cure 98 per cent. of all cases if taken during the early stages of the disease. Its first action is to put the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys into good working order. That makes digestion good and assimilation quick and thorough. It makes sound, healthy flesh. That is half the battle. That makes the "Discovery" good for those who have not consumption, but who are lighter and less robust than they ought to be.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE

FULLY FIFTY PEOPLE ARE KILLED.

Sioux County Late in the Afternoon Devasted by a Terrific Wind Storm. Heartrending Scenes the Result of the Storm.

SIOUX CITY, I., May 4.—Sioux county was devastated by a terrific cyclone yesterday afternoon. The storm came from the northwest and struck Sioux Centre, a small town 45 miles north of this point at 4 o'clock. Telegraphic reports from the scene of the storm are very meagre, the wires being down but it is understood that a considerable number were killed and injured. The first reports were received by the Sioux City and Northern railroad from their agent at Sioux Centre. The despatch read:

Cyclone passed three miles northwest of here. School house near town blown down. Teacher killed and several children killed and injured. Exact number and names have not yet been learned. Whole country in the track of the storm devastated. Sioux City and Northern tracks between Perkins and Doon washed out for several miles.

Dispatches from Sioux Centre at 8:30 say that three school houses and at least twenty residences and barns near that place were swept away. At the school house two teachers and three pupils were killed and many injured. Two women were found dead about 6 o'clock not far from the point where one of the school buildings stood. One man who arrived in Sioux Centre late in the evening reported that his house was blown away and his family killed. He himself escaped and says that at least a hundred people must have been killed. Parties have been sent out from Hull, Sioux Centre and Orange City, neighboring towns but their work is being carried on in total darkness and in the midst of a tremendous wind and rain storm. It is consequently progressing slowly. A number of bodies have already been recovered although the exact number cannot be learned. Every one is violently excited and definite accounts cannot be obtained. It is said that Perkins a small town between Sioux Centre and Doon was directly in the path of the storm and was almost entirely wiped out. The wires leading to it are all down. The tracks are all washed out and the roads cannot be safely travelled over, owing to the manner in which they were gullied out by the rain. It is consequently no easy matter to reach it.

Late yesterday evening news was received from Sibley to the effect that a storm struck there at 5 p. m., destroying the house of John Watterson, killing Mrs. Watterson and injuring Watterson and his son. No names can yet be learned of the people injured about Sioux Centre and Perkins. The Sioux City and Northern train which arrived at 10 o'clock last evining brought thirty passengers who witnessed the storm. They reported that thirteen dead bodies had been brought into Sioux Centre at 6 p. m. It is estimated that fifty people must have been killed.

Word was received from Sioux Centre at 11 o'clock last night that Miss Anna Marsden was among the killed. She was a teacher at what was known as the Coombs school house, seven miles north of Sioux Centre. Fully one-half of her pupils are said to have been killed or injured, but none of their names have yet been learned. The parents of many of the children escaped the storm and are nearly frantic with anxiety to learn whether their little ones are dead or alive. Miss Marsden's brother, who taught school two miles north of the Coombs building, was also killed. As nearly as can be learned the towns which suffered were Perkins, Sibley Doon, Hull and Sioux Centre.

Last year in four weeks ending April 26, liabilities were $8,826,862, of which $3,687,320 of manufacturing and $4,677,699 of trading concerns. The week's failures are 231 in the United States against 233 last year, and 34 in Canada against 35 last year.

REPRESENTATIVE McCLEARY.

Don't Think Free Silver Will Bother Minnesota Rebublicans.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Representative McCleary, of Minnesota, who is in Washington for a few days, does not think the free silver question in Minnesota will give the republicans much trouble, although he sees a possibility of the democrats becoming entangled over it. He said:

The republicans anticipated this movement a year ago and we discounted it in the last campaign. We brought the people right up to the question then and faced the music. I do not think it will bother us much. For a few weeks recently there seemed to be a revival of free silver talk in the state, but it has already subsided to a considerable extent. Our people are sober, reasoning people, and they pretty generally figure out the right course.

I am glad the silver question is being brought up at this time. It gives us plenty of opportunity to talk the thing over and time enough for the movement to play itself out if the people finally conclude that free coinage is not desirable for this government to undertake single handed.

The democrats in Minnesota are in pretty bad shape over the silver question. That comes of training with the populists. They have been harnessed up with the populists and by contract have absorbed some of their ideas. They are badly divided on the silver question, and there is trouble in store for them.

Mr. McCleary, speaking of the presidential outlook, said Senator Davis will be the first choice of the Minnesota delegation, if Mr. Davis wants to become a candidate. He said Mr. Reid, of Maine, is very popular in Minnesota and will summon formidable strength in case Mr. Davis does not aspire to the nominatian.

AN ABSOLUTE DISAGREEMENT.

Different Opinions as to the Plans for the New Gunboats.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—For the first time in its history, the board of naval bureau chiefs have come to an absolute disagreement, and have been obliged to so report to Secretary Herbert, leaving him to determine which side was right. The disagreement grows out of the designs for the six new gunboats, for which plans were prepared by the construction bureau, and there are two reports on the subject, one signed by four members of the board, totally disapproving of the plans, and one signed by two members, vigorously upholding them. The four members object that the boats proposed will draw fourteen feet of water, and so would not meet the requirements of the act of Congress which describes them as light-draft gunboats. They also hold that the fitting of the vessels with a complete full-sail power is a mistake, as the experience of the department with such vessels as the Adams shows clearly that no steamer fitted sails can beat against the wind, and therefore the sails will be almost useless in average conditions. On the other hand, the supporters of the plans undertake to demonstrate that the vessels will be efficient and much more economical than boats without sails, arguing that the criticisms of the others are founded on vessels not given full sail power, and giving figures to support their assertions.

STUDENTS BURN A HOUSE.

Result of Hostilities Between University of Michigan Sophomores and Freshmen.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 4.—H. W. Standart, of Detroit, toastmaster of the freshman class at the University of Michigan, was kidnapped by the sophomores Tuesday night and an attempt was made to learn from him the toasts for the coming banquet, a much desired secret, but before the object was accomplished fifty upper classmen rescued him.

Yesterday morning the house where the affair took place was found burned. Next, John H. McLellan, of Lexington, Ky., another freshman, was captured, and his face painted with nitrate of silver. President Angell will endeavor to detect the guilty parties.

Miners and Operators Agree.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 4.—The coal miners and operators of the Jellico district reached an agreement as to prices last night after a two days' consultation. The new scale was fixed without trouble and the miners will go to work under it at once.

CHANGE ON THE RAIL

The Southern and C. H. & D. Interests Amicably Settled.

SOUTHERN ENLARGES ITS HOLDINGS.

Control in the Capital Stock of the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific to Be Equally Held by the Southern and C. H. & D.

NEW YORK, May 4.—The Southern railway and Cincinnatti, Hamilton & Dayton railroad interests have settled all difficulties as to the Cincinnati extension bonds and the proposals underlying them on a basis entirely satisfactory to both parties.

The Southern railway yesterday took control of the Alabama Great Southern Railway company by the election of Samuel Spencer, Charles H. Coster, J. P. Morgan jr., Francis Lynde Stetson, W. G. Oakman, A. J. Thomas, and George W. Maslin, as a majority of the board of directors, with Samuel Spencer as chairman.

Under the terms of the settlement the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton interests retire entirely from the Alabama, Great Southern, the Southern railway having acquired there entire holdings. The control in capital stock of the Cincinnati, New Orleans & Texas Pacific company, is to be owned and held equally and jointly by the Southern Railway and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton interests and it is hoped a reorganization of that company or a new lease or the purchase of the Cincinnati Southern can be effected and the line continued under neutral management to be operated independently, but preferably to the interest of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton on the north, and the Southern and the Alabama Great Southern on the south. This insures harmony betwen the parties, stops litigation and fully protects the interests of Cincinnati in the manner in which her citizens seemed to prefer. The Southern Railway company retains the ownership of the old Louisville Southern line which insures also protection to the city of Louisville.

THE ILLNESS OF GRESHAM.

President Cleveland's Anxiety to Keep Americanism Out of Sight.

WASHINGTON, May 4. — The serious illness of Secretary Gresham has thrown the entire charge of the Nicaraguan affair into the hands of President Cleveland, and therefore no one can expect any turn towards Americanism in the policy. The president will surely not let Assistant Secretary Uhl take charge of this Central American trouble, because he fears some patriotism may be injected into it. The president remembers how, when the secretary of state was ill before and the Allianca was fired upon, Mr. Uhl acted the American and sent that noted dispatch to Spain demanding immediate apology. A burnt child dreads the fire, Mr. Cleveland is not going to let Mr. Uhl send any more dispatches. The matter, therefore, rests in charge of Mr. Cleveland on this side and Mr. Bayard in London, and England will now have no fear.

The serious turn in Secretary Gresham's illness will necessitate his absence from the state department for weeks. It was his desire to be at his desk again when he was sick last time that caused this setback. The doctors are now saying that Mr. Gresham will be obliged to take a long rest. Yesterday his trouble was complicated by passing a gall stone, and the greatest care is being exercised to keep him quiet and removed from any annoyance or anxiety.

THE WEST VIRGINIA TROUBLE.

Reports From the Mining Districts of a More Serious Nature.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., May 4.—Reports from the mining districts along the Norfolk and Western are of a more serious character than yesterday. Several coal cars are reported burned at different points along the line. About one hundred colored miners from the Elkhorn region came to this city last night on a freight train and started east by foot, claiming they were going to the mines on New river. Some think they are lurking in these parts with a view of destroying property down on this end of the line of the Norfolk and Western. A gatling gun was sent to the Bluefield militia.

KILLED WHILE STEALING A RIDE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 4.—Thomas Sayre, aged 22, hailing from Nashville, Tenn., while stealing a ride on a south bound Louisville and Nashville train at Blount Springs, a few minutes after midnight yesterday, fell under the cars and was ground to pieces. Letters were found on his person by which he was identified. His body was brought here and prepared, after which it was sent to his mother in Nashville.

Young, president of the state equal rights association; Miss Helen Morris Lewis, of North Carolina; General R. R. Patton, member of the house from Richland introduced the speakers. The efforts of the women orators were liberally applauded by the audience. Several leading newspapers and a good many prominent citizens are favoring the movement. The ladies are canvassing the state.

PALMETTO'S LEGAL BATTLES.

Hearing Involving the Constitutionality of the State Registration Laws.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 4.—The hearing in the important injunction case involving the constitutionality of the South [illegible] registration laws and constitutional convention act, was continued yesterday. Mr. C. A. Douglass for the complainant made a powerful argument, starting at 10 o'clock yesterday and continuing till 4:10 p. m., with a recess for dinner. He riddled the laws with legal shot from no end of authorities. Mr. George S. Mower then began and completed his argument for the state, which was simply a citation of authorities. Judge Goff interrupted him many times with pertinent questions, indicating that his mind is pretty clear on the case. The general idea now seems to be that the decision is going to be against the state. Three more arguments consuming four or five hours are to be made today. The case will scarcely be concluded till this evening. The dispensary case will not be reached until Monday.

IMPROVEMENT IS MANIFEST.

Business Conditions Remain Good Notwithstanding the Labor Troubles.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Bradstreets today says:

The manifest improvement in many lines of general trade has resulted in an increase in the volume of business notwithstanding the impending idleness of 9,000 Rhode Island worsted mill operatives and many in other industrial lines. Industrial unrest now takes form of striking for higher wages. This week about 50 000 industrial employes have struck, and the tendency does not seem to be checked. About 3,000 people are reported to have obtained higher wages without striking.

Nashville and Galveston report some little improvement in the volume of business, but they prove the exceptions among southern cities. Agricultural conditions in Tennessee are said to be favorable. In Texas the coast country still needs rain. At Chattanoga and Augusta the week's business has been of somewhat smaller volume although at the former some of the manufacturing industries are better employed than one year ago. There is only a fair business in cotton goods and prices remain firm. No gain is looked for until demand for all supplies become general.

Police Commissioners are Now Asked to Resign Their Offices.

NEW YORK, May 4.—Police Inspector Thomas F. McAvoy of the second inspection district, asked for retirement yesterday afternoon and within an hour his request was granted by the police board in spite of a determined opposition by Commissioner Andrews. Mayor Strong has requested Police Commissioners Michael Kerwin and Charles H. Murray to resign. The mayor has asked them to do so in so many words. For two months it has been common report that Mayor Strong wanted to get rid of Messrs Kerwin and Murray, but he wanted them to resign of their own will. The mayor had selected the men whom he would appoint as their successors. Messrs Kerwin and Murray, however refused to resign.

MAJ. WALLACE DEAD

ATLANTA, May 4.—Major Campbell Wallace, one of Georgia's oldest and for thirty years one of her most prominent citizens, died at 11:30 o'clock last night. Descended from the Scotch Wallace, he was born in North Carolina in 1805. In early life he was a merchant while a resident of Knoxville. In 1853 Major Wallace became the president of the East Tennesse and Georgia railroad, building it up in a splendid property and extending its lines from Cleveland to Chattanooga and Knoxville. During the war he rendered valuable aid to the confederate government by removing troops from one point to another.

After the war Major Wallace came to Atlanta. He was on his way to Bartow county to purchase a farm on which he expected to live when he was placed by Governor Jenkins in charge of the Western and Atlantic railroad as Superintendent. This was in 1886. He devoted himself with all his skill and talents as an organizer to the work of rebuilding the road, and succeeded in making it the best road in the state. Afterward he was banker in Atlanta and was chirman of the Georgia railroad commission. He accumulated a large fortune. His life was pure and he was the friend of all young men, numbers of whom he helped start in business. He leaves several children.

BUILDING BOOM IN ATLANTA.

The Exposition Company Offers a Bonus on the Construction of Cheap Hotels.

ATLANTA, May 4. — The executive committee of the Cotton States and International exposition has determined to offer a bonus on the construction of temporary hotels to accommodate visitors. Advices received from all the states indicate a great crush in Atlanta, and the exposition has determined to take vigorous measure to relieve the pressure. Atlanta has in progress more buildings than ever before. It is almost impossible to rent a house at a reasonable price, and buildings are going up by the hundreds in every part of the city. Boarding houses are multiplying, and it has become absolutely necessary to build temporary structures by the wholesale. In order to give a strong stimulus to such work, the executive committee determined yesterday to offer a bonus of about thirty-three per cent of the cost of the structure, and will leave a large margin to profit for the builders. This is expected to cause a rapid inflow of investments. A special committee, including a number of the ablest men on the board, together with the standing committee of public comfort, is charged with the execution of these plans, and the lumber men of Atlanta will have a meeting shortly to take concerted measures for the end in view.

YOUNG GIRLS SPIRITED AWAY.

Two Daughters of an Alabama Farmer Attacked by Negroes.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 4.—William Hayes' two daughters, aged sixteen and eighteen, living near Hard Ridge, Daley county, while on their way to a field, were yesterday attacked by two unknown negroes and spirited away. Since then posses have been searching the woods but in vain. It is thought the girls have been outraged and murdered and their bodies secreted in the woods.

Later.—A special from Clintonville, Ala., in speaking of the two Hayes girls who were said to have been captured by two negroes says: "The girls were found by their father in Pike county where they were chopping cotton. They cannot or will not tell anything about their absence further than to say the negroes suspected knew nothing of their movements."

THE GOLD MEN IN CONTROL.

Delegates to the Cook County (Ill) Democratic Convention Eelected by Primary.

CHICAGO, May 4.—Primaries for the selection of delegates to the Cook county convention of the democratic party in connection with the called state monetary convention, were held in the wards and country towns yesterday. Harmony prevailed because the Honest Money League of Illinois, which represents the anti-free coinage of silver wing of the democratic party, had issued an appeal to the party voters to have nothing to do with the county or state convention and the selection of delegates. Nevertheless the sentiment in favor of bimetallism or the objects of the state convention was made known by a large number of voters, considering it was a primary, lacking the spoils of office feature.

SENATOR CULLOM TALKS WAR.

The Illinois Statesman Says England Must Leave Nicaragua, or Fight.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 4. — Senator Cullom, of Illinois, arrived by private car from Los Angles last night, accompanied by Mrs. Cullom and friends. In an interview on the forcible occupation of Corinto by British forces, Senator Cullom said:

If a plain and emphatic protest had been made by the United States government England would not have occupied Corinto. Now, as she is there, I believe in using force, if necessary, to get her out. There are two things which the people of the United States have set their hearts on, and they are the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine and the building of the Nicaragua canal. The administration that gets in the way of the people in these matters will be put out of the way. There are some things that will not stand, long suffering as we are. I do not apprehend that England will go to such steps as is prophesied, yet we do not know what her insolent and dictatorial policy may lead her to attempt. One thing is certain, that she must get away from Nicaragua, or there will be war between the United States and England.

United States Marshals Will Attempt to Subdue the North Dakota Braves.

DEVIL'S LAKE, N. D., May 4.—United States Marshal Cronan, with a large force of deputies went to St. John's yesterday to arrest the Indians accused of stealing government wood. Three hundred Indians are preparing to resist. They claim the land, twenty-four by thirty-one miles, where they cut the timber, was never ceded to the government and belongs to them. They burned the residence of one government witness Tuesday. The whites are becoming alarmed. A number of women and children have moved here. The male portion of the population, well provided with firearms, takes relays in watching the homes at night.

"M'KINLEY," SAYS GEN. RAUM.

Thinks the Nicaragua Question Will be an Issue in the Next Campaign.

CINCINNATI, O., May 4.—Gen. Green B. Raum, ex-United States pension commissioner, who was in the city yesterday, said: "I think McKinley is the man. The McKinley tariff law is the best measure of the kind devised in the whole history of the government.

"This Nicaragua question will be an issue in the next campaign," he continued. "The administration's course in supinely looking on while British troops were landed at Corinto was simply outrageous."

THROUGH ALABAMA

Current News for the Week Throughout the State.

ALABAMA IRON TO BE SENT TO EUROPE

Iron Companies of the State Send Representatives Abroad for Foreign Trade. Other Interesting News Throughout the State.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 1.—The Tennessee Coal and Iron railroad company will send a representative to Europe in a few weeks to look into the matter of placing orders for iron. The Tennessee company now makes pig iron, in this district, cheaper than it can be made anywhere else on the globe. A few tons of Alabama pig iron were shipped to England two or three years ago, but no systematic effort was made to follow that shipment up with others and hence no other shipments were made.

The Tennessee company's agent will go to all leading iron manufacturing districts of the European countries and there demonstrate that Alabama iron of a good grade can be put in those countries at a cheaper rate than even England makes it. Several shipments of sample iron will precede the Tennessee company's agent and be in waiting for him when he arrives at the different places to be visited by him. Alabama iron manufacturers have recently determined to extend their market and push sales where they have hitherto been unknown. In this matter the foreign field is not being neglected. The Howard-Harrison Iron company of Bessemer, iron pipe manufacturers, have an agent now on his way to Japan to bid on two large orders for pipe.

COLUMBIANA, MAY 9, 1895.

A POLITICIAN getting on the fence will invariably be found to have his eye on a post.

ORDINARY good nature in the theatre can pardon the ladies' big sleeves, but it's hard to look over their hats.

J. L. HAND, of Pelham, Ga., is known as the Watermelon King. He will have several thousands of acres under seed this spring and expects to ship hundreds of carloads of melons to make life worth living in the northern states.

AN exchange says a traveling man visited a town where the merchants didn't advertise and saw only one busy man in the whole town. That was a fellow who had the itch and a Waterbury watch. When he wasn't scratching he was winding his watch.

THE Tennesse Coal, Iron & Railway Company intends to demonstrate to the world that iron can be made cheaper in Alabama than anywhere else on earth and for that purpose are establishing agencies throughout Europe and will push the sale of Alabama iron in the old countries.

About one thousand dollars in bills have been chewed up by rats in John Faragher's house in Chicago. John had stored them away for safe keeping and the rats made nests out of them. He had lost faith in banks since '73, when one of them burst with eleven thousand dollars of his money in its keeping.

IN THE court room a lawyer may call a man a liar, scoundrel, villain, or thief, and no one makes any complaint when the court adjourns. If a newspaper man prints such reflections on any man's character there is usually a libel suit or a dead editor. Must be because every one believes the newspaper man and no one believes the lawyer.—Exchange.

THE free coinage of silver, as it is understood by the various classes, is a curious thing. One of the "natives" got off this as an argument in its favor: Yes, I am for free coinage of silver, because it will give us a per capita circulation of $50, and as there are six of us in my family, this would give me $3,000 in cash to start on." Now, this actually happened in the city of Tuskaloosa. This disciple of the Birmingham State Johnson, Morgan, Pugh et als., is still permitted to run at large untagged, unclaimed and unowned.—Tuskalooso Gazette.

BECAUSE Grover Cleveland favors sound money and is opposed to the free coinage of silver without international agreement, nothing he says, writes or does seems to meet the approval of the average one-idea free silver advocate. According to their interpretation he is a monster, and is endeavoring to send the country to the "demnition bowwows." The Louisville Courier-Journal never told a greater truth than when it remarked some time ago that it has been Cleveland who stood bravely between this country and financial ruin since August, 1893.—Birmingham News.

THE Savannah News remarks that, if there is a bond of sympathy between wheat and silver strong enough to preserve their parity in the market as has been alleged, we may presently see silver commanding $1. 29 an ounce without free coinage. It is said that there is in Chicago a combination of "bull" operators who have determined to force wheat to $1. In case they succeed, if the silverite theory is correct the price of silver must follow the price as it goes up. Dollar wheat being the basis of their calculations, presumably when wheat touches $1 again, silver will go to $1.29 and the trouble will be over.

"For fully two years, I suffered from rheumatism, and was frequently in such a condition that I could hardly walk. I spent some time in Hot Springs, Ark., and the treatment helped me for the time being; but soon the complaint returned and I was as badly afflicted as ever. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being recommended, I resolved to try it, and, after using six bottles, I was completely cured."—P. H. FORD, Ouachita City, La.

The teachers institute to be held at Wilsonville, beginning tomorrow, promises to be of more than ordinary interest. Handsome programs have been printed, and the hospitable people of our neighboring town bid all a cordial welcome. Every teacher in the county should take some part in this institute.

The following delegates selected by the Christian Endeavor Society of this place will leave tomorrow morning for Birmingham to attend the state convention: J. R. White, T. K. Roberts, D. R. McMillan, Henry Milner, Lon Cater, J. W. Dykes, Mrs. Laura Armstrong, and Misses Leila Parker, Elva Greek, Fannie Longshore, Lucy Smith, Emma Wilson. Shelby, Calera and Montevallo will also send large delegations, so Shelby county will certainly be well represented both in numbers and talent.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. V.

1820–1836.—I propose in this number jotting down with a free hand recollection of the early religion of Shelby county, with such episodical matter as I choose or the laws of association may suggest. My first recollections of preaching were at "Chapel meeting house," 1824–1830, before I understood what the preacher was talking about. I have, however, a vivid recollection, that the hewn-log house stood on top of the hill above the present house, and the west side of the graveyard; that it fronted westward: was about 18x24 feet in size; having one aisle through the middle; the seats, dressed slabs, jutting against the wall on either side, and without back. The sole entrance was a door in the west end, the light being admitted, I think, only by the door and a window back of the high box pulpit, in the end. The church was named, as I always understood, after Mr. Chapel, a local Methodist preacher, who owned the land around it, who died before my recollection, and was buried just back of the pulpit, at the eastend of the house. I saw the second grave made there, 1829, that of old Mr. Hughes, the ancestor of the people of that name among us still. The first preachers, were "circuit riders," whose names are forgotten, except "old brother Foust," a little later, over whose work Bishop Paine once went, concerning whom when inquiry was made to know how the people liked the Bishop, they said Bishop Paine was a very good preacher, but that he couldn't preach like brother Foust. Mr. Foust's zeal and piety were quite equal, I dare say, to the Bishop's, but his preaching talent, entirely nortatory, by no means remarkable, or his grammar much conformed to Murray. I may except also "Uncle Jimmie Brasher," whom I have described elsewhere and the brothers Elisha and Lewis Turner, resident in the Harpersville neighborhood, one or both of them on the place inherited as a nephew by Mr. Lewis Sentell. Elisha Turner was a cross-eyed man, remarkable for fluency and the use of big words connected together in his own way. One or both of the brothers, I heard, ultimately turned Baptist. Of the active members of the "society" the common term in those days used by the Methodists to designate a local church organization, even then a strong one, I remember only Elisha Sentell, father of the worthy citizen just mentioned, class-leader, a devout man, teacher of vocal music, who used to sit on the south end of a short seat under the pulpit and sing, oh, so sweetly. Of the attendants of the church in the twenties, only four now survive; Mr. Lewis Sentell, Mrs. May, of Waxahatchee, nee Caroline Sawyer, first the wife of Fox Rushing whom they hanged on a tree for no other offense than feeding confederate soldiers and taking care of the orphans of those who had fallen in battle, so I have understood; our interesting old friend, wife of Rev. George Mason, nee Annie Williams, oldest daughter of Mr. Isaac Williams, a very useful man, who in those days with his man Jim built the running gear of mills and gins for everybody; the writer; and perhaps Uncle Jack Owens who, however, I think did not much addict himself to church going. I must be permitted to recall the time when, 1825–1827, Lewis Sentell, Annie Williams, and myself—the rest are all gone—attended the school at the head of Bullace creek, taught successively by Abner and James Hughes, house made of round poles with bark on, the earth for a floor, seats ranged 'round the walls so that the pupils could lean against them, a crack hewn out between two logs to let in the light on the "writing bench," a dressed slab. James Hughes taught a three month's school, in fall of 1827, giving it up to "join the conference." We loved him very much, and wept sore when he told us good bye, for he doubtless meant God be with you. We heard after a year or two that he was dead. A pang comes over my heart now, throbbing more than three score years since, at the recollection.

I stood a few years ago, about the middle of the cemetery at Montevallo, at the head of the graves of Rev. Joshua and Hannah West, Doctor West and his wife. This good and able man was by nature and grace a leader of men, connected not only with the founding of Methodism in and around Montevallo before 1820, but soon all over Cahawba and Coosa valleys. He was a physician and local preacher, but I think sometime connected with the conference; for when I used to attend the great camp meetings at Harpersville, he was sometimes, at least there, I understood as presiding elder, always however the ruling spirit. His fame for ability and piety was wide. I think Dr. West and others established societies in upper Cahawba valley as well; I am sure the appointments of the conference penetrated every nook and corner of the county, where people had settled, at an early period.

The Baptists constituted a church on Shoal creek, right where Mr. Jack Perry lives, in 1820, Moses Crowson and presently Joab Lawler ministering to it. It flourished for awhile, but soon became weak and before a great while disappeard or was removed to Montevallo. About 1825, Bethesda, on Beeswax, in what was known as the "Kingdom," later removed to Four Mile, and Big Spring, above Yellowleaf, later at Harpersville, were constituted. The main stay of Bethesda for years, was John W. Teague, father of the writer—clerk, deacon, and main pecuniary support—a man solemnly devout, who for the last twenty years of his life cared for little else than religion. He had scruples about holding African slaves, of whom he owned a good many, latter part of his life. He might have gotten rich if he had not been so tender with his slaves. Lay members of influence in Big Spring church have been mentioned before. Of the pastor of this and Bethesda, for 30-40 years, Rev. Mr. Scott, it is due farther to say, he was a well read man, intemately acquainted with the Bible; a slow sometimes stammering and prosy speaker, tediously lengthy, but whose sterling character commanded respect even reverence.

The Baptists and Methodists of those days had their peculiar intonations, in speaking and prayer, so marked and distinct, that it was easy for a stranger passing a place of worship to distinguish them, simply by passing the house; the former had a sing-song, a good deal like, though less artistic, the intoning among the Catholics and High church Episcopalians; the latter, an original unctuousness of accent, not to be discribed, however well remembered. Some leading men among them, in either case, had given the key note, and the whole pack took up the cry, and echoed it throughout the hills. Education has done away with the "holy tones," that however linger in obsecure corners, like the occasional notes of the whilome spinning wheel. No disrespect is meant; these pioneers were very earnest people, who believed in zeal but honesty too, and who in this last particular compared favorably with more modern times. Nay, they were terribly in earnest; believed in the imminence of hell and the realities of heaven.

The Cumberland Presbyterians appeared a little later, a people combining somewhat the faith of the old side Presbyterians and the Methodists. Rev. Mr. Meredith, afterwards so well known as Dr. Meredith, a man of education, talents and great energies was the ruling and informing spirit among them. They very much controlled the religious sentiment of Montevallo and Cahaba valley for a time, erecting academies, male and female there, the latter of which long flourished and did a great work for the education of girls, managed as it was with ability and persistence by Dr. Meredith and his accomplished lady. A beautiful and touching custom inaugurated by Dr. M. at —— church must be signalized. At this church the families of the Merediths and Alexenders, as they passed away, were all buried. Once a year they and the congregation, whose dead slept with theirs, met to hold a service of commemorative talks, songs and prayers over the dust of their loved ones.

Later still, Rev. Mr. Holman, of the old side Presbyterians, used to come over from Talladega and preach in the Nickoll's settlement, near Mardis's ferry, Coosa valley. Mr. H. was a remarkable preacher, not so much on account of abilities, though they were good, as a piety of so elevated a character as to strike every one that heard him. I was once present when he christened a babe, the first time, perhaps, I had ever witnessed that act. He said in effect the authority for the act was inferential rather than direct. But if there was any subject "over which he had ever burnt the midnight oil," that was the one; exclaiming in tones broken with emotion, if he was in error he hoped God would forgive him. Later, Rev. Edward Ware, once a pupil of mine, a most estimable young man, who soon died, preached a part of his time at Montevollo.

Now for a long time the people have preaching plenty, if they will hear it. But it is no better, on the whole, than West, and Lawler, and Scott, and Holman and others, used to do sixty years ago. Those men were not learned in science and literature, but knew their Bibles, had great natural endowments, and were men of solemn piety.

After some weeks necessary to collect materials, Providence permitting, these sketches will be resumed, but will pertain wholly to the physical features of the county.

If King Solomon was alive he would now say: "Go to the traveling man learn his ways, and be wise." Mr. C. W. Battell, a Cincinnati traveling man representing the Queen City Printing Ink Co., after suffering intensely for two or three days with lameness of the shoulder, resulting from rheumatism, completely cured it with two applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This remedy is gaining a wide reputation for its prompt cures of rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings, and lameness. 50 cent bottles are for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Second Wall Flower—"It ought to come natural, for they say her father started life as a road agent."—Truth.

For Whooping cough Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is excellent. By using it freely the disease is deprived of all dangerous consequences. There is no danger in giving the remedy to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Some women are so ill-mannered as to go right into a store and try to interrupt a conversation between the clerks.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A lady at Tooleys [illegible], was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Tisler, a prominent merchant of the town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Saved By Hood's

Is the experience of many who take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Read this:

"I have been in poor health since I was 20 years old and I am now 51. Had it not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills my days on earth would not have multiplied. My My disease at first was catarrh in its worst form, then asthma. No medicine did me any good except Hood's Sarsaparilla, which has no equal as a blood purifier. I have not only been benefited in health but increased in weight from 100 to 172 pounds. I do all my housework without any help.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and only Hood's is what I take and it pays. I do not have any more doctor's bills or keep any hired help. We keep Hood's Pills on hand constantly." MRS. R. A. GATTEN, Blue Srpings, Neb.

Scrofula in the Eyes

As well as in every form is permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and every vestige of the disease may be made to disappear. Thousands of cases have proved this to be a fact.

"I had scrofula in my eyes and tried several physicians but found no cure. My wife persuaded me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I had a choking sensation, was troubled with night sweats, and had dyspepsia in very severe form. After taking Hood's Sarsaparilla two weeks the choking spells and dyspepsia troubled me less. I have now taken several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and find that I am entirely cured. There has not been any return of my troubles since I first commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I advice any one who is troubled similarly to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial." WILLIAM L. PAYNE, Berryville, Virginia.

IN THE ELECTRICAL WORLD.

—At present the city of Washington and the congested streets of New York and Chicago are practically the only places in the country where the overhead trolley wire is excluded.

—The great Edison incandescent lamp works are no longer turning out lamps with bamboo filaments. Bamboo has given way to paper as the basis of the delicate black filament that glows golden when the current passes through it.

—Some of the proprietors of large western farms and ranches, are making their wire fences do duty as telephone lines, in many instances with satisfactory results. Gate and road crossings are overcome by elevating wire connections to the required height.

—An electric restaurant is to be one of the features in the great exposition to be held next year in Amsterdam. Visitors will be served automatically with a complete dinner, and all they will have to do will be to press an electric button, eat the food, and pay the bill.—Hardware.

—On the St. Dennis canal, France, some trials of towing by electricity on the Bovet system have been made with a barge, fitted at one end with an electric motor, communicating its rotary motion by gear, to the towing wheel, which give magnetic adhesion to the towing rope. The current was taken by a trolley from off an overhead line on the bank, a portion serving for magnetizing the clutch and towing chain. A distance of about 394 yards is said to have been accomplished in eight minutes, corresponding with a speed of 1.7 miles per hour, which is about double that obtained by ordinary towage. As to whether, on the whole, the system was regarded as a success is not stated.

—Electricity is evidently to be the hope and dependence of the coming housekeeper. Even the present one may look for a speedy amelioration of many domestic discomforts. Some sanguine electricians promise in five years small passenger elevators for private houses that will run by a button, and in the kitchen domain the magic electrical spark is to be a veritable fairy godmother. One service which it is already performing in a Calfornia restaurant is that of eliminating the pervasive odor of cooking food. The proprietor introduced an electric exhaust fan, with the happiest results. The fan, which is operated by a small motor, draws up the heated air and smells of the kitchen, and drives them up a shaft, whence they escape into the outer air.

—It seems that Mr. Thomas A. Edison has put in a bid to the receiver of the North American Phonograph Co. for his phonograph, on which he promises such improvements and novelties as will astonish the world. He says that when he obtains control of the machine he is going in for household, instead of nickel-in-the-slot machines, and in a short time expects to produce an entire opera or a complete novel on a cylinder. The change will cost a good deal, but he thinks it will pay him. He also says the combination of the Kinetoscope and phonograph can be made, and he is going to reproduce the motions and words of a life-size speaking figure, he having already got the speaking and moving figure up to half life size. He will manufacture the perfected phonograph individually.

LONGFELLOW'S FIRST POETRY.

He Was More Than Thirty When His First Volume Was Published.

Toward the end of 1836 he took up his abode in Cambridge, where he was to reside for the rest of his life—for forty-five years. He was made to feel at home in the society of the scholars who clustered about Harvard, then almost the sole center of culture in the country. His work for the college was not so exacting that he had not time for literature. The impulse to write poetry returned; yet the next book he published was the prose "Hyperion," which appeared in 1839, and which, though it has little plot or action, may be called a romance. The youthful and poetic hero, a passionate pilgrim in Europe, was more or less a reflection of Longfellow himself.

A few months later, in the same year, he published his first volume of poems—"Voices of the Night"—in which he reprinted certain of his earlier verses, most of them written while he was at Bowdoin. Some of these boyish verses show the influence of Bryant, and others reveal to us that the young poet had not yet looked at life for himself, but still saw it through the stained glass windows of tradition. The same volume contained also some more recent poems: "The Beleaguered City," and the "Psalm of Life"—perhaps the first of his poems to win a swift and abiding popularity. These lyrics testified that Longfellow was beginning to have a style of his own. As Hawthorne wrote to him, "Nothing equal to them was ever written in this world—this western world, I mean."

Certainly no American author had yet written any poem of the kind so good as the best of those in Longfellow's volume of "Ballad's," printed two years later. Better than any other American poet Longfellow had mastered the difficulties of the story in song; and he knew how to combine the swiftness and the picturesqueness the ballad requires. His ballads have more of the old-time magic, more of the early simplicity than those of any other modern English author. Of its kind, there is nothing better in the language than "The Skeleton in Armor," with its splendid lyric swing; and "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Wreck of the Hesperus'" are almost as good in their humbler sphere. "Excelsior," in the same volume, voices the nobler aspirations of youth, and has been taken to heart by thousands of boys and girls.—Prof. Brander Matthews, in St. Nicholas.

Pen and Ink Unfashionable.

A new fashion that is just beginning to grow in vogue is that of writing letters in pencil rather than with pen and ink, and when once it is fairly established it is doubtful whether anything but legal documents and business papers that must be preserved will ever be prepared in the old style. Letters are generally shorter nowadays than they formerly were; are more hastily written, more frequent and seldom worth keeping for any length of time. They are not the elaborate efforts of bygone days, that were often cherished for their intrinsic worth. The pencil, which is far more convenient than the pen, is, therefore, taking the place in the great mass of casual correspondence.—Philadelphia, Times.

A WAR ECHO.

Every Honorable Veteran Deserves His Pension.

[From Journal, Lewiston, Me.]

Samuel R. Jordan has just given the Journal an account of his life, which in view of his extremely hard lot for the past few years will be read with interest.

"I am 48 years old and have always lived in New Portland. I enlisted in the army in 1862 as a private in Company A, 28th Me. Volunteers. My army experience injured my health to some extent, although I worked at blacksmithing some part of the time, when suddenly, several years ago, I was prostrated with what able physicians pronounced Locomotor Ataxia. At first I could get around somewhat yet the disease progressed quite rapidly until I had hardly any feeling in my legs and feet, they felt like sticks of wood and I grew so much worse that I could not move for three years without help, as my neighbors and friends could testify. I employed several physicians in my vicinity, and elsewhere, and they all told me that medicines would not help me, that they could do nothing to effect a cure and that in time I should become entirely helpless. I became discouraged. I was a great care to my wife and friends. Shortly after I met an old army comrade, Mr. Alf. Parlin, a resident of Madison, Maine, and he incidentally mentioned how he had tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a severe case of rheumatism and a spinal and malarial trouble, that he had suffered with consequent of his army life, and had been greatly benefited by their use. By his earnest recommendation I was induced to try the pills. After taking them for a time I began to feel prickly sensations in my legs and a return of strength so I could move them a little. After a few weeks I began to feel a marked improvement in my condition. I soon was enabled to walk around a little with the help of crutches. After taking for some time I can now walk without crutches, my general health is much improved and I have regained my old-timed vigor. I can walk about and enjoy life once more, for which I feel very thankful, and this happy result is due to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are not a patent medicine in the sense that name implies. They were first compounded as a prescription and used as such in general practice by an eminent physician. So great was their efficacy that it was deemed wise to place them within the reach of all. They are now manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold in boxes (never in loose form by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

MRS. SCOTT, the widow of Judge Lucien Scott, of Leavenworth, Kan., manages her own ranch in Texas, where she owns 260,000 acres of land, all fenced in, over which six or seven thousand cattle are browsing.

IN Bosnia the two women doctors appointed by the Austrian government a few years ago, Dr. Theodora Krajewska and Dr. Boluslava Keck, seem to have overcome the prejudice of the Mohammedan population against them. They had over six hundred Mohammedan patients between them last year.

THE population of the German empire is increasing at the rate of 500,000 a year.

THE heaviest of the foreign woods are the pomegranate and the lignum vitæ, and the lightest is cork.

THE long-distance telephone between Paris and London has over two hundred calls a day. At the rate of two dollars for each call it pays.

IN all, it has been estimated that over two million acres are devoted to the maintenance of deer in Scotland, and that about five thousand stags are annually killed.

IN 1861 the cold was so severe in eastern Europe that packs of starving wolves entered Vienna, and all the canals of Venice were frozen, and the principal mouth of the Nile was blocked with floating ice for a week.

PICKLING beans by cooking tender, and putting in a jar of hot vinegar, sweetened and highly seasoned with cinnamon and pepper.

MAKING jelly by boiling the juice twenty minutes, adding, cupful for cupful, sugar heated in the oven and cooking eight minutes longer.

PINEAPPLE punch for a summer drink: The juice of six oranges and six lemons, sugar to taste, adding, to pouring over chopped ice, some sliced pineapple and it two quarts of water.

CLEANING tarnished silver ornaments by dissolving a lump of soda in a pan of boiling water and letting them stand in it a few moments, adding a little yellow soap and rubbing the articles with a soft brush, then drying on a brick, in a hot oven.—Good Housekeeping.

RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL.

—Mrs. Ballinger Booth has received permission from Mayor Strong, of New York city to conduct outdoor services at pleasure—a privilege only occasionally granted heretofore to the salvation army.

—By the succession of Rev. W. Pon. sonby to the earldom of Bessborough, four clergymen are now peers. The others are the marquis of Normanby, the earl of Searsdale, and Lord Plunkett, the archbishop of Dublin.

—The women of Danville, Ky., have established a free industrial school for the benefit of children whose opportunities for home training are meager. The school is held every Saturday and the attendance is about twenty.

—It is stated that the Methodist Episcopal church of America has 4,325 native helpers in the foreign mission field. The American board (Congregational) has 2,145. The Presbyterian board has 1,528 and the Baptist board has 1,446.

—Richmond, Va., is the great Baptist city of the world. There are, including all denominations, 88 churches, and 34 of these are Baptists. The entire church membership of the city is about 42,000, and more than 20,000 of these, or nearly one-half, are Baptists.

—During the past year $19,967,116 was given by private gifts and bequests to colleges, museums, churches, libraries, art galleries and other helpful agencies. In 1893 these free gifts reached the colossal figure of $33,319,866. These statistics do not include sums less than $1,000.

—The sharp controversies between the old and the new theologies in French Protestant Switzerland has killed one of the historic and at one time very influential journals of that church. It is the Evangile et Liberte, hitherto edited by the gifted Pasteur Paul Chapnis. In former years this journal was a tower of conservative strength, but in recent years had become the leading organ of the theologie de la conscience, the theology of consciousness, which is practically the same as the subjective theology of the Ritschl school in Germany.

—We are given to understand that the movement among certain leading Baptists and Stundists in Russia for presenting a petition to the czar, begging freedom of religion and the right to meet together for worship, has been abandoned for the present as hopeless. During the first few months of his reign, it was generally understood that the young emperor was willing to inaugurate a policy of greater latitude in religious matters, but latterly the minister of religion, M. Pobedanostseff, has been gradually creeping back to power, and it is feared that any attempt to induce the czar at the present time to espouse the cause of religious liberty would only throw him more completely into the arms of the great inquisitor.

An Indian's Mistake.

They say that two Indians belonging to one of the large American shows of life in the wild west while visiting London were much interested in the sights to be seen in the London streets. Day after day they walk up and down the most crowded streets and gaze on the people and into the shop windows like a pair of children at the circus. One day they stopped before the show window of a wig maker and stared at the many varieties of wigs on exhibition there until their eyes nearly fell out. Finally one of them nudged the other, and with a shake of his head remarked, "Ugh! mighty brave man! Big fighter; much scalp!"—Harpers' Young People.

On first introducing this world-famed medicine to the afflicted, and for many years thereafter, it was sold under a Positive Guarantee of giving entire satisfaction in every case for which it is recommended. So uniformly successful did it prove in curing the diseases, derangements and weaknesses of women that claims for the return of money paid for it were exceedingly rare. Since its manufacturers can now point to thousands of noted cures effected by it in every part of the land, they believe its past record a sufficient guarantee of its great value as a curative agent, therefore, they now rest its claims to the confidence of the afflicted solely upon that record. SOUTHERN BAPTISTS

First Days Session of the Conference at Washington.

A GREAT RELIGIOUS GATHERING.

The Election of Officers and the Reports on the Different Lines of Work Were the Principal Features of the Day.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The first session of the Southern Baptist conference was held yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the First Baptist church on 16th street. The church was well filled long before that hour and when at 10 o'clock Judge Haralson, the presiding officer, arose and called for order every seat on the floor was taken and the galleries were beginning to fill up. The people kept coming, however, long after every available inch of space was filled and standing room was soon at a premium. The great heat caused the people to be very uncomfortable. Fans and folded papers and hats were utilized to create artificial breezes, but the morning was close and torrid and the enthusiasm of the churchmen alone kept them in their places throughout the exorcises of the day.

Meeting Called to Order.

The meeting was called to order by President Haralson, and the religious exercises that preceded the regular order of the day were conducted by Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner, of North Carolina. A hymn was first sung and then Dr. Skinner read from the Scriptures and offered prayer. He then called for suggestions for a hymn from the people, and a voice was immediately raised to propose "I Love Thy Kingdom Lord." At once the singing was begun, before the organ could be started, and for two stanzas the song was raised without any accompaniament whatever.

Then President Haralson said that meeting would go ahead to organize the convention, until that was done no one would be regarded as entitled to the floor. He turned the matter of effecting the organization over to the secretaries, who, he said, knew more than he did about the details.

Dr. Burrows, the chief secretary, read out the lists, prefacing them with the statement that the maximum number entitled to seats on the financial basis was 813, the number of representatives of associations elect 401, making a total of all delegates of 1,214.

The Election of Officers.

When these preliminaries had been completed, President Haralson called for the election of officers, and Dr. Ellis at once placed his name in nomination. The nominations were closed immediately and Judge Haralson was una nimously re-elected president of the convention which office he has filled since 1889. He made a brief speech, thanking the conference for the honor and expressing his belief that the convention would be a complete success if every delegate would lend his co-operation to the officers.

Judge Haralson announced the committee on order of business and the committee withdrew to consult.

Nominations were then made for the vice presidents, four in number. The convention unanimously re-elected Doctors Lansing, Burrows and O. F. Gregory as secretaries.

President Haralson then introduced Commissioner Ross, who made a brief address of welcome.

Dr. C. C. Meadows, of the district conference, spoke in welcome in behalf of the Washington churches. He was followed by Rev. Dr. J. R. Sampey of Kentucky, of the southern seminary, who made a ringing address in response to the hearty welcome extended to the delegates.

Reports on Different Work.

The committee on order of business reported in favor of two sessions for today, a morning and evening session. No recommendations were made as to Monday. The report was adopted and a committee was appointed to arrange for memorial service to be held Sunday in memory of Dr. Broadus.

Rev. Dr. H. L. Morehouse, corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Home Missionary society, was invited to the platform and made an extended address on the subject of work to be done among the colored people in the south.

Reports were then called for. T. P. Bell, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Sabbath School board, presented his report. It showed that the receipts have been $53,034, as against $48,539 last year.

The work of the foreign missions board was presented by R. T. Willingham, corresponding secretary, and referred to committee on papal fields, pagan fields, and financial policy. The total amount given for the cause in the past yenr was over $126,000, but expenses for collecting it in the state reduced the receipts of the board to $125,417. This was more by $20,000 than the receipts of the previous year.

Statistics of the Convention.

I. T. Techenor reported for the Home Mission board as follows: Missionaries, 425; increase 44, and more than in any year of the board's history. Baptized 5,921; increase 1,451, and 572 more than have been baptized in any one year since the organization of the convention. Cash receipts $68,640, being $15,399, larger than last year.

The general statistics of the convention were given in a compilation made by Secretary Lansing Burrows. It showed the following totals: District associations 702; ordained ministers 9,907; churches 17,803; members (white) 1,481,041; colored churches 12,838; membership 1,317,130; aggregate membership 2,748,171.

After the reading of these reports the convention adjourned until evening.

The convention met last evening at 7:30 o'clock, at which time the report of the committee on conference with the home missionary society was received and ratified.

MORE TROUBLE IN HAWAII.

The Japanese Contingent Plotting a Raid on the Government.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 11.—It is probable that the next sixty days will develop some very exciting scenes in Hawaii. Private information recently received by C. W. Ashford, in this city, indicates that trouble is gathering around the government of President Dole and his colleagues. The Japanese, who are numerous on the island and who at present are feverish and elated over the victory of the mother country in the war with China, threaten to come forward and become serious factors in the government of Hawaii and the adjustment of its affairs. It is known that among the Japanese on the islands are several hundred trained soldiers. In fact, there are enough to seize and control the government at any time, should they so choose. The natives are restless and dissatisfied and only wait an opportunity to fly into the thick of another insurrection.

WANT FAIR PLAY ALL AROUND.

Workmen and Manufacturers Form a Combination for Fair Prices.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 11.—The Amalgamated Association of Tin, Iron and Steel Workers and the Merchant Bar Iron Manufacturers' National association have entered into a combination to secure for the iron workers of the country better rates of wages and for the manufacturers fair competitive conditions against the mill operators of the Pittsburg district, who have been working their employes at low wages. An association of manufacturers has been formed, principally outside the Pittsburg district, to secure remunerative prices for iron products and incidentally to give the workmen better wages than are now paid, which are admittedly too low.

THE PLAN TO BE MODIFIED.

NEW YORK, May 11.—It is currently reported that the plan for the reorganization of the Georgia Southern & Florida railroad is to be changed and modified so that they will issue a four per cent. bond instead of a five per cent. The reason for this is the decreased earnings, the net for the past three or four months not warranting the issuing of a five per cent. bond.

WHAT EVANS SAYS

South Carolina's Governor Talks of the Future.

CONCERNING THE DISPENSARY LAW.

He Says the Recent Decision Does Not Interfere in the Slightest With Its Practical Operation—Blind Tigers the Only Competition.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 11.—There is still much talk about the two decisions of the United States court affecting the two most important laws in the state. Although nearly every one concedes that the knocking out of the feature of the dispensary law, preventing liquor from being brought into the state, is practically a death blow to the law, Governor Evans is declaring that the profits will not be affected. This is in the face of the claim that better liquors can be delivered here from points outside the state at lower rates than the dispensary rates.

The effect of the registration decision is of more vital concern in view of the negro majority in the state and yesterday the state democratic executive committee, controlled by the dominant element, was called by the state chairman, Senator Irby, to meet here on Wednesday night next. It is evidently for the purpose of arranging to face the new condition of affairs.

What Governor Evans Says.

Last evening, Governor Evans gave to the representatives of the Southern Associated Press the following interview, designed to express his belief as to the future of the dispensary law and the effect of the decision upon it. The governor said:

The practical operations of the dispensary are not interfered with in the slightest. The great number of patrons of the dispensary are people who are in sympathy with the law. Those who have been forced to patronize it belong to the class who cannot afford to import for their own use. The source of revenue is from the sale of the cheaper grades of whisky in quantities of one-half pint. These people cannot afford to import.

The only competition that could come would be from blind tigers and old whisky dealers, who under the guise of importing for their own use, will endeavor to supply them. This will be check-mated by a more strenuous effort than heretofore to prosecute them under section 22, of the dispensary law. This is the section which provides for injunction, and the entire vigilance of the dispensary force will be centered upon the illicit trafficker. One or two convictions will soon put an end to the traffic and this will be done without recourse to juries.

Metropolitan Police Idea.

If we find that the police of the towns do not co-operate with us in suppressing the illicit sales of whiskey, I will immediately place every town in the state under the operation of the metropolitan police law. This will be of greater advantage to the enforcement of the law than the employment of the constables, and will save to the state $4,500 a month which we are now expending for the constables. The row of the illicit trafficker will be a hard and stumpy one, and the resources for making it so are abundant. I shall not hesitate to use them. So instead of being a death blow to the dispensary, if this decision is sustained by the supreme court of the United States—and I can hardly see how it can be—yet, we will make it an advantage to the law, by reason of this saving in expense of its execution.

There is no opposition to the law in any part of the state except in the cities of Charleston and Columbia and very little in the latter city. The foreign element is the bone of contention in the former city, and they will never become reconciled to our institutions.

In spite of the fact that the great benefits of the dispensary law are reaped by our entire people, the law has recently been enacted in the state of North Carolina and will be in the state of Georgia at the next session of the legislature, and this accounts for the fierce battle waged upon it by the whiskey trust, who succeed in buying up United States judges.

A Test Case Being Made.

Let not the friends of the law be discouraged: its success is assured and they will live to see its adoption by a majority of the states of the American Union. The days of the bar-room are over, and the influence of the bar-keeper destroyed in South Carolina, and I am satisfied it will be in the nation at no late day.

A test case is already being made in Charleston to carry the law to the supreme court of the United States, and we expect a decision in twenty days. We will take the case up on habeas corpus proceedings. In the meantime, the constables will watch the shipments of liquor into the state and will not seize any packages unless they have strong grounds to believe that it is not for personal use.

As to the decision in the registration case and our position on that matter, Governor Evans said. "I will simply say there will be a straight fight now between the white man and the nigger, and God save the white man that goes to the negro. Beyond this, I have nothing more to say than I have already said."

While giving the above interview, Governor Evans received notice that a United States marshal had arrested one of his liquor constables who had made a seizure in Beaufort in defiance of Judge Simonton's injunction. What will be done about it is not known as yet. Assistant Attorney General Townsend is now in Charleston at work on the case Governor Evans refers to.

Memorial Services in Charleston.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 11.—Confederate memorial day was observed here yesterday in the usual way. MORE SCANDAL IN CANADA.

Peculiar Financial Transactions of Prominent Politicians and Capitalists.

QUEBEC, May 11.—There has just been brought to light at Ottawa another political scandal; $300,000 was "borrowed" from the government by political and railroad men in New Brunswick for the erection of a bridge at Fredericton, the provincial capital, at four per cent, but not a cent has been collected for six years. One of the promoters of the scheme is a member of parliament and a supporter of the government, who is about to give up his seat to Finance Minister Foster, while another, a life-long liberal, has thrown all his political influence for the coming election in favor of the conservative government.

NEW PULLMAN CORPORATION.

Report That the Palace Car Company Will Organize Under New Jersey Law.

The building was occupied as a lodging house which was run by Aug Mitchell. Three men were killed. How many more has not yet been ascertained, but there are wild rumors afloat of heavy loss of life. WHAT SENATOR TILLMAN SAYS

Concerning the Decisions of the Registration and Dispensary Laws.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., May 11.—Senator Tillman of South Carolina, arrived in this city yesterday from the Archer neighborhood, where he has some property. He met his old friend J. F. Bunch at the depot and accepted the proffered invitation to dine at his home here. A correspondent met the senator and inquired of him if he had read the dispatches from Columbia in reference to the decisions against the registration and dispensay laws of his state. The senator replied:

I have not seen the papers, and while I anticipated the result, I have no direct knowledge in regard to the decisions.

The correspondent handed the senator the paper containg the report. After he had read the report the senator said:

In regard to the registration law there is no general election in South Carolina this year and no franchise will be exercised only in the election of delegates to the constitutional convention, called by the last legislature after having been voted upon by the people at the the last general election last November.

I do not know what the United States supreme court will do but I know this: the constitutional convention will be held. It will be composed of white men principally who will take care of South Carolina and see that white supremacy is maintained within her borders.

"What about the dispensary?"

Judge Simonton has once declared that this law was constitutional. He has practicallyr reversed himself. From the sweeping nature of the injunction, I am almost ready to think that in going so far in trying to overthrow the law the judge has been improperly influenced. The dispensary system is so popular in the state and is being watched with much keen interest by the people outside with the almost absolute certainty of being adopted by other states, that the bar-keepers and liquor manufacturers could well afford to raise a million dollars to buy a judge or two.

These two judicial decisions, if sustained, practicnlly destroys the last vestige of state's rights and Jefferson's prophesy that the federal judiciary would be the means of overthrowing our liberties and destroying local self-government will have been fulfilled. Governor Evans' plan to resist the injunction is the quickest and best way to have the supreme court pass upon it.

The judges, by their decisions and injunctions and congressmen by their votes are rapidly making this country a despotism in which the rights and interests of the masses are as of little moment as they are in Russia. Unless the people bestir themselves the lawyers and judges will sell our liberties to the corporations and the money power, but I am glad to see them pressing their schemes for it will only bring upon us the revolution that must come sooner or later.

HE TALKS ON SOUND MONEY.

Hon. Josiah Patterson Addresses the Citizens of Birmingham, Ala.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 8.—Hon. Josiah Patterson, of Tennessee, addressed the citizens of Birmingham yesterday afternoon on the currency question. A large audience greeted him and he made an able address favoring sound money and opposing the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. Mr. Patterson stated the purpose of the Memphis convention to be held on the 23rd inst., and invited Birmingham to send a delegation. A meeting is to be held here within a few days and a strong delegation will be selected to represent this county in the convention. Col. Patterson's speech was well received here.

THE STORM IN ALABAMA.

Plantations Through Which it Passed Completely Devastated.

GREENSBORO, Ala., May 9.—The most disastrous hail storm in the history of Hale county passed over it yesterday afternoon, beginning north of Greensboro, and covering a space half mile wide. Hail as large as quail eggs fell to the depth of 18 inches. Plantations through which it passed are completely devastated; not a vestige of the once green crops are left. The fruit crop in the path of the storm is also ruined. It is impossible to estimate the damage, but it will be exceedingly heavy. Many farmers are now purchasing seeds preparatory to replanting.

The Spaulding Racing Team.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 9. — The Spaulding racing team consisting of D. C. Shafer, Manager, P. L. McGue trainer, Sanger, Titus, Cabanne, Hand and Roome left yesterday afternoon over the Queen and Crescent for Louisville, Ky. The team has been in training here for some time and the racers are all in great shape already for the approaching races.

Alabama's Great Council of Red Men.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 8. — The Great Council of Improved Order of Red Men for the state met at Greenville yesterday. There was an unusually large attendance of representatives and grand officers. Hon. Robert T. Daniel, of Georgia, Grand Senior Sagamore of the Great Council of the United States, is present.

The Bridge Gave Way.

DEMOPOLIS, Ala., May 8.—An old bridge over a canal in the edge of town gave way yesterday when four boys were on it. Robert Michael was drowned and his body has not yet been found. The other three were saved by catching obstructions.

Severe Wind Storm in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 7.—A severe wind and rain storm passed over the southern end of Culman county late yesterday afternoon. It is said that many barns and other small buildings were blown down and crops destroyed.

Grand Commandery of Alabama.

MOBILE, Ala., May 9.—The 35th annual conclave of the Grand Commandery, Alabama Knights of Templars, met here yesterday afternoon.

Alabama Furnace Resumes.

FLORENCE, Ala., May 9.—The sulphite furnace, which has been idle for some time, was put in blast this morning.

IS BUCHANAN LEGALLY DEAD?

The Counsel for the Condemned Man Now Make That Claim.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The neglect to execute Dr. Robert Buchanan will probably complicate matters to a greater degree than before. Buchanan's counsel declare that the convicted murderer is legally dead, and, consequently, cannot be executed. Colonel Fellows said yesterday he is not legally dead. Under section 508 of the Code of Criminal Procedure he can on application of the attorney general or the district attorney of this city be resentenced.

Harpersville Echoes.

Watch out for the mad dogs.

Harpersville has only two vacant houses.

Prof. Lee attended the Institute Saturday.

Miss Etta Freeze, of Vincent, spent last week with Harpersville relatives.

Miss Maggie Bell, of Kelley's Creek, spent last week with her cousin, Miss Sallie Martin.

When our new "Squire" commands peace, silence prevails and the earth fairly trembles.

Rev. Mr. Corley occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church Sunday morning and Rev. James Self at night.

Misses Katie Gorman and Hannah Caldwell will attend commencement of the Atheneum, at East Lake, next week.

We want Montevallo to get the school for Girls, and we want Col. Graham, of the Sentinel, made president of the same.

The Oates Literary Society gave their entertainment last Friday night. A large crowd greeted the occasion and all were highly pleased with what they saw and heard. Hurrah for the boys!

The money question, of which so many of us knows so little about, is being talked of a great deal, and from what I can find out, the majority of the democratic voters of this beat are in favor of silver.

Mr. John Kidd, who has been clerking in the store of T. J. Martin so long, has given up his position, and has gone to Vincent to engage in the mercantile business there. We wish him much success in his undertaking.

At the last meeting of the Social club, the new officers elected were Prof. Lee, president; Stella Posey, secretary; and Miss Sallie Martin re-elected critic. They propose to have a picnic at an early day, of which you shall have due notice.

The Harpersville Supreme court was in session last Saturday, Chief Justice Russell and the new "Squire" administering the law in its due form. From now on they will take sorghum as a legal tender for cash, and will make a discount on peas. Hurrah for the Harpersville Supreme court.

JAKE.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

"Have you any friends in this city?" asked the paying teller at the bank.

"No," he replied: "I'm a baseball umpire."—Washington Star.

AYER'S PILLS

"For fifteen years, I was a great sufferer from indigestion in its worst forms. I tested the skill of many doctors, but grew worse and worse, until I became so weak I could not walk fifty yards without having to sit down and rest. My stomach, liver, and heart became affected, and I thought I would surely die. I tried Ayer's Pills and they helped me right away. I continued their use and am now entirely well. I don't know of anything that will so quickly relieve and cure the terrible suffering of dyspepsia as Ayer's Pills."—JOHN C. PRITCHARD, Brodie, Warren Co., N. C.

It is either a feast or a famine with the newspaper man. Some weeks we have no communications at all, but this week we are flooded with them. All are of interest, and are too good to leave out, so we have given up almost all our space in order to be accommodating.

A lady at Tooleys La., was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Tisler, a prominent merchant of the town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The next issue of The Chronicle will be edited by several young gentlemen, members of our Literary Society, and the week following the lady members will try their hand. We propose during these two weeks to give them entire editorial control, and to give them the entire space allotted to reading matter. Our correspondents will please hold up for two weeks, and let's give the young folks a chance.

A Pleasant Day.

On last Friday, May 10, I had the pleasure of attending the closing exercises of Mrs. McMath's school, which took place on the mountain east of this city. I cannot pass by unnoticed the rare beauties of Dame Nature, for in them lies that which fill the human soul to overflowing with admiration for all that which is grand and sublime. The hand that has guided the fair creation has been partial toward some sections of the earth, and this mountain seems to have been a chosen spot. A stage had been erected for the occasion and the following interesting program prepared:

Only Remembered by What We've Done,—
Song,	School

Dinner was then served in picnic style—an impressive blessing asked by Dr. DuBose. Never surely did any of the Cæsars enjoy their luxurious Roman feasts better than were those dainties. With the sun smiling in now and then, through the trees, we lounged about there on the mossy carpet as luxuriously as an eastern monarch on his downy cushion, the children making the welkin ring with their merry laughter. But "lo! the black winged legions of tempest arise", and we sought refuge in the hospitable home of Mr. Morrison, where we enjoyed the afternoon. Returning home, we felt that it was a day well spent. The children did well, remarkably well, considering the short time they had preparing themselves for the occasion. It has been said, nature was truthful; and when she endows one of her children with beauty, it is but an index by which one can read the goodness of the heart; it may be extraneous circumstances sometimes pervert this loveliness from its original atmosphere of puriety and nobility; but when they are powerless to subvert, then truly must the splendor of the soul shine out with the light of the morning star. The Greeting Recitation by little Gertrude DuBose (but 5 years old) was splendid. The stamp of intellectual superiority beamed from her beautiful eyes, and displayed itself in calm, self-containment of her facial expression. Rosebud and Thorn by Edna Hallmark, was a display of merit as also was Grace and Dolly by Mary Peters. These little ones showed ability and talent. Chester Browne's Vacation was pretty and appropriate. With great dignity did Arthur Millstead recite Sir Jones' Ride. Perplexity, by Mary Finley, was enjoyable; full of wit and humor and well recited. Better selections than Little Nell's Prayer, by Pauline Nelson, Little Jim, by Lizzie Sinnott, Stretch Your Hearts, by Kate DuBose, Katie Lee and Willie Gray, by Vivian McLean, could not have been made, each piece exactly suited the speaker. Old Maids, by four little girls, was splendid; with much assurance they sang "I'll not marry at all." Great elocutionary talent was exhibited by Chlora Wimpee in Ruling Passion, and Clara Rhodes in a Naughty Girl's View of Life. If by proper training that spark be fanned into a flame, cherished hopes for a brilliant future for each, will not be "nipped in the bud by untimely frost." Chlora Wimpee also hit the key-note in her essay, Belles and Beaux. Such lights as the mind of Birdie Morrison's should not be "hid under a bushel." Her essay, Human Mind, was splendid. Too much cannot be said of Mr. Joe Spencer's kindness; not only did he devote his time and talent to assist to make these exercises a success, but sacrificed a trip. Truly the "Golden Rule" must be the precept and the moral of his existence. He is an artist. Seldom have I heard music played with rarer grace and feeling. He is young yet—the world is before him to choose, but I risk the prophecy that his name will be handed down to posterity as a "shining light" by which they may find the path which leads to honor and renown

"In the highways of life, here and there,
now and then,
Amid muslin called ladies, and buckram
called men,
One meets, though the race is hardly called human,
A man that's a man, and a woman that's a woman."

So wrote the poet, William D.Gallager, expressing a homely truth with the quaint and rhythmic eloquence which characterized the emanations of Robert Burn's genius; and they come to my mind today full of forceful suggestions in connection with the name of the teacher who graced this occasion. Mrs. McMath has for the past six years taught a private school in this city, and never was a teacher more beloved. Austerity and the cold and cheerless dignitaries that usually hamper the affectionate relations between teacher and pupil, does not exist here. She is the idol of their hearts. School seems to be the Mecca to which their souls journey ever with unabated enthusiasm, and a glowing tenderness of sentiment which send a thrill of pleasure to the hearts of their parents whenever they talk of "Mrs. McMath." Rumor has it that she intends to abandon teaching another year. For the sake of those who are so devotedly attached to her, and over whom she wields so great and good an influence, I hope this is not true; but if it is true, and success attends merit, if it be the test of merit, she'll succeed at any undertaking.

For down in her heart there is sunshine
Springing up with its joys sevenfold,
From the fair hidden depth of a mind
Whose treasures shall be forever unfold.

'Twas Good to be There.

MR. EDITOR:—It was my good forturne to be present at the Shelby county Teachers Institute, held at Wilsonville, May 10th and 11th. To say that it was a success and will bear fruit, I feel from my heart that I speak nothing but the truth.

Superintendent Huston presided with his usual kindness and courtesy to every one, and dispatched business with promptness and an even hand. The programs were attractive and handsomely printed (Chronicle print) and every subject seemed to be in its appropriate place.

Major John G. Harris was present and delivered on Friday night a well prepared lecture on the legal rights of the teacher, the patrons, and the child. Prof. Hutchins, of Talladega county, was present and rendered valuable sssistance.

The good people of Wilsonville seemed to vie with each other in making our stay in their midst a pleasant memory, and well they succeeded, for we shall long remember their kindness and hospitality; and last, but not least, Prof. Kilpatrick and his good wife, and the noble boys and girls of his school, had tastefully decorated the school building with evergreens, flowers, pictures, etc., and made everything so home-like, so that the cozy school room in which we met will long linger as a pleasant picture in our memory. It was good to be there, and every absent teacher of the county has missed something that would have done him or her good all through the remainder of their lives.

"God Be With You 'Till We Meet Again."
Benediction. Rev. T. M. Wilson

The above program is submitted merely to give our friends some idea of our plans. Some of our pupils are sick now, but they may recover sufficiently to participate in the exercises. If they do, we shall be glad to extend our programme for their accommodation. If you would like to know why we do not have a concert, be on hand the first two days, and learn the reason for yourself. We not only invite, but we urge all interested in the great cause of education, especially the friends and patrons of our school, to show that interest by a prompt and constant and continuous attendance upon these closing exercises. Fathers and mothers, your children are just about as much interested in their books as you are. Your lack of interest at home accounts for their lack of interest at school; and their indifference reveals your indifference. About three of our patrons attended our last public examinations. We have had public exercises every month, and the average attendance in this cultured, education-loving town, has been perhaps (?) five. No wonder we have some pupils studying the same pages they traversed two years ago. No wonder we have such as this. "Why, folks don't care whether I learn anything or not." We have tried and tried to get some who are actively religious to attend our Chapel exercises occasionally, but even they are too busy to help our cause. O tempora! O mores! But we now offer you another opportunity. Come, and we'll do our best to keep you from regretting the great sacrifices you will have to make. Come Wednesday and Thursday and Friday.

Miss Bertie Allen visited friends in Birmingham last week.

Mrs. Bryant, of Notasulga, is visiting S. M. Goodwin's family.

Mrs. R. E. Cosper, has returned from a visit to friends at Jemison.

Mr. B. Allen, who was stricken with paralysis, has gone to Atlanta, Ga., for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Falkner visited the family of G. M. Bilbrey near Harpersville last Sunday.

Miss Alice Kinnett, who has been visiting her brother's family at Weldon, has returned home.

J. W. Goodwin, of Bessemer, came over Saturday to visit friends and attend the Memorial services

Mr. T. M. Goodwin is so happy these days that he hardly knows what to do or where to go—its a fine girl.

We are sorry to announce the serious illness of Mrs. J. H. Kincaid and hope we may soon be able to note her recovery.

Since spring weather has opened, the prayer meeting has revived, and we hope it may flourish and accomplish much and lasting good.

The Memorial services were held here Saturday according to announcement, and the program dispensed with was well enjoyed by the large crowd in attendance.

Prof. J. M. Garrett did not come down on the first Sunday, but the singing was "a go" all the same. Prof. J. A. Spearman, of Four Mile, and Mr. J. M. Babb, of Vandiver, added much to the success of the singing.

Rev. Mr. Skelton filled his appointment on the mountain Sunday afternoon and preached an interestiag sermon to a large audience, consisting of young people almost entirely. Mr. Skelton's text was in Genesis, 8:4.

Mr. Sim Lawley with Miss Myrtie Neal, Mr. Joe Ethridge with Miss Lonie Lawley, and Misses Rentie Lawley and Fannie Love, of Woodlawn, Ala., attended the Memorial exercises here Saturday, all of them returning Sunday except the last two mentioned.

BONAMI.

Four Mile Tellings.

Plenty of rain just now.

Foot pedlars and stray dogs are constantly perusing our town.

Dr. Powers, of Helena, visited friends on Four Mile a few days since.

Mr. Aaron Stone and wife visited relatives and friends here last week.

Prof. Jas. H. Spearman went to Birmingham on special business last week.

Mrs. M. Dunham, of Bessemer, is spending this week with her brother, Mr. Alonzo Cross.

Quite a number of our young people attended the picnic on the river side last Saturday and report having had a pleasant time. But oh, didn't we get wet?

Whew! what a large portrait came up South street and found lodgment on the hill, which is regarded as an earthly potentate awaiting the final catechetical.

The people of Four Mile are under many obligations to the commissioners of Shelby county for giving us a bridge across Four Mile creek. The bridge will be built shortly by J. M. Spearman.

Some of our boys, of late, seem to be very religious; they attend the prayer-meeting every Sunday night, but low and behold! when we learned why it was that they were so much interested, we found the meeting was not the attraction.

School Boy has been wondering for some time what had become of Aunt Fannie. We had almost decided she was caring for her chickens, when we heard she had retired from that unhappy life of an old maid. But, by gracious, I learn she was sadly disappointed for she married a woman.

As School Boy is not a teacher but hopes to be, he did not attend the Institute as many others did. We learn the Institute was quite a treat to those who attended, having with them the Hon. J. G. Harris, of Montgomery, of which he was quite a benefactor to that occasion. We learn the next Institute will be held at Four Mile, where all the schoolboys can attend. We feel justly proud that the good teachers of Shelby county have conceded to our request in giving us the Institute next time. We feel assured that the hospitable people of Four Mile will give it a cordial reception. Success to you. SCHOOL BOY.

Shelby Siftings.

Mrs. William Jackson, of Fayetteville, is visiting Mr. D. C. Glenn's family. She reports that hail and heavy rains have damaged the crops about Fayetteville.

Dr. A. T. Clark, E. T. Witherby, Earnest Averett and Miss Lucia Witherby, have returned from Birmingham, where they attended the Christian Endeavor convention, embracing last Sunday. It was an enjoyable and profitable gathering.

Messrs. George and Alexander Averytt anticipate attending the Confederate re-union at Houston, Texas. The latter may be detained because of the indisposition of his daughter, Miss Isla, who we regret to learn is quite unwell.

Capt. J. P. Christian has returned from a journey to St. Louis, Mo., on business for the Company, after an absence of six days. He had a pleasant time, going and coming.

P. B. Harrell has received from Mr. Wash M. Rhea, of Madisonville, Ky., a pair of red foxes, which he designs turning loose about the first day of July. He will build a pen in the woods, feed them a while, after which the cunning little animals will make their range and visit the pen frequently for refreshments.

P. B. Harrell visited and purchased from Mr. Rhea three blooded fox hounds over a year ago. Mr. R. is like most sportsmen—a noble, high-minded and honorable gentleman, with whom it is a pleasure to deal.

Not since Cleveland's election has our streets resounded with such shouts and manifestations of delight as were heard last Saturday evening, because Shelby out-scored the Columbiana Base Ball team 9 to 10. They compliment their opponents for both good playing and honest dealing. The young ladies were greatly rejoiced.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"I write to tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My case was scrofula in its worst form. A large tumor gathered under my chin on the left side and continued to grow until it was as large as a hen's egg. I had it lanced and had to keep a poultice on it all the time. I had tried many remedies, but my trouble lingered and I had about given up when I happened to read about Hood's Sarsaparilla. I concluded to try it, and after taking almost seven bottles I am again enjoying the best of health. The sore is completely healed, Hood's Sarsaparilla effecting a permanent cure." The Travis "Gal Baby" and the Trouble She Brought on—Two Double-Barrel Funerals in Three Days. "Powerful Stirrin Doctrine."

(Copyright 1898.)

"You mought proverbly think that a baby—and a gal baby at that—is a powerful little thing to bring on a general family rucus and git four full grown men killed off in less than three days, but I saw it come to pass right here in the Rocky Creek country," said Uncle Dan'l Rutherford to me one day whilst his talkin machinery was good wound up in regards to the dim and rusty past. In his old days Uncle Dan'l was particlar bright in tellin of things that had come to pass way back yonder in the first settlement of the country It is the reglar way with a man that has descended into the vale of years, and Uncle Dan'l, you understand, was nothin but plain human flesh.

The Travis "Gal Baby."

"I don't want to make no brags about them good old days, Rufus," Uncle Dan'l went on, "but, man sir, I have seen the time when excitement was so monstrous thick and plentiful in these piney woods till a little more and you could of raked it up with a splinter and cut it with your pocket knife. About that time the Trammels and the Travises all lived over there in the hill country. They had married and remarried till by gracious nobody couldn't tell anything for certain as to the kinnery between the two families. There was four boys in the generation—two Trammels and two Travises. They all travelled a tolerable fast and furious gait, and every one was dead game and game to the bone. If there was a man livin anywhere in forty miles around that got to spilin for a fight, you understand, all he had to do was to call on the Trammels or the Travises and git accommodations.

"By-and-by as time went on one of the Travis boys lit out and went down in the Flat Woods and got married to Miss Bettie Tomlin. Up to that time the Trammels, had always married Travises, and likewise the Travises had always married Trammels, so naturally of course it raised a little wind in the settlement when Bob Travis went down in the Flat Woods after his wife. The Trammel boys didn't say much right then, but everybody could tell that they didn't like it a blame bit, cause there was two grown gals in the Trammel frmily and both willin to marry in case of a pinch.

"Henceforwards after that Bob Travis and his wife didn't break bread and swap clothes with the Trammels very free and promiscus, and the next year when a little gal baby come to make the world look still more brighter to Bob and Bettie, Sim Trammel put out some scandalatious remarks to the effect that he had his doubts about that baby bein a full blood Travis.

"The next news we got from the hill country was that somethin had broke loose over there amongst the Trammels and the Travises. Bob Travis had took down his shot gun and killed Sim Trammel on sight, and then Toney Trammel had shot Bob Travis in the back when he want lookin. There was two dead, you understand, on the first rattle out of the box. By this time everybody knowed that whensomever the other two—Luke Travis and Toney Trammel met up together one or the other would have to bite the dust. Well, everybody was plum right about it exceptin that when the boys met and the smoke cleared away both of them had bit the dust.

"So it cometo pass that they had two double-barrel funerals over there in the hill country, both inside of three days, and all on account of one harmless and helpless little gal baby.

"Bob's widder she then took the baby and went on back to her folks down in the Flat Woods. I reckon no doubts you know young Misses Buckner—the wife of little Joe Buckner. Well she was Miss Bobbie Travis before she married, but way back yonder she was the little gal baby that brought on two double-barrel funerals inside of three days over in the hill country. The widder named her for Bob Travis, you understand, but she is the spitten image of Bettie Tomlin and as pretty as a picture."

Powerful Stirrin Doctrine.

I have seen a heap of preachers and politicusses in my day and time, and heard more sermonts and stump speeches than Carter had oats, and I maintain till yet that there aint so much in what they say as the in which they say it.

Onest upon a time I recollect they had a big campmeeting goin on down in the piney woods at Spring Hill Camp grounds. One mornin they changed the general plans and specifications and give several short talks by different visitin preachers. On the last round they brung forth a right young preacher from the city—I can't remember his name now. But at any rate he was a sky-scraper and a face-washer.

Old Squire Wilson was there that day, and whilst the Squire was one of the best and biggest men in the country, he never was arrested as anybody knows of for stealin Bibles and prayin in public places. But the talk which the young preacher from the city put up that mornin shook the Squire up terrible and pulled him around mighty clost to the Lord's side. As near as I can now remember the young preacher preached as follows towit below:

"They were standin there hand in hand together at the railroad station. He was a tall strappin young man, with the straight flush of manhood on his brow. She was a bent and wrinkly old woman, with the snow of winter on her head and the music of eternal springtime in her heart.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"A big red light flashed along the rails and shot out across the woods and fields, and the winter winds rattled and moaned through the telegraph wires.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"The whistle sounded loud and clear back yonder in the distance, and the smoke curlin up left a hungry lookin trail across the cloudy sky.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"Then the train dashed around a bend of the road and come thunderin down to the station. Now it will snap the cords that bind two lovin hearts together.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"He is goin way off somewherss out West to grow up with the country and carve out his own future hereafter. Cruel fate has so decreed that he must leave that pore old widder mother all alone in her sorrows.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she."

"By this time I took noticed that Squire Wilson had went down after his old bandana handkerchief, you understand, and looked like he didn't know whether to burst open or melt and run off. But the preacher went on:

"Out in the cold world alone that one happy young man must go, leavin his dear old mother and old home behind him. The familiar scenes that have known him for lo these many years will know him now no more forever.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"And that pore old mother, with her darlin son ten thousand miles away, must live out her few last remainin days on earth alone. Many and many a time will she cry out in the agony of her grief, "Where is my wanderin boy tonight?"

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"Now he is on the cars. The bell rings and the whistle blows. The conductor says "all aboard," and the train moves off, whilst the iron wheels seem to crush the very life blood out of that desolate old woman.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

"Now he has torn himself from her last lovin embrace. He is standin on the platform of the rear car now. He waves a last good bye and throws one more kiss. Her wrinkly old hand touches her pale lips and flutters in the air, and then she turns weepin from the sad and terrible scene.

"Farewell, mother," says he.

"Farewell, my son," says she.

The preacher broke off and quit and started back to the Amen corner. Squire Wilson got up and went forth to meet him.

"Parson," said the Squire, whilst the tears as big as glass marbles rolled down his face—"Parson, I don't blong to no church and I couldn't say for certain that I have got any religion, but I want to shake your hand and tell you I am powerful taken with the doctrine you preach."

SEEKERS OF THE PRESIDENCY.

McKinley Leads Among Republicans, But Dodges the Main Issue.

American history is fruitful in the record of the failures of men who have sought the presidency of the nation. Since the days of Andrew Jackson there has not been an instance of a man who has striven for the office actively for any considerable period in advance of nominations who has been successful in attaining it. The list of such seekers is a list of the most eminent men of their respective eras. Beginning with Clay, Webster and Calhoun, it includes further Cass, Douglas, Seward and Chase, and it ends with Blaine and Sherman. Considerations of expediency have ruled out some of these men; they defeated Clay and Seward. Personal rivalries operated to bring about the failure of others, like Cass and Blaine. There has been a fatality about electing candidates when a nomination was secured, as seen in the cases of Clay, Cass and Blaine. The position of an avowed candidate for the presidency is the most difficult one in which a politician can be placed. Unless he uses the utmost circumspection he will be in danger of making a fatal mistake with a view to the nomination. It requires remarkable wisdom and sagacity to sustain himself from blunders in the ties here, and when the prize of a nomination is gained after long effort, he he is at a disadvantage from his previous record in reaching an election. The defeat of Clay and Blaine, when their respective parties had sufficient strength to elect a different candidate in each instance, is proof of this.

There has been but one instance of a really spontaneous selection of a candidate for president with the full acquiescence of his party in fifty years. It was that of Gen. Grant in 1868. We mean by this a selection which had been indicated any length of time beforehand as one sure to be made, and of which there was no danger of its defeat by an alternative nominee. Gen. Taylor's in 1848 came nearest to it, but he was opposed by a large section of the whig party and made a division in its ranks. Both Tilden and Cleveland were taken more as a matter of policy than from their strict representative character. Neither came forward urging his claims or started a campaign for himself in advance. The two Harrisons, Lincoln and Hayes, were none of them recognized as seeking the presidency with the conspicuousness of their rivals, and Polk, Pierce and Garfield were not known to be seeking it at all.

Gov. McKinley has now the apparent lead among several rival candidates on the republican side occupying something the same position that Clay, Seward and Blaine occupied before him. He has not so strong a following as had those of his predecessors, but he has not so much to fear in an expediency candidate as had they. The republicans have better prospects of carrying the next presidential election than had their party at the time the other candidates were seeking it. They do not need to consult particularly the personal popularity of their candidate with the voters, because the party itself is almost sure to carry almost any candidate, provided he does not make a very serious mistake. Yet it is easily in the power of Gov. McKinley to make such a mistake, and present indications are to the effect that he is not free from the danger of doing so. We find this is his disposition to avoid meeting squarely the live issue of the coming campaign. This will not be the tariff; the tariff is much more in the nature of a dead issue; certainly it is such in comparison with another—the currency. It is idle to undertake to shirk or shift the issue of the currency. It is something to be settled. The business of the country demands its settlement, and the people engaged in that business will not allow that the currency of the country shall be ignored in order that a political triumph may be won in the interest of a party, much less of an individual politician.

If, while Gov. McKinley is attempting to divert attention from the currency to the tariff, Mr. Thomas B. Reed shall come out as boldly in taking a stand for sound currency as has President Cleveland, he will score a distinct point against his rival. In that event Gov. McKinley will be in great danger of adding another to the list of men who have trained themselves too much, if we may adopt this figure, in the race for the presidency. His only remedy for this mistake will be in following suit to Mr. Reed, and Mr. Reed will still have the advantage of precedence in this important point. Generalities will hardly do here. "One dollar to be as good as another," means not enough in such a connection. The men who are to nominate the next republican candidate for the presidency will make the inquiry as to whether the present state of affairs in this respect is to be continued, and more of the depreciated metal is to be put upon the country. Gov. McKinley turns the conversation to the tariff when this question is put to him. His disposition to dodge has afforded a fine opportunity for a bolder man to gain upon him, and puts him in danger of adding another to the list of candidates who have made fatal mistakes in seeking the presidency.—Boston Herald.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——Bob Ingersoll predicts a republican return to national power. Bob evidently believes there is to be one after all.—Albany Argus.

——Wages are increasing as well as the prices of grain, cotton and other farm products. A score of factories in the east raised the wages of their men during the last week.—Detroit Free Press.

——Republicans are welcome to all the fun they can get out of the democratic shindy over silver. There's a pot boiling for them and it will be bubbling long after our little affair has been amicably arranged.—St. Louis Republic.

——In critically reviewing the work of the last session of congress it is notable that ex-Czar Reed makes no reference to the silver speech he indulged in. This is, of course, attributable to the excessive modesty of the gentleman who is in active training for the presidency.—Detroit Free Press.

——The tariff question is settled for two years at least. Why not let it alone? Surely with an average duty of 50.06 per cent., the highest in the history of this or any other country, there is no call for again revising the tariff upward. And with trade increasing, industry reviving and wages advancing there is no sense in tariff tinkering.—N. Y. World.

THE ISSUE OF 1898.

Republicans Will Put Forward the Tariff Question.

The republican party will make the tariff a campaign issue next year. That is shown by the attacks now being made on the present tariff. In printing the reports of our exports last month, republican papers invariably point to the decrease as compared with our exports in March, 1894. And not only do they try to frighten the timid in this way but they endeavor to show that there will be no restoration of business until a new tariff law is enacted. They attribute the decrease in March and every monthly decrease since August to the Wilson bill. Even Bradstreet's has assisted in circulating this report. Its issue of last week contains an article on the country's foreign trade in March, taken from the Philadelphia Press. The statement is here made that the report for the fiscal year to April 1 is "very unfavorable" and that the nine months cover only a "little more than the period of the new tariff."

Every person as well informed on these matters as the managers of Bradstreet's knows that its reported decrease in exports after the new tariff law took effect was no more caused by that tariff than the previous decrease during the summer was. Every such person knows that the monthly decrease since September—some of the provisions of the new tariff law did not take effect until the beginning of the present year—has been much smaller than that of the summer months, when the McKinley bill was in force. Our exports were $55,000,000 lighter between May 1 and October 1 last year than during the corresponding period of 1893. From October 1 to March 1 the loss was only $30,000,000.

We find therefore, from the government reports that while the monthly decrease averaged $11,000,000 for the five months ending with September, the average for the next five was only $6,000,000. This is certainly a favorable showing. It indicates a notable improvement in our foreign trade since the new tariff went into effect. As already stated, some of the provisions of the McKinley bill were still in force in December. Now, if we begin our comparisons with the opening of the calendar year, the result will be still more favorable. Our exports of domestic merchandise—coin and foreign merchandise alone excluded—amounted in the first quarter to $199,086,089, as compared with $211,990,144 in the first three months of 1894. The loss was less than $13,000,000 under the new tariff, while in three months under the McKinley law last summer it was $39,000,000.

Another fact should be remembered. Exports were heavier in the early part of last year than in the corresponding period of any preceding year, with but a single exception. While our exports this year have not quite come up to last year's figures, they are $8,000,000 ahead of the record we made in the first quarter of 1893—preceding the panic and under the McKinley law.

There is nothing to be ashamed of in the government report on our foreign trade since the Wilson law took effect. Instead of being unfavorable, it is a very favorable report. The new tariff law is working all right. It is increasing the revenue and giving us a market every month for more of our surplus products than we sold abroad, on an average, during the life of the McKinley law.—St. Louis Republic.

RECEIPTS OF REVENUE.

The Present Tariff Law as Compared with the McKinley Law.

Our present tariff law has been assailed because it is not yielding revenue equal to the expenditures. It has been shown that this is only a temporary condition, and that in time it will yield abundant revenue. It would be yielding enough now but for the panic brought on by republican legislation.

But little attention has been paid to the fact that it was absolutely necessary to repeal or modify the McKinley law, because it was not yielding enough revenue. It has been said that it yielded enough under Mr. Harrison's administration, but this is not true. Else why was the surplus squandered? Why was a trust fund covered into the treasury and used to pay current expenses? Why were bonds to the amount of $25,000,000 continued after they were due? Obviously, because expenditures exceeded the ordinary revenue receipts.

A comparison of receipts of the last fiscal year with those of the present year is instructive in this connection. The McKinley law was in force during the whole of the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1894, and till August 28 in the present fiscal year. Up to March 1, 1895, embracing eight months of the present fiscal year, the revenue has been twelve and one-half millions greater than it was in the last fiscal year under the McKinley bill. It is true that July and August of this fiscal year were also under the McKinley bill, but the collections from customs during those months were less than in the preceding year. The collections of customs have been larger in every month since August than in the corresponding month of the preceding year. In December, 1894, they were greater than in December, 1893, by two millions in round numbers. In January, 1895, there was an increase of six millions as compared with January, 1894. In February the increase was about three millions. There was some falling off in the internal revenue for these three months, but the total revenue increased in December, January and February, as compared with the preceding year, by about seven millions of dollars. This shows that the present tariff bill is yielding more revenue than did the McKinley bill under similar conditions.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The Boston Herald says "the present advance in wages in the manufacturing establishments of the country is general." That is happily true, and it is equally certain that the cause of the advance is the repeal of the odious McKinley law and the substitution of a tariff system that to an extent at least releases the industries of the country from slavery to the trusts and monopolies.—Kansas City Times.

——Had the McKinley law never been enacted, but the tariff of 1883 allowed to remain in force, the treasury would never have been compelled, under either Foster or Carlisle, to suspend payments on account of the public debt.—Pittsburgh Post.

——The raising of wages in the textile industries reads more rhythmical than the pre-election wailings of the McKinleyistic monopolists.—Washington News.

NOTES FOR WOMEN.

JOHN HUNTER, the famous anatomist, once said that the feminine love of conversation was a consequence of a peculiarity in brain tissue.

AS ARTISTS, women have shown more taste than originality. They paint landscapes and portraits beautifully, but rarely achieve great pictures.

THE brain of woman is absolutely smaller than that of man, but is stated to be somewhat larger in proportion to the weight of the body.

A WOMAN with a military nose and prominent chin is certain to make her mark. All female society leaders have had such facial peculiarities.

THAT LUMP in a man's stomach which makes him irritable and miserable and unfit for business or pleasure is caused by indigestion. Indigestion, like charity, covers a multitude of sins. The trouble may be in stomach, liver, bowels. Wherever it is, it is caused by the presence of poisonous, refuse matter which Nature has been unable to rid herself of, unaided. EX-GOV. JOHN P. ST. JOHN has written a letter to the press denying that he was about to drop prohibition and advocate free silver coinage, or that he had discouraged the nomination of a prohibition candidate for president in 1896.

IN spite of the fact that the chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe, deprecated the matter, the upper house of the Prussian diet, by a vote of 72 to 38, adopted the resolution of Count von Mirbach in favor of steps being taken for the prompt settlement of the currency question by an agreement as to international bimetallism.

THE Herrick cannery at The Dalles, Ore., has begun to pack horse meat and Mr. Herrick was feeding a 3-year-old filly on grain to see if the quality of the meat would improve. GOV. HASTINGS, of Pennsylvania, has vetoed an act of the legislature giving married women the same control over their separate real estate that is exercised by married men. To give married women this power, he says, "is to invite ill-considered and selfish advice from meddlesome and impecunious relatives, and to afford new opportunities to the itinerant speculator on the credulity and inexperience of the people."

REPORTS recently reached Little Rock, Ark., of the wholesale kidnaping of negroes by white men from Louisiana who need farm laborers. When laborers were wanted, they crossed into Arkansas, selected the negroes they needed and took them to Louisiana by force. In some cases, the kidnapers have been seen driving before them like so many sheep a bunch of negroes with their arms pinioned and tied together.

A SPECIAL agent of the United States bureau of labor was in Ashland, Wis., recently gathering labor statistics. He had been all over Wisconsin and was about completing his report on that state. He said there was more child labor in proportion to manufacturing institutions in that state than in any others, and in regard to wages, hours, etc., labor in Wisconsin was worse off than any other state in the union except Pennsylvania.

THE downfall of the Hawaiian republic was said to be likely to occur at any time, the people being dissatisfied, particularly the American residents. At a recent conference between Mr. Thurston, late minister from Hawaii to Washington, and President Dole and other members of his cabinet, the former declared that the only hope of permanent peace on the island was to place Princess Kaiulani in the position on which the former monarchy proposed that she should some day have.

THE United States supreme court has decided that all officers and men in the army and navy, as well as those in the militia while in the service of the United States, are at all times subject to military law, and that court-martial sentences cannot be set aside or reviewed by civil tribunals on writs of habeas corpus. That is to say, when a man enters the army or navy he ceases to be a citizen in the sense of having the right of appeal to the civil courts, and is bound to submit to the military code under all circumstances.

A NOTABLE reunion of the blue and the gray will take place when the confederate monument at Oakwoods, Chicago, is dedicated on Memorial day. Officers who were prominent in the armies both of the north and the south will be present and will make the occasion memorable. Several carloads of flowers will be sent from the southern states to decorate the graves of the 6,000 confederate soldiers who are buried at Oakwoods. Every effort will be made to have this the greatest meeting of officers of the armies of the north and the south that has ever occurred.

THE Paris-Bordeaux race of automobile carriages, to be run in June or the beginning of July, promises to foreshadow the horseless period. The race—the competition of carriages without horses—is to demonstrate whether the long-delayed, oft-attempted invention has been completed by the creation and adaptation of a type of automobile carriage that is at once free from danger, and the management of which calls but for the exercise of ordinary skill. The race is to be international in the broadest sense, and unrestricted as to the employment of motive systems.

FLORIDA WANTS NO LOTTERY.

Rigid Law Made by the Legislature Now in Session.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 18.—The senate yesterday passed a bill to prevent the operation of lottery companies in Florida. The bill has already passed the house and now goes to Governor Mitchell for his signature. The measure is very stringent in its provisions, and it is said that, under it, even raffles at church fairs will be a crime. The law is intended to drive out the Honduras lottery company (successor to the Louisiana lottery) which had established a sort of clearing house at Port Tampa. The lottery drawings, it is alleged, have been taking place in Honduras, but as a matter of fact nearly all the business has been conducted at Port Tampa.

LABOR CIRCLES FOR THE WEEK.

The Advance in Wages by Many of the Concerns the Event of Comment.

NEW YORK, May 18.—R. G. Dun & Co's. weekly review of trade says:

The severe cold snap, with extensive frosts, and in some states snow, has fortunately done little damage to the great crops, though much to fruit, but has considerably retarded retail trade. The best news of the week is the advance of ten per cent in wages by the Carnegie works, followed by the Jones & Laughlin establishment and evidently implying a similar advance by many other concerns. The Illinois Steel company is starting its furnaces without granting the employes demands. No advance has been found practicable in the woolen mills, where conditions as to prices and foreign competition are very different, and about 10,000 workers are still idle at Olneyville, where the works should consume 600,000 pounds per week. In other departments of labor troubles are not serious and the demand for manufactured products increases.

MUST CONFORM TO SAME LAWS

An Important Insurance Bill Introduced in the Florida Legislature.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 18.—An important insurance bill now in the house is that of Mr. Harris. Broadly speaking all insurance companies—old line, mutual and Lloyds—are required to conform to the same laws. The Lloyds companies will be unable to do business in the state unless an agent is put in charge in Florida upon whom process can be served. As it stands insurers may be put to the trouble of sending to New York or other cities for the serving of legal process incident to the collection of a contested claim.

TRADE CONDITIONS LOOK UP.

Bradstreets Report, for the Week Just Ended, Encouraging.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Bradstreets today says:

General trade conditions throughout the country continue quite favorable. Activity in speculative and investment circles has exceeded that in merchandise lines, but gains made in the latter have in nearly all instances been retained.

Woolen goods manufacturers, even with orders for several months to come, are not anticipating wants, as prices for wool at the interior are above a parity with quotations at the seaboard, and lower prices are looked for. Heaviest transactions continue in Australians. The weather has retarded shearing. Rhode Island woolen manufacturers say the demand is largely for the cheaper grades. Among the more favorable features of the situation are bank clearings, the aggregate for the week being $1,161,000,000 or three per cent more than last week, when the total was the heaviest since the second week of June, 1893.

The entire region from Boston to Kansas City, Omaha, and South Falls, S. D., and south to the Gulf, reports damage to early vegetables and fruit from the late severe cold weather. It has also checked sales of the seasonable fabrics.

The crime excited national concern as it was the outgrowth of the Cleveland convention to nominate a man to make the democratic race for congress and occurred on the railway train, which was crowded with returning delegates. The convention was a memorable one, because of the deadly and bitter charges. Steakley and his victim supported the opposing candidates. Incendiary remarks attributed to ex-Congressman Snodgrass contributed to his defeat. Snodgrass was counsel for Steakley.

WANT THE RESTORATION OF SILVER.

The Complete Organization Effected and Delegates Appointed to the Memphis Convention—Spirit of the Resolutions Adopted.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 18.—The silver conference yesterday engaged in an animated debate over the name of the permanent organization. Many delegates favored "honest money union;" still others "silver union," but Governor Prince objected to confining the movement to one of the metals stating that the west was as favorable to gold as to silver and his motion to call the organization "the bimettallic union" was unanimously adopted. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved that an organization be created to be called The Bimetallic Union.

2. Its object shall be to inculcate the principles of bimettalism and the restoration of the free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 by the circulation of documents, the holding of meetings and other appropriate means.

CASE OF SURGEON FARWELL.

Secretary of Navy Herbert Has Rendered a Decision in the Matter.

Farwell, of the cruiser Columbia, who appealed to the department against Captain Sumner's order designating him to serve on a committee to return calls received by wardroom officers under a line of less rank than a surgeon. Secretary Herbert supports the appeal, holding with the naval regulations that "on all courts martial, courts of inquiry, boards of surveys and all other boards, line and staff officers take precedence according to rank." The department therefore instructed Captain Sumner to rescind so much of his order constituting the committee as providing for the senior line officer taking charge and calling the duty of such committee official and of a military nature.

CONDUCTORS' HEADQUARTERS.

Fight Precipitated Over Where Shall the Headquarters be Located.

ATLANTA, May 18.—It develops that there will be a lively fight today in the Order Railway Conductors convention. Yesterday an effort was made to select some place for permanent headquarters. AS TO WHO WILL MANAGE THE SYSTEM

Believed That the New Operators Will Take Steps to Enter Savannah—Sale Attended by Many of the Most Prominent Financiers.

AMERICUS, Ga., May 18.—The Savannah, Americus & Montgomery railroad was sold yesterday by the commissioners, S. H. Hawkins, T. Edward Hambleton and Dupont Guerry. Dupont Guerry read the order of Judge Fish and acted as auctioneer. The old Americus, Preston & Lumpkin, from Americus to Lumpkin, was sold for $200,000. The road from Americus to Abbeville and from Lumpkin to Louvale was sold for $500,000; from Lyons to Abbeville, and from Louvale to Montgomery, for $1,000,000, a total of $1,700,000 for the continuous line from Lyons to Montgomery.

These divisions in the sale was on account of the different issue of bonds issued as the road was being built. The road was then offered as a whole and knocked off to the first bidder for $1,800,000, the minimum price fixed by the court. The road in sections and as a whole was knocked off to J. W. Middendorf of Baltimore. Present with him were R. D. Sperry of Baltimore and John Skelton Williams, of Richmond, constituting a committee representing the bondholders.

The Albany, Florida & Northern from Albany to Cordele was sold to W. F. S. Hambleton, L. S. Bent and H. B. Talmage, for $200,000.

The most general report is that the new management will take steps promptly to enter Savannah, either by building an independent line from Lyons or by getting control of the Central's line from that point.

JUDGES DENOUNCE THE TURF.

The Trial of Ed Corrigan in Chicago Brings Forth Some Biting Remarks.

CHICAGO, May 18.—In the trial of Ed Corrigan et al yesterday morning Judge Richard Prendergast council for the defendants made a speech in which he referred to the Civic Federation, under whose auspices the recent raid at the Hawthorne track was conducted, in terms of biting sarcasm. He declared that certain members of the federation were identified with trotting horse interests and that they were at the bottom of the raid. The Roby people were also accused of being interested in it. He said he had himself seen sheriff Pease, who conducted the raid at Hawthorne make bets and that Pease had ohce run a race track. The Civic Federation is described as a lot of white robed and saintly priests of reform the tails of whose robes were held up by Acolytes Hunt and Brown (the attorneys for the Civic Federation.) Judge Pendergast said societies like the federation were shown by the history of nations to be contrary to public prosperity. The properly constituted authorities should regulate vice. In conclusion he asked Judge Ewing to admit testimony tending to prove a conspiracy.

Judge Ewing refused to do this, whereupon Mr. Pendergast said, if he could not have a fair chance to clear his clients he would waive examination in every case and let the cases go over to the June grand jury. The cases include those of Ed Corrigan, J. C. Burke and John Brannock and Joe Ullman, who are interested in the ownership of the Hawthorne track. The defendants were held in $500 bonds each.

DIOCESAN COUNCIL ADJOURNS

The Alabama Episcopalian Convention Meets Next in Selma.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., May 18.—There were some intersting discussions during the session of Episcopal diocesan council yesterday. The report of the Bishop Coadjutor recommended the sale of the Hamner Hall property in Montgomery and the appropriation of a part of the proceeds to educational purposes. This caused a spirited debate and the question was referred to a committee of five to report at the next annual session. The subject of missions afforded a wide field for debate, which the members availed themselves of.

The afternoon was spent in visiting the University and insane asylum and no afternoon session was held. Selma was selected as the next place of meeting. The last session will be held today.

ELKINS'S "SOLID SOUTH" PLAN.

The Senator-Elect Wants a Southerner for Vice-President, and Prefers Judge Goff.

NEW YORK, May 18.—According to Senator-elect Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia, who is now at the Waldorf hotel, the republican party will have a great opportunity in the coming presidential campaign to make big inroads into the democracy of the south. Mr. Elkin's idea is to secure a thoroughly national organization of the republican party instead of having as heretofore the North against the South. To secure this he would select a southern republican as as vice-presidential candidate and thus recognize the gallant figh that republicans in that section are now making. Judge Goff, of West Virginia, is his preference for the place, Mr. Elkin says.

The silver question, he declares, will adjust itself. He is in favor of the government establishing a parity between gold and silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 or 20 to 1, or whatever it deems proper, and then maintaining that parity.

Mr. Elkin does not think a straight gold man will be selected as the candidate of the republican party next campaign, but that a compromise candidate will be chosen. He did not, he avers, come to New York to meet ex-President Harrison, and he does not think that Mr. Harrison is giving the presidential nomination a single thought, although if he saw clearly that he was wanted the ex-president would no doubt listen to the call of his party.

POLITICS IN THE BLUE GRASS.

William J. Stone Believes the Democratic Party is in Danger in Kentucky.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Ex-Representative William J. Stone, of Kentucky, is in Washington to intercede with the president for the pardon of a young postal clerk of his state, who has pleaded guilty of violating the postal laws.

Mr. Stone is one of the most important factors in Kentucky politics, and has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the gubernatorial or senatorial race to come off next fall in the blue grass state. Mr. Stone has now declined to have his name used for these honors, and as a layman in his party is using his influence to steer the democracy clear of dangers in the near future. He does not think the democracy of Kentucky has a "walk over" in the gubernatorial race, and believes that success will come only with fine generalship, and unless this generalship is shown he fears the country may again be surprised by seeing another victory in his state for the opponents of the party that has so long been in the ascendancy.

THE STATEMENT AN ERROR.

Report That the Cruiser Perry Had Hurried Out of Port is Denied.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—The statement emanating from San Francisco, that United States cruiser Perry had hurried out of port on an important mission, and that she will make all haste possible to reach Bering Sea to prevent the United States cutters already there from seizing armed British vessels, as was the original intention, is not founded on fact. The Perry left on her regular cruise to join the patrol fleet. Captain Hooper of the Bush, the commander of the fleet, received in April, prior to sailing, specific instructions as to the search and seizure of sailing vessels. These instructions have not been changed.

NOT what we give, but what we have left, is the divine measure of our liberality.

BROTHER, are you an honest man? What about swearing a solemn oath that your property is worth only $500 when you know it is worth twice that amount? This is the deed of a perjurer. "Thou hast not lied unto man but unto God." (Acts v. 4.)

SISTER, are you an honest woman? What about that Bible or that song book you borrowed from the church and never returned? What about being sick when you are not sick? Rejoicing to see people when you sincerely wish they had staid at home? These are the deeds of—well, not angels.

IF the poet overshot the mark when he said "an honest man is the noblest work of God," we may safely say, that the noblest work of God, man or woman, is characterized by genuine honesty—voluntary honesty. A man who pays his debts simply because he is afraid of the law, is not, strictly speaking, an honest man. Compulsory honesty is no honesty at all. The vast amount of dunning, note taking and mortgage making extant, declares an alarming lack of voluntary honesty somewhere. It may have been in the past: it may not. An honest man's word is as good as his oath. Honesty is the measure of honor. "Better die ten thousand thousand deaths than once to wound mine honor."

WHEN we remember that we become like that we love, the mystery of self-likeness vanishes. How few can say, like Job, "I abhor myself." How seldom you find a man like that great philanthropist, who, when consulted about his own personal interests, said; "I have been so busy helping others, I have not had time to think of myself." And if to be a Christian, means to be like Christ, how few genuine Christians there must be! He carried our sorrow. He gave His life to save His enemies. Self-sacrifice was His most striking characteristic. How different are we from this delineation! How unlike our model! Love, praise, honor, serve and preserve thyself is the creed of the world. Yet, self is our greatest enemy. He is a hydraheaded monster that insinuates himself into all the avenues of human existence. He injects his deadly venom into the great heart of humanity, and embitters and poisons the whole current of social life. He locks the wheels of progress, and stunts the growth of Christian grace. No wonder we find engraved on the very portals of the royal highway these striking words: "If thou wouldst enter here, thou must conquer, thou must sacrifice thyself.' Alexander was considered great, but infinitely greater is he who, in the morning of life, meets in fierce combat, on the arena of his soul, his implacable foe, self, and winning a complete victory, then espouses the bleeding cause of humanity, and contends heroically till the last battle is fought and the last enemy destroyed. Monuments will crumble into dust; knowledge will vanish; riches will take wings and soar away; but a life of energetic unselfishness will survive earth's corroding showers and time's crushing wheels, and grow brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. "Even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." "Christ also suffered for us leaving us an example that we should follow His steps."

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHALOWS BEFORE.

An Oration Delivered at the Last Meeting of the Columbiana Literary Society.

BY J. B. FARRELL.

This same sentiment has been well expressed by these words; "things follow their tendencies."

History verifies our subject. All along down the ages, both great and small events have been announced by omens and premonitions. "The signs of the times" as they are generally called. Since the years of the fifteenth century each succeeding century closed with wonderful changes in the moral, political and educational world. Some of the most glorious changes have been brought about by the followers of the living God. In changing barbarism into civilization, and instilling into the baricaded hearts of the heathen the glorious truths of the gospel, and thereby changing paganism into christianity. Some have been by the fatal storms of life, which are as a roaring lion wandering about seeking whom they may devour. But we can tell when the storms are coming, and ought to be ready to meet them; for they cast their shadows long before the clouds reach the horizon. So it was when the great question of annexing Texas to the United States was agitating the mind of the people. They could see the dark blood-circled shadows of a general rebellion. They knew that the agitation of the slavery question was already irritating, and predicted that if Texas were annexed, it would bring about a war with Mexico. All of which soon came to pass. When the Methodist church divided north and south, on the slavery question, and presently the Baptist and Presbyterian, it was well known that the strong bands binding north and south were broken. This was only the shadow of the terrible monster of disseverance. But there is at this time a tremendous drift of religious denominations toward each other which if continued for fifty years as it has for the last twenty five, all this sectarianism that has for so long been inculcating prejudice among our people will have been banished from our midst, and all the principal denominations be brought together on some principle, and all be found marching on under the same banner. Unhealthy tendencies in our characters and dispositions ought to be watched and controlled healthy tendencies ought to be nourished and strengthened. The closing of the present century has premonitions of some wonderful event that is now foreshadowed by violent political and social agitations. Labor and capital—win brothers by all the ties in the financial world—are arrayed against each other. Wonderful disturbances are everywhere recorded. Surely the shadow of some momentous event has already overcast us. With the exceptions of our sunny south, the entire union has been shaken from center to circumference. And now the good news comes home to our ears that the entire country is looking southward for homes and investments. The bright prospects of the south are attracting considerable attention among the New York capitalists and causing them to behold this great field of waving golden grain, that has for so long been waiting for the harvester. It is only a question of time when the southern states will rank hightest in the manufacturing, commercial and educational interests of any section of the union. Northern capital is rapidly flowing into the south adorning the broad acres with workshops and villages, expanding the iron and cotton manufacturing industries assisting railway equipments, pushing electrical constructions and promoting great interests along many other lines. Why is this true? It is because she has been faithful over a few things, that she is now going to be made ruler over many. We grumble, mutter and complain about hard times and oppression; and sometimes amid the darkness we are almost made to believe that the hand of God has turned against us. But when we open our eyes and behold what wondrous love the Father hath bestowed upon his children, we are made to realize it is only His means of bringing us nearer to Him, and a forerunner of something grand and noble. And when our grumblings and mutterings shall have ceased, the clouds will pass away, and then we will be in the glorious light of prosperity.

The manufacturing facilities of our country are far in advance of those in the north, for several well defined reasons. The pleasant winters are a great improvement on the severe cold winter weather of our sister states of the north. No one will deny the fact that much more can be done in our pleasant climate of the south at much less expense.

Where there is severe cold for from four to six months in the year, there must needs be great preparation for it and an outlay of money. Again the colored labor of the south is the safest best and cheapest labor we have. The safest because they are not a race who lead in strikes and insurrections. Best because they are easiest controlled. Cheapest because they do not make the loss and expense, resulting from strikes. Again we have the natural resources right here in our midst and can manufacture cheaper on that account. Truly, is not the shadow of future prosperity already upon us? Is not the land of the south destined to lead our proud American states in manufacturing and many other useful industries? Truly our country is going to be THE country, our people THE people.

"Land of South; imperial land,
How proud thy mountains rise.
How sweet thy scenes on every hand,
How fair thy covering skies,
But not for this—oh not for these,
I love thy fields to roam—
Thou hast a dearer spell to me—
Thou art my native home.

Thy rivers roll their liquid wealth,
Unequalled to the sea,
Thy hills and valleys bloom with health.
And green with verdue be,
But not for thy proud ocean streams,
Not for thine azure dome—
Sweet sunny South, I cling to thee;
Thou art my native home.

I've stood beneath Italia's clime,
Beloved of tale and song—
On Helvia's hills, proud and sublime,
Where nature's wonders throng,
By tempe's classic sunlit streams,
Where gods of old did roam—
But ne'er have found so fair a land,
As thou my native home.

And thou hast prouder glories too,
Than nature ever gave—
Peace sheds o'er thee her genial dew,
And freedom's pinions wave—
Fair science flings her pearls around,
Religion lifts her dome;
These endear thee to my heart,
My own loved native home.

And "heavens best gift to man" is thine—
God bless thy rosy girls,
Like sylvans flowers they'l sweetly shrine
Their hearts are pure as pearls!
And grace and goodness circle them,
Where'er their footsteps roam—
How can I then whilst loving them,
Not love my native home.

Land of the South, imperial land,
Then here's a health to thee—
Long as thy mountain barriers stand,
May'st thou be blest and free!
May dark dissensions banner ne'er,
Wave o'er thy fertile loam,
But should it come. ther's one will die,
To save his native home."

WASHINGTON'S BOYHOOD.

BY EUGENE LATASTE.

Washington, the father of these glorious United States, was born February 22,1732, in Westmoreland county, Virginia. His father was a descendant of an English family that was very prominent. His mother was a well educated and refined lady. She had a great deal to do with the forming of George's character. When he was six weeks old he was baptized and brought at once under the good influence of the church. George was only four years old when his father resolved to move to a plantation on the banks of the Rappahannock, opposite Fredricksburg, that he might gain some advantages. It was here that George's school life began. He first went to a man by the name of Hobby, an old soldier that had been wounded so that he was not fit for duty. His limited education enabled him to teach a small school and also act as parish sexton. George soon found in Prof. Hobby a kind and loving teacher, and he found George to be a good and studious boy. It is said of him that while the other scholars were staring out of the windows watching the squirrels and birds sporting among the tree tops; or idly sitting with their hands in their pockets opening and shutting their knives or counting their marbles, or eating apples behind their books, or, naughtier still, shooting paper balls at the teacher's wooden leg, our George was studying with all his might. Closing his ears to the fuss in the room, he would not raise his head until he knew every word of his lesson. So well did he apply himself that by the time he was ten years old he knew as much as Hobby.

It was this worthy man's boast in after years that he had laid the foundation of Washington's future greatness. His father gave him lessons in arithmetic and penmanship after he came home from school.

George was always an example at school for his obedience, application, method and thoroughness. When a boy would blot up his copy-book Hobby would show him George's, which was neat and not a blot on it.

He was in his play as in school. He loved games and sports. No boy enjoyed a trial at wrestling, running or leaping better than he did. He played just as he studied, with all his might. One of his favorite games was to play war. He would organize two armies out of the school boys and have them to drill, parade and march, giving the school grounds a war-like appearance.

One of the stories told of George's truthfulness is as follows: A difficulty arose between several boys. Each side told a different tale. When some one said that George saw the fight Hobby at once asked him to tell of the difficulty as he saw it. What he told was different from what the other boys said and Hobby accepted it as true.

Soon after the death of George's father his connection with Hobby's school was severed. A few weeks later found him a member of Mr. Williams' school. Mr. Williams was a thorough instructor, and believed that scholars should master one branch of study before they took up another. "You are a good mathematician, George; surveying will come easy to you," remarked Mr. Williams one day. "I should like to understand it," replied George, "and I mean to understand it before I quit school." After this he began to study surveying and learned very fast. When he was only fourteen he surveyed the land about the school house. When he had advanced so far in his study as to give him some idea of the chain and compass, the principal instruments used in surveying, he began to put his knowledge into practice by surveying the neighboring fields, assisted by his school mates. He continued this way until his school days were over, when he was employed by Lord Fairfax. Obtaining the permission of Laurence and his mother, he set to work to prepare for the journey through wilderness, mountains and savages, accompanied by William Fairfax and three attendants. This was the beginning of his life. It hardened him for the great danger and exposure that he was to go through in his great military career.

DUTY

An Oration Delivered Before the Columbiana Literary Society.

BY E. B. PAUL.

Duty is the embodiment of all that is noble, good and true. It embraces what we owe to ourselves, to our homes, to our country, to our fellowman and to our God.

Having been created in the image and likeness of God. We owe to ourselves that we refrain from any act, habit or practice that would in any way tend to impair or degrade the beauty and holiness of this wonderful image. We owe to ourselves to embrace every opportunity and advantage, within our reach, that would intensify and increase the glory and grandeur of this likeness. It is our duty, as responsible beings, to develop every faculty of this masterpiece ot workmanship; and to fit and prepare ourselves, in the best possible manner, for the great future that lies unexplored before us.

We owe to our homes that we be diligent and careful for the peace and welfare of the members thereof; every mindful of their highest and best interests, employing every available means in making such homes the most agreeable and fascinating resorts on earth.

It is our duty, as children, to render implicit obedience to the will and requirements of our parents; always desirous of complying with the wishes of these dear ones, who are giving their lives, a noble sacrifice for us. It is the duty of parents that they instill into their children the principles and virtues of truth and honor; and that these children be taught to know the will and demands of God.

We are citizens of the grandest country that has ever enjoyed the glorious light of freedom—a country upon which an omnipotent God has placed the smiles of His approval. To him we owe the self-sacrificing toil of our hands and the unflinching fidelity of our hearts. It is with us to say whether her banner shall trail in the mire and whirlpool of degradation and shame, or whether it shall float in triumph over "a people whose God is the Lord." We have the power to bring the honor of this grand republic into total disrepute, or to advance it to the hightest pre-eminence. God forbid that any member of this society should sink so low as to permit one iota of the glory, which now encircles the brow of this fair land, to fade through failure in him to discharge his duty. May the fair daughters and manly sons of this society bear their part in hastening our country to the consummation of her splendid destiny.

As members of the great family of humanity, we owe to each other fraternal sympathy, love and assistance. It is our solemn duty to do all in our power to alleviate the sorrows of humanity. While the call for material assistance is sounding from far and near, there comes a more piercing and bitter cry from those who are groping in spiritual darkness, with no rays of the glorious light which we enjoy, to dispel their night. It is our duty to use our influence and means in banishing their night, and in pointing them to the Star of Bethlehem, whose radience resplendent shines full and free.

Having been aroused to the importance of the subject, we are led to inquire, "What is my duty, as a responsible being?" The duties we owe to ourselves, homes, country and fellowmen, being inseparable, arise in their strength and present claims that cannot be denied. But when we remember to whom we are indebted for all that we enjoy, we feel deep down in our hearts that our first and hightest duty is to God. We owe to Him, as our Creator and Preserever, the ceaseless praise of a holy life.

"Haste not; rest not; calmly wait;
Meekly bear storms of fate.
Duty be thy polar guide,
Do the right whate'er betide.
Haste not; rest not; conflicts past,
God shall crown thy work at last."

WASHINGTON THE STATESMAN.

BY R. H. O'HARA.

Washington, the father of our country, is remembered by every patriotic citizen; and, especially, on the 22nd of February, when grand festivities are given to celebrate his ever-living name.

Washington is remembered for the many soldiery deeds he performed, but more so for the many civic acts, and the success he had in governing the United States. It is said, "He was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen." After refusing to be made king he was unanimously elected the first president of the United States.

Washington grasped the helm of the ship of state, on April 30th, 1789, and was destined to guide her through many trying experiences.

On entering upon his presidential duties, he found the affairs in a deplorable condition. Like chaos, in the olden time, our government was "without form and void and darkness dwelt on the face of the deep." Enemies immediately threatened the country, both from within and without. The people of three continents had their daggers drawn against the young republic of America. The pirates of Morrocco laying their unholy hands on our rich commerce in the Mediterranean; the British grumbling and threatening war; the Spaniards blocking the Mississippi; the Kentuckians threatening to break the Union and join the Spaniards; the Indian nations from Canada to Georgia resurrecting the tomahawk; North Carolina and Rhode Island blowing on the confederacy and strong parties in other states against it. This was a deplorable state of affairs indeed, but the material with which Washington had to combat these, was more deplorable still. At this time there were only 600 troops, and not a cent in the treasury, but eighty millions of dollars in debt. The state of affairs at this period was enough to test the qualities of the most zealous patriot and the ablest statesman, but Washington despared not. He rallied around him the wisest of all his countrymen for his cabinent officers, and always consulted with them freely. After having selected the wisest and most patriotic for his cabinent officers and having invoked God's blessings, Washington siezed the helm with a gallant hard-a-lee, luffed his ship at once to the gale hoping yet to shoot the hideous gulf that threatened all around.

His first move was in silencing and pacifying the Indians, in which he was successful to a large degree. He was equally as fortunate in treating with the Spaniards. He next tried his hand with the British but, alas! he soon found that they were made of no such pliable stuff as the Indians and Spaniards. He did not only have the British to pacify, but he soon found it as hard to satisfy his own countrymen in the matter of a treaty as it was to please the British. But finally, a treaty was drawn up and ratified by Washington. It is said that the signing of the treaty displayed his firmness and the operation of it his wisdom. But scarcely had Washington become clear of his embarrassments with Britain when still worse were thrown in his way by France. The French, having served an apprenticeship in America and having witnessed the happiness of the free Americans determined to free themselves; consequently, envoys were sent to this country to treat for our assistance. Flaming on this errand, Mr. Genet lighted on these shores as an envoy from France. Mr. Genet's arrival in this country was received with great rejoicings. Sparkling dinners and festivities were given. Enraptured at finding in America such a cordial spirit toward his country, Mr. Genet set about at once, to call it into the fullest exertion, and by artfully holding up the contrast between British cruelty and French generosity, he succeeded in getting some persons in Charleston to begin the equipments of privateers against Britain. Washington, although in sympathy with the oppressed Frenchmen, could not so far belittle himself as to become the cats-paw of any nation. He therefore, issued the proclamation that it was to the interest of the United States to preserve a strict neutrality between the belligerents. This so enraged Mr. Genet that he threatened to overturn the republic; but the American people under the guidance of Washington, had become too patriotic to permit it. Consequently, Mr. Genet was quickly recalled. And now, Washington, after eight years of able and beneficial administration, yields the reins of government to his successors, praying God's choicest blessings upon his American children.

Columbiana Literary Society.

On last Friday evening our society met pursuant to adjournment at the hospitable home of Rev. C. W. O'Hara. Owing to the disagreeable state of the weather the attendance was not so large as usual but those present were highly entertained by the exercises of the evening, among the prominent features of which were an essay by Miss Ida O'Hara, subject: "Modesty," and an oration by Prof. John B. Farrell, subject: "Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before Them."

The next meeting of our society will be held on Friday evening next at the residence of Mr. J. R. White.

As this will probably be the last meeting in which some of our members will participate we desire to make it one of the best and most enjoyable, and would like to have a full attendance.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success.

The successes achieved by men and things are not always based upon merit. But a success well merited and unprecedented in the annals of proprietary medicine, should these ever come to be written, is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a botanic medicine, discovered nearly half a century ago, and the leading remedy for and preventive of malarial, rheumatic and kidney complaints, dyspepsia, constipation and biliousness.

Farmers of Alabama Rush From Poverty Into Millions.

EXCITEMENT IN MARSHALL COUNTY.

Unpretentious Owners of Land That a Few Weeks Ago Could be Bought For a Song Awake to Find Themselves Millionaires.

GADSDEN, Ala., May 14.—A dozen farmers in Marshal county own today 600 acres of land worth $14,000,000 which three months ago could have been bought for almost a song.

One of the largest finds ever known was recently made on the property, and you cannot now purchase land near there at any price.

For some time reports have been received here of the fact that a large discovery of gold had been made in Marshal county, but as such reports are usually exagerated and unreliable, little attention was paid to them. Your correspondent now, however, has it on the very best authority that probably the largest gold mine in this country has been discovered on Sante Creek, sixteen miles from Guntaville.

Citizens are Enthusiastic.

Major Hugh Carlisle, of Guntsville, one of the best known citizens of North Alabama, was in Gadsden yesterday, and while he is not an owner in the gold mines, he was very enthusiastic over the prospects. He verified the report of the find, and said that he knew it to be the biggest thing in the state.

Three months ago a dozen farmers went to work digging in what they though to be a seam of gold, and finding considerable quantities they sent for an expert, who told them that they had a fortune in the property. Seeing that their mines were panning out a larger quantity of gold each day, they again sent for experts. It was the report of these experts that has made the county wild on the subject of gold mining.

Worth Many Millions Now.

After an investigation of several weeks they reported that under the 600 acres of old worn out farm lands, there was undoubtedly $14,000,000 worth of gold. There was so much confidence put in this report, that a syndicate, formed by one of these experts, has offered a large royalty to the property agreeing to give them five dollars a day for each man put to work digging gold.

This offer has been refused and yesterday a large number of men were at work on a three-foot seam, which yields from $5 to $15 per yard. A stiff price has been offered for the 600 acres but all offers have been readily refused by the twelve farmers, who are determined to go it alone. Adjoining land cannot be bought for any price. The gold from the mines is of a splendid quality, and it is mined at an extremely low price.

ALABAMA ODD FELLOWS.

The Fifty-Fifth Session of the Grand Lodge Now On.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 15. — The fifty-fifth session of the grand lodge of I. O. O. F., of Alabama, convenced in this city at 10 o'clock a. m. yesterday in Erswell hall. About 200 delegates from all sections of the state are in attendance. Grand Master John G. Barret called the grand lodge to order and Mayor Vanhoose in a neat speech extended to the delegates the freedom of the city. Colonel Joseph Hodgson, on behalf of the press of the city, greeted and welcomed them. Z. T. Rudolph on behalf of local lodges extended his brethren hearty welcome. Grand Chaplain Tucker, on behalf of the grand lodge, replied to the addresses of welcome.

The order of business was then proceeded with and much important work was disposed of. The grand master's report was very elaborate and showed marked progress.

PRATT CITY IN ASHES.

The Prosperous Birmingham Suburb Suffers From a Heavy Fire.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 14.—Fire broke out yesterday afternoon in a small dwelling house at Pratt City, three miles from Birmingham, and with a strong gale blowing soon spread until forty dwellings mostly small and all frame structures, the hotel, city hall an northern Methodist church were burned. An appeal for help was sent here and a steamer and hose wagon with 1,350 feet of hose was sent to the scene. Water was hard to get and consequently the apparatus was of little service. The houses were built close to each other and went down one by one in a hurry. Finally, to prevent the entire town from being destroyed, dynamite was resorted to and several houses wrecked thereby stemming the onward march of the fiery elements. The loss estimated $50,000. Chief Mullins, of the Birmingham fire department, was injured, but not seriously. Mrs. O. J. Bonner, in delicate health, died of fright.

Mining Properties at Warrior, Ala., Are Sold to Stockholders.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 15. — The properties of the Hoene Consolidated Coal and Iron company at Warrior was sold yesterday by N. W. Trimble, of the United States court, as special master to satisfy a judgment in favor of a trust company of New York, which holds $50,000 worth of mortgages. The properties were knocked down to Henry Geotretreu, who represents the bondholders, for $20,000.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS.

The Buckeye State Contributes the Story of a Veteran's Search.

How Fred Taylor, a Member of the Gallant 189th N. Y., V. I., Finally Found What He Has Sought Since the War Closed.

(From the Ashtabula, Ohio, Beacon.)

Mr. Fred Taylor was born and brought up near Elmira, N. Y., and from there enlisted in the 189th regiment, N. Y., V. I., with which he went through the war and saw much hard service. Owing to exposure and hardships during the service, Mr. Taylor contracted chronic diarrhœa from which he has suffered now over 30 years, with absolutely no help from physicians. By nature he was a wonderfully vigorous man. Had he not been, his disease and the experiments of the doctors had killed him long ago. Laudanum was the only thing which afforded him relief. He had terrible headaches, his nerves were shattered, he could not sleep an hour a day on an average, and he was reduced to a skeleton. A year ago he and his wife sought relief in a change of climate and removed to Geneva, O., but the change in health came not. Finally on the recommendation of F. J. Hoffner, the leading druggist of Geneva, who was cognizant of similar cases which Pink Pills had cured, Mr. Taylor was persuaded to try a box. "As a drowning man grasps at a straw so I took the pills," says Mr. Taylor, "but with no more hope of rescue. But after thirty years of suffering and fruitless search for relief I at last found it in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The day after I took the first pills I commenced to feel better and when I had taken the first box I was in fact a new man." That was two months ago. Mr. Taylor has since taken more of the pills and his progress is steady and he has the utmost confidence in them. He has regained full control of his nerves and sleeps as well as in his youth. Color is coming back to his parched veins and he is gaining flesh and strength rapidly. He is now able to do considerable outdoor work.

As he concluded narrating his sufferings, experience and cure to a Beacon reporter, Mrs. Taylor, who has been his faithful helpmeet these many years, said she wished to add her testimony in favor of Pink Pills. "To the pills alone is due the credit of raising Mr. Taylor from a helpless invalid to the man he is to-day," said Mrs. Taylor. Both Mr. and Mrs. Taylor cannot find words to express the gratitude they feel or recommend too highly Pink Pills to suffering humanity. Any inquiries addressed to them at Geneva, O., regarding Mr. Taylor's case they will cheerfully answer, as they are anxious that the whole world shall know what Pink Pills have done for them and that suffering humanity may be benefited thereby.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

GEN. WILLIAM EATON, with a motley force of Americans, Greeks and Arabs, captured Derne, in Tripoli, on April 27, 1805, this being the first time the American flag was raised over a fortress beyond the Atlantic. Gen. Eaton was United States naval agent to Barbary. He had been consul to Tunis and was experienced in affairs on the north African coast. The campaign at Derne was an attempt to place a dethroned prince in possession of his rights.

ON April 25, 1891, the Chilean insurgent warship, Blance Encelada, was blown up by torpedos in Caldera bay and two hundred lives lost. The Blanco went down in a true torpedo attack. The assailants were the torpedo cruisers, Condell and Lynch. The Condell struck the Blanco with one torpedo at 110 yards and a second at sixty-five. She was struck amidships by one from the Lynch, and two minutes later, or nine minutes from the striking of the Condell's first torpedo, foundered, carrying down all but forty of her people.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

A Grewsome Find.

A singular occurrence took place at Opelousas, La., the other morning. An old colored woman living on the east side of the town heard some dogs growling near her house and walked out to see what it was about. On drawing near the dogs she discovered they were gnawing on a human arm and hand. The flesh was nearly all torn from the bones, but the sinews, skin and finger-nails yet remained. She gave information of the fact to some white gentlemen, who immediately repaired to the spot and examined the limb. They were not able to identify it. The graves in the Protestant cemetery, not very far away, were examined, but not one was discovered to have been disturbed. The flesh was not so much decomposed as to warrant the belief that it had long been buried. Inquiry was made to ascertain if anyone had been missed. No discovery has yet been made, and the matter has excited much curiosity. The finger-nails were thick, strong, and plainly showed that the hand was that of a working man.

Won't Believe He is a Defaulter.

A very curious state of affairs is reported from Charlotte, N. C. John Holland, the cashier of the Merchants' and Farmers' bank, confesses himself a forger and a thief, and that during the past six or seven years he has stolen between $75,000 and $100,000; but the people of the town refuse to withdraw their friendship from him. When he surrendered himself to the jailer that official refused to lock him up, and insisted on his eating at the table with his own family. The next day large numbers of the most prominent men in the place called to tender him assurances of their sympathy and regard, and when the United States district attorney arrived and fixed his bail at $15,000, they scrambled over each other in their anxiety to get their names on his bond. Holland has been very prominent in church and society, and people are at a loss to know what he has done with the money, as he did not appear to be living beyond his salary. The people seem bound to believe in him in spite of himself.

Married in Presence of a Corpse.

Standing by the corpse of a man who had been murdered, Mr. Louis Dorneck and Miss Margaret Gore were married at Quincy, Fla. A coroner's inquest was being held, when proceedings were interrupted by the entrance of Mr. Dorneck and Miss Gore, who begged Coroner Pitman to marry them immediately. The coroner had been showing the jury the wound in the murdered man's breast, and his hands were bloody. He suggested a more appropriate place for the ceremony, but Mr. Dorneck explained that Miss Core's father was in pursuit and that delay would be dangerous. Accordingly Coroner Pittman hastily said the words that made the couple one. As the groom handed the marriage license to the coroner the blood on the fingers of the latter made a stain on the document. The bride did not seem affected by the morgue-like surroundings. She is the daughter of a wealthy cigar manufacturer and the groom is one of her father's employes.

Georgia Gold Strike.

For several months reports of gold finds in Marshall county, Ala., near Gadsden, have been made. And now the largest gold find in the south is reported on Santa creek, 16 miles from Guntersville. Maj. Hugh Carlisle, of Guntersville, one of the wealthiest and best-known citizens of Alabama, verifies the reports, and says that he knows that the mines are the largest in the southern states. Men are now at work on a 3-foot seam, which is yielding from $5 to $15 per yard. Experts have examined the surrounding land and make the astonishing statement that under 600 acres there is undoubtedly $14,000,000 in gold. So confident of this fact was one of the experts that he succeeded in organizing a syndicate which offered the owners of the property a large royalty on the mines, agreeing to give $5 per day for each man worked in the mines by the syndicate. The property is owned by a dozen farmers.

Had Saws in His Shirt Tail.

A transfer of jailers was made at Memphis, Tenn., a few days ago, and the new turnkey concluded to search everyone. John Lang, a counterfeiter, was ordered by the suspicious jailer to take off his undershirt, and when the garment was examined four iron saws were found sewed in its tail.

Killed with a Ball Bat.

In a difficuly between two negro boys, Cornelius Foster and Dave Baker, aged respectively 18 and 15 years, at Meridian, Miss., the former was killed by the latter with a baseball bat. Baker was arrested and placed in jail, the corner's jury returning a verdict of guilty of murder.

The Judge Slid Down a Post.

The residence of Mrs. Horace Hall, in Houston, Tex., was destroyed by fire, with all its contents. There were several lodgers and none saved anything. Judge E. P. Hill had to escape by sliding down a post. Loss, $10,000; no insurance.

The Unwritten Law Enforced.

MR. ROBERT T. LINCOLN'S friends are said to be assiduously pushing him for the presidency.

THE country editors of New York state favor David B. Hill for the democratic presidential nominee.

GREAT BRITAIN will have the largest and America one of the fastest warships in the great naval demonstration at Kiel on the opening of the Baltic canal, in which all the European powers have signified their intention to be represented.

BEFORE the last election in New York Tammany had enrolled on its roster 35,000 names. An enumeration of its membership since the landslide which resulted in the election of Mr. Strong to the mayoralty shows a falling off of about 40 per cent., or a total of about 20,000.

THE "Illinois Society of Colonial Wars" wants to forbid by law the use of the American flag for common purposes, such as a decoration for any business house; for religious purposes, as by the Salvation Army; for personal adornment, as lapel buttons; in theatrical entertainments; as a trademark and for almost any purposes except those of the army and navy.

A REPORTER sent from Atlanta, Ga., to Houston, Tex., to report the confederate reunion wired his paper that it was stated that Gen. Schofield would be a candidate for president, and that his visit to the confederate reunion at Houston was in the interest of his candidacy. Gen. Wheeler and Gen. Joe Johnston were said to have planned the affair to capture the soldier vote and to get Gen. Schofield's nomination on a free silver ticket. It was believed at Houston that Speaker Crisp referred to Gen. Schofield when he alluded to "a western man with a war record."

KENTUCKY breeders of thoroughbred horses are greatly alarmed over the closing of the tracks at Chicago and the adverse legislation in New York. A few years ago Kentucky's annual crop of yearlings averaged over $1,000,000, but the business has dwindled down to one-third of that amount. Leading breeders expressed the opinion that unless something was done to elevate racing and put it on the high plane it occupied less than a decade ago, the breeding business would be completely destroyed and the valuable studs in Kentucky would become almost worthless.

GEN. C. E. KELLY, who led a detachment of Coxey's army to the national capital last year, left Oakland, Cal., recently for Washington, accompanied by his wife and two children in a prairie schooner. He believes that a monster petition will be as likely to obtain recognition from congress as a crowd of hungry men camped on the steps of the capitol and the purpose of his trip is to obtain signatures to his prayer for national help in times of general depression. He will deliver lectures at all the places through which he will pass and will explain the purposes of his mission.

THE direct loss in crops, the damage to machinery and stock and the decrease in the value of land due to weeds in this country amounts to $10,000,000 a year, according to the estimate of Botanist F. V. Coville, of the agricultural department, and the loss is sustained almost wholly by the farmers. His bulletin embodies a number of important directions for weed eradication, and urges that these methods be incorporated in our system of practical farming. Broken land should not be permitted to remain idle, and mowing or cutting off the main stems of weeds is deprecated.

TREASURY officials said that steps would have to be taken to secure additional revenue to meet the legitimate expenses of the government, now that the decision of the income tax cases had deprived the treasury of fully $30,000,000. Nothing could be done until congress meets, and, as the president had emphatically declared that he would not call an extra session, no substantial relief was expected until next winter. It has been suggested that an additional tax on beer would be the best means of increasing the revenues. It was also said that whisky and tobacco could stand more tax.

GEN. GORDON AGAIN

Enthusiastically Re-elected Commander of the Confederates.

GREAT REUNION COMES TO AN END.

The Boys of Gray Leave Houston After One of the Most Successful Gatherings Since the Bloody Days They Meet to Commemorate.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 25.—The Confederate veterans reunion is over and the delegates who have been here four days are leaving. Yesterday was another inclement day, but the time was well occupied by receptions to Miss Winnie Davis, the visiting generals and by the business of the convention.

General Stephen D. Lee read a telegram of greeting from General N. H. Harris, of San Francisco. He then offered a resolution of thanks to Adjutant General Moorman for his efforts in behalf of the organizations which was adopted by a rising vote, amid much enthusiasm.

Colonel Lee, of the federal army, secretary of the Shiloh Battle Field association, was introduced. He was greeted with loud applause. The yell, he said, with a smile, sounded familiar. He made a short address, expressing his pleasure at being permitted to greet the old confederates whom he respected so highly. He invited them to attend the next reunion of his association, the mission of which, he said, was peace on earth and good will to men. He paid a high tribute to Albert Sidney Johnson. He came fresh from the G. A. R. and assured the veterans of the kindly feeling entertained towards them in that quarter. A vote of thanks was tended Colonel Lee for his address.

General Schofield's Appreciation.

The chairman then laid before the body a letter from General Schofield to Commander John B. Gordon, expressing his appreciation of the cordial reception given him in Houston.

A letter received from Charles B. Rouss, of New York, a private in the confederate army, offering to give $100,000 towards the establishment of a large memorial association, under the auspices of which an illustrated history of the war shall be published and the relics, etc., collected and preserved at one central point. A committee of one member from each state to be selected by the state was appointed to confer with Mr. Rouss on the subject.

Greetings were read from Lucy Lee Hill, daughter of General A. P. Hill. The veterans were invited to attend the dedication of the confederate monument at Chicago. Invitations to the veterans to meet next year were received from Chattanooga and Mobile, but they were, of course, too late.

A resolution to establish a home for the poor children of the confederate soldiers were referred to a special committee. Baltimore also sent an invitation that the reunion in 1897 be held in that city.

The nomination of a commander was then taken up. Major G. N. Stubbs named General Gordon for re-election.

General Gordon Re-Elected Commander.

Gen. J. B. Gordon was re-elected commander by acclamation, which was done amid great cheering.

Gen. Gordon then advanced and said:

Only the searcher of all hearts knows the depth of gratitude which the act awakens in this heart, of all the honors possible to men I would rather have a place in the hearts which you have opened to me today than to wear all the honors the earth could bestow and the God of liberty being my helper, I will go to the grave feeling that the last, the brightest and noblest epitaph that could be written over my dead body, when you carry it to the grave, would be "here lies a confederate soldier." God bless you, my comrades, and make me worthy of this unparalleled tribute.

General Wade Hampton was then elected commander of the department of the army of northern Virginia.

The vote was enthusiastically given by acclamation.

Gen. W. L. Campbell and Gen. T. N. Waul were nominated for the place of commander of the Trans-Mississippi department. The vote was taken and General Cabell was elected. Gen. S. D. Lee was then elected commander of the department of the army of Tennessee by acclamation, amid the greatest enthusiasm of the day.

A committee has been appointed to see to the establishment of a benevolent society to take charge of aged veterans. The convention then adjourned without a day.

SCOPE OF THE POLYGAMY LAW.

Does It Apply to States and Territories Outside of Utah.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—A practical application to Washington city of the Edmunds anti-polygamy law, originally designed by its framers to apply only to Utah has resulted in numerous arrests of colored people here for its violation. Most of these persons were simply carrying on methods which originated in the slave-holding period when legally celebrated and recorded marriages between negroes were almost unknown. Some of the most desirable real estate in Washington, in direct line with the White house is colored as to title by conditions arising out of the order of things above described. The property being in the hands of colored people who are entirely unable to say whether their fathers and mothers were married according to forms of law or not. A recently inaugurated crusade against persons living in this legally unrecognized condition has resulted in great increase in the demand for marriage licenses, the highest record in any one day being 139. It has also brought cases before the courts and yesterday afternoon a test indictment was found by the grand jury to bring in an issue the question whether Utah anti-polygamy law applies to the District of Columbia and to all other territories of the United States including, of course, the Indian reservations.

THE TRIAL OF OSCAR WILDE.

How It Is Progressing—The Defense Opens the Argument.

LONDON, May 25.—Upon the resumption of the trial of Oscar Wilde yesterday, Sir Frank Lockwood, solicitor general, made application to the judge for the reinstatement in the case of the evidence in regard to Shelley, which the court eliminated from the case yesterday. The court refused to grant the application. Sir Edward Clark then opened the case for the defence. He complained of the unjust manner in which the prosecution had been conducted, and declared that because of this, the defendant could answer to only the remnant of the charges. Wilde was then called to the stand and repeated the testimony he gave in the previous trial. Wilde is physically weak and was allowed to sit while testifying. Wilde's testimony brought out nothing new. Sir Frank Lockwood, throughout the cross-examination carefully avoided giving the defendant any opening for a literary speech.

THE "RUTH" WINS THE PRIZE.

Baldwin and the Dians entered by Mr. Andrew Simonds, of Charleston, S. C. The wind was light and the sailing races were only fair. The races were attended by several of the officers of the Atlanta and Raleigh.

CHILD OF THE TIMES

The Silver Movement Born of the Prevailing Discontent.

WHAT GROVER CALLS THE MOVEMENT

Letter of President Cleveland to the New York Democratic Editors Expressing Regrets, and at the Same Time Nailing the Silver Idea.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Two hundred and twenty-seven editors and their friends were present at the banquet on the Democratic Editorial Association of the state of New York held at Delmonicos last night. Letter of regret was read from President Cleveland. Hon. David B. Hill was present and spoke. Among other things, Mr. Cleveland wrote:

Our party is so much a party of power, and its proper action and usefulness are dependent upon a constant adherence to its doctrines and traditions, that no tendency in our ranks to follow the misleading light of a temporary popular misapprehension should go unchallenged. Our victories have all been won when we have closely followed the banner of democratic principles. We have always been punished by defeat, when, losing sight of our banner, we have yielded to the blandishment of undemocratic expediency.

There is a temptation now vexing the people in different sections of the country which assumes the disguise of democratic party principles, inasmuch as it presents a scheme which is claimed to be a remedy for agricultural depressions and such other hardships as afflicted our fellow citizens. Thus because we are the friends of the people and profess devotion to their interests, the help of the member of our party is invoked in support of a plan to revolutionize the monetary condition of the country and embark upon an experiment which is discredited by all reason and experience, which invites trouble and disaster, in every avenue of labor and enterprise, and which must prove destructive to our national prestige and character. When a campaign is actively on foot to force the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver by the government at a ratio which will add to our circulation unrestrained millions of so-called dollars, intrinsically worth but half the amount they purport to represent, with no provision or resource to make good this deficiency in value and when it is claimed that such a proposition has any relation to the principles of democracy, it is time for all who may in the least degree influence democratic thought to realize their responsibility.

Our party is the party of the people, not because it is wafted hither and thither by every sudden wave of excitement and misconception, but because while it tests every proposition by the doctrines which underlie its organization, it insists that all interests should be defended in the administration of the government without especial favor or discrimination.

Our party is the party of the people because in its care for the welfare of all our countrymen, it resists dangerous schemes born of discontent, advocated by appeals to sensational or class prejudices, and reinforced by the insidious aid of private selfishness and cupidity.

Above all our party is the party of the people when it recognizes the fact that sound and absolutely safe money is the life blood of our country's strength and prosperity, and when it teaches that none of our fellow-citizens, rich or poor, great or humble, can escape the consequences of a degeneration of our currency.

BRADSTREETS ON TRADE.

Mistaken Reports as to the Damage of the Wheat and Grain Crops.

NEW YORK, May 25. — Bradstreets says:

The moderate reaction in the stock market last week and this week, caused primarily by repeated frosts and reports of severe damage to cereal crops and other farm products, was followed only in part by a corresponding check to the movement in general trade. Our special telegraphic advices furnish the most striking evidence of a broadening of a demand for staples yet produced, and the following data, telegraphed this journal, are the most bullish made public since the upward turn began on or about March 1.

No one of the larger grain states confirmed the reports of severe damage to wheat and corn with which the exchanges have abounded, and there is less reason to believe in the extent of it as currently reported. The most bullish feature of the wheat situation lies in the announcement of restriction of Argentine and Russian exports, reduced export ability of nearly all leading producers, and shorter supplies of importing countries. Few believe that wheat has touched its highest point on this wave, although twenty-five cents per bushel above the lowest since the panic

LONDON, May 25.—Yesterday was opening day of the Doncaster spring meeting. Increase of Duties on American Goods.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—A report to the state department from Consul Tate at Barbadoes, West Indies, states that the proposed new tariff, which he submitted in a statement recently, has been agreed to. In addition to the increases of duty upon American goods which he gave at the time, there has been an increase on dried and salt fish of 20 cents per 112 pounds and on rice 86 cents per 100 pounds. Molasses, formerly free, is 24 cents per gallon and sugar, formerly free, is $2.40 per 100 pounds.

Wisconsin Labor Paper's Troubles.

OSHKOSH, Wis., May 25.—The labor Advocate suspended yesterday after a precarious existence of two years. It was started by L. W. Rogers, the prominent American Railway Union man on money furnished by Eugene V. Debs, who now holds chattel mortgages of $300 on the plant. It is probable that the paper will be run as a free silver organ, under the title of the Silver Dollar.

Fresh Excitement at Shanghai.

Fulton Gordon Will Not Be Indicted.

MR. WATTERSON'S POLITICS.

The Louisville Editor Will Not Participate in the Kentucky Campaign.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Mr. Henry Watterson, editor and proprietor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, is in the city. Mr. Watterson will leave this eveing for Louisville, but he does not propose taking any active part personally in the great political fight over the senatorship which is now at its height in his state. Next fall Mr. Watterson will go abroad, where he will remain a year with his family, engaged in travel and in performing certain literary work.

I should rather not talk about Kentucky politics, said Mr. Watterson to a reporter yesterday. The Courier-Journal is every day maintaining a strong position in favor of sound money, though holding aloof from participation in the personal struggle now going on for the senatorship and the various state offices.

I am afraid that the main issue in Kentucky is being lost in a selfish scramble for office, and as all the gentlemen who will present themselves before the convention are my friends, and as I have never taken the slightest interest in the disposition of the patronage, I do not care to become a party to a contention which puts the democratic future in Kentucky in the very gravest peril. I shall not be in the next convention, nor, indeed, in the country during the next presidential year. For nearly thirty years I have been holding forlorn hopes and filling impossible breeches, and both my domestic and business interests require that I should take some respite, which I think I have earned.

FEDERAL COURTS MUST CLOSE.

Appropriations May Not Be Sufficent to Keep Them Open Until June.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The visit of Col. Poucher, distric attorney for northern New York, and Marshal Peck, of the same district, to this city to see what can be done to furnish money to run the Federal courts to the end of the present term has resulted in the discovery that in all probability the courts must close next week. The Attorney-General gave the law officers very little satisfaction and in fact gave them to understand that there would be little or no relief at the next fiscal year unless congress immediately on its assembling appropriates sufficient money to meet the deficiency before January 1.

An official at the department of Justice said yesterday as the appropriation for witness fees and for running expenses of the courts was literally all used up, he expected to see an order issued within a few days closing all the Federal courts on or before June 1.

THE UNITED PRESBYTERIANS.

Rev. Dr. McMichael Elected Moderator by Acclamation.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 25.—The general assembly of the United Presbyterian church began its business session at 8 o'clock yesterday morning in the Sixth Church, East End. After devotional exercises Rev. Dr. J. B. McMichael, of Monmouth College, Illinois, was elected moderator by acclamation. This is the first time in the history of the church that this has been done. Rev. Dr. William J. Reed and Rev. Dr. A. G. Wallace were re-elected clerks. A committee was then appointed to extend congratulations to the Presbyterian general assembly. The rest of the session was taken up with hearing the reports of the trustees of the assembly and woman's board.

They will not return to this country until September and will visit Italy, thence going through Switzerland, Germany and Austria, returning home by way of France and England. Mr. Tarsney was abroad when Mr. Cleveland called an extra session, and at that time his program of travel was cut short.

DEATH IN THE WAKE

String of Cars Dash Down a Slope to Destruction.

MEN AND MULES HURLED TO DEATH.

Fatal Accident at Platt Mines, Alabama. The Narrow Escape of the Intire Force of Workmen—The Fastenings Loosened.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 25.—Down a slope to destruction ran a string of cars at Slope No. 4 of Platt mines yesterday.

It seems that this string of cars was at the top of the slope and that by some mishap they were away from the fasteners. Then there was nothing to stop them and they dashed down the steep slope at lightening speed.

William Fields, a negro driver, Neal Brady and two mules were on the track in front of the cars. The mules and the negro driver were hurled to death, while Brady was probably fatally injured.

As it happened the men were just going to work and these were the only persons in the shaft at the time, but if there had been any others the chances are that they would have shared the fate, for being in front of the cars meant nothing short of death.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS.

Deliberations of the Great Body Still in Session at Dallas.

DALLAS, Tex., May 25.—When the assembly met yesterday after the usual formalities, Rev. Samuel Young, of Atlanta, moved that all speeches except those of the chairmen of committees be limited to five minutes. This was carried by a vote of 61 to 52. Dr. Lefevre then submitted a report on the fraternal letter of the northern assembly. The letter will be printed in the minutes. A suitable reply was sent by mail.

Rev. C. R. Hyde, then submitted a report on Young People's societies. There was great opposition to the report and finally a substitute was adopted which embodied only a portion of the original paper. The recommendations of the report of the committee on education were then taken up seriatim and adopted without opposition down to that referring to the office of Secretary. Rev. W. E. McIlwaine, is the committee's candidate. Dr. Angus McDonald gave notice that he would present the name of Dr. Supton and Rev. Mr. Hyde said he would press the re-election of Dr. E. M. Richardson, the present secretary. Dr. Richardson has consented to serve if re-elected.

STRONG FOR STEVENSON.

"Ike" Hill Says He Is a Favorite With Ohio Silver Men.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—"Ike" Hill, who manipulated the mace in the house of representatives during the last congress, and gained much favor for keeping the members in order when great excitement prevailed, has arrived in the city. Col. Hill has just gotten through running a convention in his county in Ohio, and is confident that the free silver sentiment will dominate the actions of the democrats throughout that state in the next presidential campaign. "The democrats out in Ohio think that Adlai Stevenson is about the best man in sight for the presidency," said Mr. Hill, in response to inquiry, "but they will wait awhile before showing their hands on that question."

CRISPI ON ITALY'S POSITION.

Home and Foreign Matters Explained. Parliament Must Be Dissolved.

ROME, May 25.—A grand banquet was given in the Theatre Argentina last evening in honor of Premier Crispi. More than 500 were present, including leading politicians and other notabilities of the kingdom. Crispi had a most enthusiastic reception, and delivered a forcible, eloquent and very important speech. He affirmed the pacific sentiments of Italy, whose interests accord with the peace of Europe. Never has the cordiality of her relations been greater with all the powers, including the United States. He insisted upon the necessity of providing for the defense of social order.

FOR A COLONY IN FLORIDA.

A Michigan Company Purchases 300,000 Acres in the Peninsular State.

SAGINAW, Mich., May 25.—A colonization company has just been formed here with Congressman Linton at its head. David Swinton and C. E. Linton, of Saginaw; Congressman D. D. Aitken, of Flint; D. L. Markey, Major N. S. Boyton and Thomas Watson, of Port Huron, are interested. The company has completed arrangements for the purchase of 300,000 acres of land in Florida, on the southeast coast, running from Fort Pierce to the Biscayne Bay. The deal involves a cash transfer of over $5,000,000. It is hoped to get colonists from Dakota.

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 25.—The United States steamships Atlanta and Raleigh which have been here for two weeks will sail today for Hampton Roads.

SENATOR FAULKNER ON SILVER

He Does Not Believe the Democrats Will Declare for Free Coinage.

WASHINGTON, May 25. — Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, has always been known as a friend of silver, and at one time he was openly declared in favor of free coinage. When silver was demonetized in India, however, Mr. Faulkner came to believe that it would be folly for the United States alone to open her mints for turning the silver of the world into legal tender, such a result he thought being only practicable by some international agreement.

There has been an attempt to call a silver convention in West Virginia this summer, but I do not think it will be successful. I opposed the movement as being ill-timed and useless in a year when there was no national convention to which delegates could be sent. Even some of the free silver newspapers have declared against the convention, and inquiries sent to leading men throughout the state have brought in a great many adverse opinions.

Undoubtedly the national democratic convention will make some concession to the silver men, but this concession will not be for free coinage. I believe that some satisfactory arrangements will be made for the recognition of silver, so that the government may not at the same time be embarrassed.

THEIR LIVES NOW IN DANGER.

Two Young Brutes in Illinois May Be Lynched for Their Crimes.

DANVILLE, Ills., May 25.—A lynching is talked of as a result of an attack upon two young ladies in this city Wednesday night. Shortly before eight o'clock as Misses Laura Barnett and Lilian Draper were walking across the Vermillion river bridge within two blocks of the heart of the city, they were attacked by John Hall, Jr., and William Rice. Miss Draper made her escape, but Miss Barnett was knocked down and carried by the ruffians into a neighboring field. John Downs, who attempted to go to the assistance of the two young women, was badly beaten by the two men. Miss Barnett was not found until after ten o'clock. She was unconscious and badly bruised. Hall and Roco were arrested yesterday and bound over to the grand jury. There is much excitement and the jail is heavily guarded.

JOSE MARTI IS NOT DEAD.

Only a Hoax of the Spanish Government to Weaken Cuba's Cause.

TAMPA, Fla., May 25.—Telegram received last evening by Cuban leaders from Jamaica emphatically deny that Marti, Cuban leader, is dead. It has turned out as predicted, that it was only a hoax of the Spaniards to weaken the Cuban cause so that the Spanish government could secure a loan from the German government in order to successfully carry out their purpose in whipping the Cubans. The people of this city and especially the ones in a position to know gave very little credence to the report when it was first circulated and they were very jubilant last night over the news received.

FATAL EXPLOSION IN OMAHA.

One Family Missing, and Another Lady Killed by the Combustion.

OMAHA, Neb., May 25.—An explosion in a cottage at the corner of 26th and Caldwell streets at 12:30 yesterday, blew the house to pieces, completely wrecking it. Mrs. G. S. Osborne, whose husband is a telegraph operator, was so badly burned that she died shortly afterwards. William Henry and his wife, the other occupants of the house, have completely disappeared. The explosion appears to have been caused by a large quantity of purposely arranged gasoline or other explosives.

What the North Carolina Legislature Did.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 25.—The fusion legislature made the boast that they would greatly reduce the expenses of the public printing, but yesterday it was discovered that the performance does not come up to the promise. The report blanks of the railway commission last year cost $33 for 125 copies. Those for 1895 are just received. There is the same number and they are exactly like the others, yet the cost is $94 and there is a balance yet due for ruling, so that the total cost is thrice as great as last year's charges.

The Inland Route is Satisfactory.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 25.—The United states terpedo boat Cushing arrived here at 8 o'clock last night in command of F. F. She will coal here and await orders.

BROWN CHEMICAL CO. BALTIMORE, MD.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, MAY 30, 1895.

"Between two evils" it does seem that many people choose both.

If we wish to gain greater influence over our fellow-men, have charity towards them at all times.

Let us strive to make our lives as pure as snow-fields, where our footsteps leave a mark but not a stain.

Why do some people wonder that everything in this world looks wrong when they are looking through spectacles which are dimmed by prejudice and malice.

Good deeds shine as the stars of heaven. Write your name in kindness, love and mercy on the hearts of thousands you, year by year, come in contact with.

"It is better to labor all day for nothing than to be idle an hour and receive pay for it." What a pitiable fact that so many fail to realize the truthfulness of this statement.

When one thinks that nobody cares for him, and that he is alone in a cold and selfish world, he would do well to ask himself this question: "What have I done to make anyone care for and love me, and to warm the world with faith and generosity?"—Lutheran.

The only way to make friends and to be happy ourselves, is to think of some one else and do something for them. To forget self entirely by trying to help some other poor soul over the rough places in life. Selfishness is the bane of all evil. We are sad and want everybody else to be in the same condition. Let us wear a sunny face. We can if we will. It blesses us and all who come under its influence. By it burdens are lightened, sorrows banished and everything made bright and cheerful. Draw near to the throne of God and bring from this holy communion a face as bright as the stars and let it glow and shine on all around.

The agricultural interests are looking up as they never have before! The farmers of Alabama, especially, are making every possible effort to make a living at home. This is one of the best signs we have of better things to come.

Release the farmer from debt and place him upon his feet again and you will see prosperity, plenty and happiness on every hand.

We look to mother earth as the source of all our material wealth. With our farm interest properly developed and carried on, our farmers will soon become the independant citizens of our state, instead of the dependent ones as they now are. The merchant will again ask them for trade, as they did of old and the farmer will not need to beg for credit. All will be anxious for their trade.

Mr. Farmer, see first, that your family and stock are provided for, so that you need ask no man for credit for provisions for yourself and provender for your stock. Remember, when you raise corn, wheat, oats, etc., they are worth more to you than you get for them in the market. They are worth just what you PAY for them at credit prices when you MUST have them.

Again the crops of this state are never an absolute failure, but the farmer generally reaps what he sows. So much for our agricultural interest. See our vast mines of coal and iron. The advantages of the manufacturer, on account of the nearness of the raw material and our fine climate.

Capital is heading this way and there is going to be an interest in manufacture that never has been seen before in the South. Then the farmer will have a home market and good prices for everything they may want to sell. A home market is the best market in the world and when we are able to make way with our own productions, prosperity will come and the people will certainly be prosperous and happy.

A. F. SMITH,
Tax Collector.

A LITTLE girl fell out of bed one night and when her mother asked her how it happened, she replied' "I went to sleep too near the place where I got in."

How many persons when they are converted go to sleep "too near the place where they get in." Just fold their hands and say, "it is finished, I'm all right." Oh, what a mistake! Could they only realize that they are in danger, and that the only way to grow in grace is to work, be willing to do whatever they may be called upon to do and remember that God never asks any one to do anything they can not do. When you are converted you are just in and if you stop then to sleep you are apt to turn over and fall out. Be sure you are far enough from the place where you entered before you sleep at all if you must rest. If you will once get started in the "up and doing" strain you will not want to sleep. Try it once and see.

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years wa've been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consupmtion, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Parker & Armstrong, druggists.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know

Neuralgia

ATTACKS THE EYES

Makes THE LIGHT Unbearable.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY USING

Ayer's Pills

"My husband was subject to severe attacks of neuralgia which caused him great pain and suffering. The pains were principally about his eyes, and he often had to remain in a darkened room, not being able to stand the light. Ayer's Pills being recommended, he tried them, using one before each meal. They very soon afforded relief, followed by permanent cure. I am a strong believer in the efficacy of Ayer's Pills, and would not be without them for ten times their cost."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Tex.

The many people who attended the examinations of the Columbiana Fitting school, not only have the thanks of the instructors, but every one who takes a true interest in education. We, the editors of this issue of The Chronicle, make to them our profoundest "salem."

For Whooping cough Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is excellent. By using it freely the disease is deprived of all dangerous consequences. There is no danger in giving the remedy to babies, as it contains nothing injurious. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The public examinations of the Columbiana Fitting school embraced the 22d and 23d of May. The pupils showed by their examinations that they had studied faithfully during the session and that the teachers had discharged their duty in teaching thoroughly the different books studied. Most all the patrons were present and were perfectly satisfied that the teachers and pupils had done their best, in fact, all present were pleased with the examinations throughout. Prizes were offered to the following classes: Spelling, Walter O'Hara, grammar, No. 2, Walter O'Hara; history reading, Pearl Hendricks; history, Eva Davis.

We would not forget the Primary grammar class, consisting of Temple Myrick, Ocie Curlee, Pierce Mason, Alphonse Verchot, Eva Davis, Belle Cromwell, Lizzie Williams, and Mabel Greek. The way in which they answered the questions surprised all who were present. After they had finished Dr. Teague arose and said; "There is not a person in this house, unless it be the teachers, that can give these definitions as correctly as these children." So well did they acquit themselves that their teacher gave each a prize.

Persons who sympathize with the afflicted will rejoice with D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is an old sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, but has not heretofore been troubled in this climate. Last winter he went up into Wisconsin, and in consequence has had another attack. "It came upon me again very acute and severe," he said. "My joints swelled and became inflamed; sore to touch or almost to look at. Upon the urgent request of my mother-in-law I tried Chamberlain's Pain Balm to reduce the swelling and ease the pain, and to my agreeable surprise, it did both. I have used three fifty-cent bottles and believe it to be the finest thing for rheumatism, pains and swellings extant. for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

On or after this date any one caught stealing onions from the garden of Mr. Joe Parker will be punished to the full extent of the law.

If King Solomon was alive he would now say: "Go to the traveling man learn his ways, and be wise." Mr. C. W. Battell, a Cincinnati traveling man representing the Queen City Printing Ink Co., after suffering intensely for two or three days with lameness of the shoulder, resulting from rheumatism, completely cured it with two applications of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This remedy is gaining a wide reputation for its prompt cures of rheumatism, lame back, sprains, swellings, and lameness. 50 cent bottles are for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

MARRIAGE—WHO?

Ask Judge Leeper, He Alone Can Tell and Wouldn't.

Sunday, at high noon, Judge Leeper was suddenly aroused from his easy chair and his studious research of Peck's Bad Boy and His Pa, by a shaking door as if a cyclone had struck the house. The judge hastened to the door, exclaiming at each step, "I am coming! Don't knock the door down, times are too hard!" In feeble tones the reply came, "Haste to the wedding, for the bride awaits thee." This was all that was necessary to arouse the judge to a sense of duty. He seized his hat and threw it across his shoulder, then, with coat in hand and his choice volume, Peck's Bad Boy, hugged securely under his arm, he yelled to the stable boy, "Fetch my carriage!" But in less time than it takes to tell it the judge left his house, made his way to the ditch many yards away, but this was no barrier, as he is an experienced Leeper. He called back to the man, "Come, show her to me. Where is she?"

The bride having been left on the bench in front of Johnston & White's store, became very impatient and went out to meet him; but, alas! she was rudely passed by, but understood the judge to say, "This is one time the boy shan't get ahead of his pa." However, at this time the boy had heard nothing of the approaching marriage, but, as soon as his grandmother notified him he betook the velocity of a mogul engine, but failed to overtake His Pa. The usher, H. Hammond, placed the crowd. Next came the pages, A. B. Milner and C. Greek, then came the bride with the maid of honor (the druggist's wife), next the groom with his best man, whom he called Mr. Lawyer Ollie Leeper, Esq., LL.D. These were followed by a large number of attendants. The jailer reminded the judge that he was reading from the wrong book. This confused the judge, but he soon procured the proper book, then began the ceremony, never daring to substitute a word, no, not even the name of the bride and groom. The judge is a firm believer in woman's suffrage, and verified the fact by trying to make the groom assume all the marriage vows of the man and woman, which would have left him at the mercy of his lady. The judge insisted that he take these vows, but with deep emotion he pressed the bride's hand as if to say, "Too much for me." The woman was unwilling to be ignored after riding twenty miles to get married. The judge became aware of the fact, and proceeded to adjust matters. However, their names seemed to be unknown and unknowable.

The judge desires that it be well published that this is to be his last court house ceremony. Hereafter they will be invited to his handsome parlor, over which his sign, a lovely marriage bell, will soon hang.

Dr. Teague's Address.

Friday morning, at the closing exercises of the Fitting, Dr. Teague delivered an address of twenty-five minutes upon the necessity of physical, mental and moral training for the development of perfect manhood. The doctor handled the subject in a plain, forcible, masterly manner. He reduced the learning and experience of a long life to its last analysis and gave the charmed listeners the benefit of condensed common sense. We have listened to many metaphysical disquisitions upon this and kindred subjects but never did we get so much plain, common-sense logic in so few words. As this learned divine stood before his audience, his large head stored with the lore of ancient and modern philosophers, historians, poets, and theologians, well-poised upon broad shoulders supported by a well-knit, massive frame that dilated with the magnitude of his subject, his well-chosen words carried conviction to every heart. Each one in the audience could echo the sentiment — there stands a man. There stands a man who has force, physical, mental, moral force-power, the power to "wield the club of Hercules entwined with roses." There stands a man of character—a Godly man—a man who has practiced what he preached. A man developed physically, mentally and morally. A type of man "who was created after God's own image." May the truths so eloquently spoken sink deep into the minds and hearts of the youth addressed.

THOUGHTS.

They say this is a vale of tears,
A land of shade and night;
They fill our hearts with darkling fears,
Excluding all that's bright.

But why above our heads the arch,
Star-gemmed and full of light?
Why on the path 'long which we march
Such splendors greet our sight?

Why pants the soul for things to be?
Why leaps the heart for joys
To come? If all must instant flee,
Life filled with fading toys!

Does heaven alone to tantalize,
Create these burning hopes?
And leave us ne'r to realize
The bliss his goodness opes?

Nay; fill to utmost, brimming full,
The cup of hope and joy;
There shall not be a saddening lull—
A drop of dark alloy!

Fill up thy life with deeds of love,
With prayer and grateful trust;
Celestial blessings, like a dove,
Shall cheer; and hover o'er thy dust!

A lady at Tooleys La., was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Tisler, a prominent merchant of the town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The commencement day of the Columbiana Fitting School opened Friday, May 24.

The opening song, welcome, was sung by school. The beautiful singing made the entire audience feel like they were welcome, and that there was something still better in store for them.

Prayer was then offered by Rev. W. I. Sinnott.

Dr. Teague was introduced to the audience and delivered the annual address. His theme was education. A subject familiar to him and one that he has impressed upon the minds of the people throughout his past life. He showed satisfactorily that it required an education to make bread and meat and to secure a homestead, and that it was expected of them to develop the physical, moral and intellectual man to the utmost. His address was encouraging and highly appreciated by all. The declamations, recitations and music were charming and thrilling.

At the close of the morning exercises Bro. Watkins was introduced to the audience, to the delight of all present. He revived the entire audience and applause rang out all over the house.

The primary department proved that they were thoroughly instructed and trained by Miss Louella Teague, their teacher. The recitations and songs were splendid and showed that Miss Louella had spared no little pains in drilling them.

After the exercises were over a beautiful waiter of flowers was presented to Prof. Greek by Mr. Elza Paul, showing the pupils' high appreciation of him.

A beautiful gold watch chain was then presented to Mr. T. K. Roberts by Mr. Elza Paul in behalf of the entire school for their love and appreciation of him. After receiving the chain he responded, with tears in his eyes, that the links composing the chain would call to memory, in after years, the names of the teachers and pupils of the school, and as the links of the chain were closely joined together, so may our hearts be joined together forever. The touching song, "God be with you till we meet again," was sung after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. T. M. Wilson.

The successful contestants for the prizes in declamation were: Elza Paul, Walter O'Hara, Essie Mason and Mabel Greek.

BACHELORS.

A bachelor is an unmarried man; one who has taken the first degree in any of the liberal arts.

First, bachelors have a pitiful appearance.

Second, they are pitiful because they stand alone in the world, and have no loving wife to take care of them.

Third, bachelors nearly always batch, and they have to cook for themselves, and how in the name of common sense can they digest the food they cook? More especially the biscuit. I won't speak of the poor creatures too rough, for most of them can't help being bachelors. I never heard of but one bachelor from choice, and no doubt he was too stingy to divide his property with a wife. This bachelor wouldn't go out in society for fear he would meet some fair maiden and she would steal his affections. But after awhile some kind young men persuaded him to go to some kind of a gathering, where there were to be some feminine genders, and sure enough in the crowd was a beautiful young widow. Well, this bachelor didn't take any part with the ladies at all. But after a while this young widow went to the bachelor and told him that he needed a guardian, needed a good wife to take care of him. Don't you think this wretch went back to his hut perfectly disgusted, and vowed he never would go out in society again. This is just what he vowed, but his vow wasn't any stronger than a poor hungry gnat for in just time enough for these same young men to go back to his hut he was persuaded out to another gathering. This time the widow did the persuading, and she succeeded in winning the bachelor's love. He was no longer a bachelor for they were soon married. Whether they are still living or whether they are dead, or whether they are neither no one can certainly tell.

That Fishing Party.

About two weeks ago three of our distinguished lawyers decided they would like to go on a fishing expedition. In order to have everything ready so that they could begin fishing as soon as they arrived at the appointed place "one of the party" left for Birmingham two days in advance of the crowd to purchase the trot line. He had orders for about six gallons. When the rest of the party thought this "one of the party" had had sufficient time to get everything in readiness to meet them at the appointed place they set out for that place. But, lo! When they arrived this "one of the party" was not there. They waited patiently for three days and when that time came and this "one of the party" still did not appear the rest of the party thought it best to look after him as there was some danger of his getting tangled up in that trot line. Unwilling to wait longer, for they, too, wanted a piece of the line, they left for Birmingham and there found this "one of the party" wrapped up in about five gallons of the line. Finding the line so badly tangled they purchased a new supply and all three set out for Kelly's creek. They returned last week and reported plenty of fish in the creek and a nice time.

A REPLY.

The owl is the emblem of wisdom, owing to his aplomb when perched upon a tree, with his large sapphire eyes peering into space unconscious of any danger that may surround him. So with some of the young men who live apparently upon their own admiration, ever ready to impart their store of knowledge to those who are willing to be punished by them. Of late their topic is woman's dress. Patience has ceased to be a virtue and we are glad of an opportunity to respond. We confess there are a few extremists of both sexes, and is it not more unpardonable in a man than a woman to be a slave to fashion? The Apostle Paul says in the Holy Writ: "Thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, Thou hast crowned him with glory and honor, and set him over the works of thy hand." This, in our humble judgment, is a committed charge much higher than dictation to women about their apparel. If we understand the meaning of this scripture it is the works of God's hand that they are to look after, and not those of women.

Young men, let charity begin with your own sex. Have you ever noticed the thirty-six inch trousers, the scissor-tail coat, the short, pointed vest, the board and Mother-Hubbard shirts, the high stock collar, the little cravats, big cravats and cravats, the long hair, short hair, and hair?

We are pleased to tell you that deception is not confined to women. The latest thing is a three-cornered piece of raw silk fastened securely to the bottom of the left coat pocket, representing the corner of a handkerchief. Girls, don't humble the boys by asking the loan of their pretty handkerchief. We would be sorry to know that any of the girls would rob the boys of their vain glory

As yet nothing has been said about the tan shoes that ladies wear, but we wonder if the fashion was confined to women only if we would not hear more about loud shoes.

We wonder why boys wear their hats on the back of their heads, the side of their heads, and on their heads.

We wonder why some men object to dainty rings and bracelets when they themselves wear a quantity of heavy-weight jewelry.

We wonder why the boys think the girls are ignorant of the fact that boys use curling tongs, chalk, also pink coloring, which they sometimes misapply, to their nose. They certainly make mistakes as this coloring is more conspicuous on the nose than it is on the cheek. Boys, the red nose is no longer fashionable. Now, we know that you will quit.

Wonder why ladies don't object more seriously to the much-abused train? Women's trains, as well as their patience, are often worn threadbare by men's feet.

No woman is purer than Martha Washington, the mother of this, our grand country. Nevertheless she wore low-neck and short-sleeve dresses.

We realize that "the world is a stage, and the many men and women thereon are actors," and the conceited boys have their part to play.

WOMAN'S PLACE.

It is most assuredly not at the ballot. Neither does a true woman aspire to the place of men in the capacity of lecturer or law-maker; but is content to remain in the sphere for which God created her—that of "looking well to the way of her own household," comforting the distressed, and acting the angel of light and love in the home, imparting truths and teaching principles of justice and right, making men on whom our country depends for the dispensation of just laws and honorable deeds, preparing those intrusted to her care for home, country and heaven.

"Blessings on the hand of woman,
Angels guard its strength and grace,
In the palace, cottage, hovel;
O! no matter where the place!

"Would that never storms assailed it;
Rainbows ever gentle curled;
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules world."

Give her more time from the drudgeries of life, and she will appear as a brilliant diamond in the intellectual world.

Who can soothe the fevered brow and aching head? Who can lend the sympathetic ear, or speak the words that bring a ray of hope to the desolate soul—who but she whose life is one page of charity and love? Woman!

"Woman, how divine your mission
Here upon our natal soil!
Keep, O keep, the young soul open
Always to the breath of God.

"All true trophies of the ages
Are from mother love inscarled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

"Blessings on the hand of woman!
Fathers, sons and daughters cry,
And the sacred song is mingled
With the worship of the sky

"Mingled where no tempest darkens,
Rainbows ever more are curled;
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world."

Mother—You are at the foot of the spelling class again, are you?

Pierce Mason—Yes'm.

Mother—How did that happen?

One of our prominent colored preachers consoled his congregation by saying that Christ did not come to the high alone, but to the low, for in the Bible are these words, "Lo, I am with you always."

Our town is aspiring to be a city, with a free school, which shows at least it is not without spirit. The old classic saying is, "We can because we think we can." We trust it will be verified in the present case.

FASHION NOTES.

Creases in trousers, like weeping village maids in novels of high life, are discarded.

Cutaways have no braiding this season. But they have three buttons and not quite the indelicate length of last autumn.

White parasols are the thing for summer with thin dresses, and they come in great variety. One of the prettiest styles is of plain white silk, with two rows of lace insertion set in a little above the edge, but perfectly plain ones are good style and quite inexpensive.

Flowers, feathers, aigrettes, ribbons, velvet, lace, and ornaments of steel, jet and Rhinestones are the most popular trimming for hats, and several kinds are often used together, being invariably so deftly arranged as to present a perfectly harmonious ensemble.

Children's hats are exceedingly pretty. Dark straws are again in favor, although for white gowns there will be later worn leghorns.

Madame la Mode showers so many artistic novel designs and shades of color on the new cotton fabrics that it will not be the fault of her toilette if the summer girl is not a picture this season.

One beautiful imported gown of green organdie is so exactly the shade of June grass that with the perfectly colored wild flowers scattered over it, the effect brought to the mind is a vision of fresh country fields with bright blossoms. A black gauze ribbon, painted with buttercups and tied in knots at intervals, borders the bottom of the dress. The corsage is trimmed in fichu effect with delicate mull embroidery and the same buttercup ribbon.

As for points of information concerning street gowns, the drooping waists, large sleeves and full skirts increase in popularity.

Fashion's affinity to folly is its chief charm in the minds of men. There is that irresistable delight in the performance of foolish things which insures a permanent popularity for love and dress.

Clem and Lena sitting in the parlor between 11 and 12 o'clock.

Lena—Do you play base ball?

Lena—Oh, how I wish I could see you make a home run!

Mr. Greek made the home run.

The Gratitude

Of those who have long been sufferers from some disease which has baffled the skill of physicians, and then have been restored to health by Hood's Sarsaparilla is difficult to express. It is such feelings which prompt the writing of testimonials like the following:

"I cannot begin to tell how thankful I am for the health Hood's Sarsaparilla has brought me. Since taking it I am a new woman. I was at death's door and my friends thought I could not live. I was crippled with rheumatism and my body was very much bloated. I have taken several bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and now keep it in my house as I would not feel safe to be without it; it gives me instant relief. I am now 50 years old but feel much younger since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I gladly recommend it and do all I can for Hood's Sarsaparilla in return for the benefit I have received." MRS. A. SOUND MONEY MEN.

Unexpectedly Large Attendance at the Memphis Convention.

Gen. Catchings Selected as Permanent Chairman—Secretary Carlisle's Speech —The Speaker Accorded a Perfect Ovation—The Platform.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 24.—The "Sound Money" convention, which met here yesterday afternoon, was a much bigger affair in point of attendance than the most sanguine of its projectors had anticipated. There are thousands of visitors in the city, and the Auditorium, with its seating capacity of 8,000, was taxed to accomodate the crowd seeking admission.

The delegates began to assemble at the Auditorium shortly after 1 o'clock. There were few men of national reputation in the columns that marched up the aisles with military tread, but those that were recognized came in for a hearty greeting Gen. Thomas C. Catchings, of Mississippi, who has parted with his flowing beard since the adjournment of congress, was unrecognized at first, but when the assemblage caught on to his identity it made the rafters ring. Others who came in for a true southern demonstration as they appeared at the head of their state delegations were Congressmen Kyle, of Mississippi; Clark, of Alabama and Patterson, of Tennessee; Lieut.-Gov. Alvord, of Kentucky, and Lieut.-Gov. Stannard, of Missouri.

When Chairman Crawford of the local committee of fifteen assumed the gavel at 2 o'clock there were 620 delegates on the floor, and 1,500 spectators of both sexes in the galleries.

The few words of welcome in behalf of the Bluff city were prettily and quickly spoken and permanent organization was then in order.

The Alabama congressman was recognized for the purpose of presenting the name of the little giant from Mississippi as permanent chairman, but he availed himself of a call to the platform to lead off the oratorical fireworks with a speech that aroused all the energetic enthusiasm of his audience.

"We are not a forlorn band making a desperate and hopeless fight," said Representative Clarke, "but we are here to give form and organization and voice to a deep-rooted and widely-spread public opinion, that is growing in volume, and which is destined to mold the financial policy of this country. We have nothing to fear in the fight that has been forced upon us. The conservatism of the American people will not allow its monetary system to be dragged down to the debased level of Mexico and China. The roar of the free silverites is as the roar of a fire fed upon chaff that soon burns itself out and leaves but ashes and smoke. It is but the echo of the fiat moneyites. Standing here as a southern man, I say that I have firm confidence in the sound sense and integrity of that section of the country, in the cotton men and the industry that has made Memphis one of the most important cotton markets in the world.

"We are not the blind followers or tools of any man or set of men, but we are led by a man who has, like no other man since Jackson, the confidence of the American people. [Prolonged applause.] Why? Because the American people know that their president is honest [cheers]; that he possesses mental and moral courage [more cheers]; that he is not only a man, but a whole man; that he has a wisdom that no obloquy can darken."

Shouts and stamping followed the speakers' retirement from the platform, and there was more of the same kind when the motion was put.

The selection of Mr. Catchings was made by a unanimous viva voce vote, and the congressman accepted the honor in a graceful speech. He said:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION—There comes a time in the life of a man when words fail him when he wishes to express the emotions by which he is moved. Such a time has now crossed my path. Could I live forever I could not sufficiently express to my friend from Alabama the impression which his warm words have left within me. Gentlemen, in my judgment no convention that ever assembled met for a nobler or higher purpose than this, brought together from almost every southern state, coming from every walk in life, representing as you do all vocations, industries and conditions in life. I speak the truth, not a man has come here to advance a personal end or a selfish purpose. Believing that the free and independent coinage of silver at the 16 to 1 ratio would be disastrous to all private and public interests, we have laid aside our private affairs for the time to take counsel together how best to prevent it. The character of the delegates to this convention is far beyond the reason of captious criticism and adverse comment. This body is composed of the great mass of honest, intelligent, patriotic citizens. If we are right, we are not only right now, but we are eternally right. We have assembled to give testimony in open church to the faith that is in us. We have been misrepresented from one end of the land to the other, epithets have been hurled against us, and we have been charged with entertaining views which we scorn and disdain. It is said, for instance, that we are monometallists. Let us here and now place the lies upon that charge. [Applause]. It has been said, again, that we seek to so contract the currency that prices will fall. Let us stamp that also as a lie. Let us pass a series of resolutions that will be our declaration of faith, and then challenge any man to put other words on our lips. Let us, when this convention shall have adopted these resolutions, adjourn and go to our homes with determination to stand by them. Let us organize ourselves into a movement militant and not quiescent; for, believing as we do, we would be recreant to our duty if we failed at all times to let our views be known. Let us nail our colors to the masthead and let the old ship go on her course regardless of the obstacles that we may encounter, having faith that, with truth as our guide, we will reach our destination in safety.

"Gentlemen of the convention, we should take heart at the fact that our views are sanctioned by all the great people of this country outside of political life. Suppose we adopted the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1. It will bring about silver monometallism pure and simple. When the simple issue is put before the people I do not believe that they will be willing to put this country on a silver basis."

The remarks of the chairman were frequently interrupted by applause.

After the selection of C. C. Matthews, associate editor of the Commercial-Appeal, as secretary, a committee on resolutions was appointed, and, on motion of U. M. Rose, of Arkansas, one delegate from each of the states represented were designated to prepare the pronounciamento: John M. Atherton, Kentucky; E. H. Richardson, Georgia; S. C. Cox, Florida; George M. Trenholm, South Carolina; George E. Leighton, Missouri; Josiah Patterson, Tennessee; Richard H. Clarke, Alabama; U. M. Rose, Arkansas; Leroy Percy, Mississippi; J. C. Morris, Louisiana; Rufus Hardy, Texas; Daniel Miller, Maryland; W. R. Mayo, Virginia.

There was no response when the states of West Virginia and North Carolina were called.

Just as the committee had been completed, the tall form of Secretary Carlisle emerged from the stage. In an instant delegates and spectators, women and children, were on their feet, and a mighty shout went up. It was succeeded by a yell yet dear to southern hearts, and then again with a volley of cheers, with waving of hats and canes and other accompaniments. The ovation continued for several moments, and was renewed when the secretary of the treasury was formally presented.

Silence having been with difficulty restored, Mr. Carlisle began his speech, the delivery of which occupied precisely one and a half hours. He spoke with unwonted energy and made few references to his notes. He was listened to with profound attention, the audience being apparently anxious to grasp and follow the trend of his argument and the mass of figures with which it was supported, and there were few interruptions of approval until toward the close. Then when with quivering forefinger he declared that the hard-earned savings of the poor ought not to be sacrificed to the avarice of wealthy mine owners or the ambition of aspiring politicians, his hearers fairly went wild, and when, in his peroration, he urged that there could be no prosperity for one section at the expense of the other, but that all must stand or fall together, it looked for a moment as though the enthusiastic audience would storm the platform.

Synopsis of Secretary Carlisle's Speech.

"The proposition to revolutionize our monetary system and destroy the credit of the government and the people at home and abroad, unsettle all exchangable values, and obstruct the trade of our people among themselves and with the peoples of other countries challenges the intelligence, patriotism and commercial honor of every man. No matter what may be the real purposes and motives of those who make the proposition to legalize the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, these are the consequences involved in their scheme. In no other part of the country will the consequences of such a policy prove more injurious to the material interests of the people than in the south.

ACTUAL STOCK OF BULLION.

"Although we have the gold standard in this country, our actual stock of gold bullion and coin amounts to only about one-third of our actual currency. We have about $625,000,000 in gold. $397,052,873 in full legal tender silver, $346,681,000 in old United States notes, $149,584,471 in treasury notes issued on purchase of silver bullion, $299,719,850 in national notes, and $76,169,579 in subsidiary silver coin, making in all $1,894,707,763, exclusive of the minor coins, and every dollar of this vast volume of currency is kept equal in value to the standard established by law, so that every man who receives a silver dollar of paper dollar in exchange for his products, or in satisfaction of a debt, gets just as good a dollar as the man who receives gold. This is the monetary system and this is the financial condition which the advocates of free coinage at the ratio of 16 to 1 now propose to revolutionize at once by a change in the standard of value, so that the whole mass of circulation left for the use of the people would be reduced to about one-half the purchasing power it now has.

CAN WE GO IT ALONE?

"The proposition now pending before the people is: It is proposed that the United States, without the co-operation or assistance of any other government, shall provide by law that all silver bullion or foreign silver coins that may be presented at the mints by individuals or corporations, foreign or domestic, shall be coined, at the public expense, into silver dollars, at the ratio of 16 to 1 with gold—that is, that 16 pounds of silver shall be considered equal in value to one pound of gold, and the weights of the coins shall be adjusted accordingly—and that the coins so made at the public expense shall be delivered to the owners of the bullion, or foreign silver coins, as the case may be; and all the people of the United States be compeled by law to receive them as dollars of full value in the payment of debts due them from their own fellow-citizens and from the citizens or subjects of other countries. My own opinion is that after we had passed a certain limit the more silver dollars we coined the less they would be worth, because the inflation itself would still further diminish their purchasing power.

THE RATIO.

"By the act of 1792, which was our first coinage law, the legal ratio between gold and silver was fixed at 15 to 1, when in fact the true commercial ratio was or soon became about 15½ to 1, and the result of this very small overvaluation of silver in the coinage was that gold went out of circulation and we had practical silver monometallism until after the passage of the act of 18 4. For the purpose of restoring gold to the circulation, congress, in 1834, changed the ratio from 15 to 1 to 16 to 1, and as this was an overvaluation of gold in the coinage, silver left the country, and from that time on until 1878 we had practically gold monometallism, whenever we had any metallic basis at all for our currency.

ONE COIN MUST GO.

"The important fact, conclusively established by the history of financial legislation and its effects upon the circulation of the coins of the metals, is that whenever one of them is overvalued relatively to the other in the coinage laws, with free coinage or coinage upon equal terms, and both are made legal tender, the coins of the undervalued metal will be driven out of circulation and out of use as money in the country where the unequal valuation is made.

"The free coinage of silver would not for a long time add anything whatever, even nominally, to our stock of money; on the contrary, the immediate effect of such a policy would be a contraction to the extent of fully one-third of our present volume of currency by the expulsion of about $625,000,000 in gold, and it would require more than fifteen years to supply its place with silver dollars, even if our mints coined nothing else.

STANDARDS OF VALUE.

"It is argued that the existing standard of value ought to be abandoned, because, since 1873, prices of commodities have fallen, and will continue to fall, if the standard is maintained, so that it has been, and will continue to be, more and more difficult each succeeding year to pay debts; that this fall in the prices of all commodities is attributable to the appreciation of gold, and that the appreciation in the value of gold has been caused by the alleged demonetization of silver. I presume, however, that the most ardent advocate of free coinage would be willing to admit that the invention and use of labor-saving machinery, extension of our railroad systems, improvement of our waterways and the great reduction in the rates of carrying freight (etc., etc.), the greatly-reduced rates of interest paid for the use of capital, and many other things, have affected prices in some measure, and yet they ignore all these great influences in their argument upon the subject, and attribute the lower prices of commodities to a single alleged and inadequate cause—the appreciation of gold.

THE PEOPLE ARE IN DEBT.

"One of the most effective arguments made by the advocates of free coinage, in some parts of the country at least, is that the people are in debt, and that it is the duty of the government to relieve them by such legislation as will enable them to procure cheap money for the purpose of discharging their obligations.

"I deny that there is any such thing as a distinct debtor class in this country, for, while nearly everyone owes some debts, large or small, nearly everyone has also some debts owing to him; in other words, he is both debtor and creditor. The laboring people, as a general rule, owe very little at any one time, while their employers are always indebted to them, because wages are not paid in advance: and besides, many of them have small deposits in savings and other banks, in trust companies, in building associations, and large numoers of them have their lives insured for the benefit of their wives and children, and consequently they are creditors of the banks and the insurance companies.

THE POOR AS CREDITORS.

"About 21,000,000 of our people, generally poor, or at least people of moderate means, have given credit to these great corporations and companies, and, in my opinion, it would be a grievous wrong to adopt any policy which would deprive them of the legal right to demand and receive just as good money as they parted with when they made the deposits in the banks, or paid the premiums on their insurance policies. The hard-earned savings of the poor ought not to be sacrificed to the avarice of the wealthy mine-owner or the ambition of aspiring politicians, and if the people who have a substantial interest in the welfare of the country and a just appreciation of their responsibilities as citizens will exert their proper influence in public affairs, this great wrong can never be perpetrated.

UNCLE SAM MUST QUIT BANKING.

"The United States should go entirely out of the banking business by the withdrawal of its arbitrary and compulsory issues of notes, and afford the people an opportunity to supply their own currency, based upon their own means and credit, thus enabling every community to utilize its own resources when necessary, and adjust the circulation from time to time to the actual demands of legitimate commerce. In what way this shall be accomplished is a question which has already engaged the serious attention of the people and public authorities, and it will continue to be investigated until a plan is formulated which will at least have the merit of being a great improvement upon the existing system.

"In the meantime our highest duty is to preserve the present standard of value, maintain the parity of the two metals and keep all the money in circulation among the people, whether the gold and silver coins, or paper based upon them, equal in purchasing power, so that no discrimination can or will be made between those who receive silver or paper and those who receive gold."

When the speaker concluded he was given a final ovation, and a recess until 8 o'clock was at once taken.

The committee on resolutions went into session at the Gayoso hotel, with Judge Ross, of Little Rock, as chairman, and when the convention reassembled at 8:30 it was presented with the following platform and resolutions which were adopted without debate:

The people of the southern states, who believe the maintenance of a sound and stable currency to be essential to the prosperity of the whole country and the welfare of the people in all the vocations of life, do, through their representatives in convention assembled at Memphis, on May 23, 1895, make the following declaration of their matured convictions:

1. Believing a uniform and certain standard of value necessary to the agricultural, commercial and industrial development and prosperity of our common country, we favor the maintenance of all our money, whether gold, silver or paper, on a parity, to the end that each dollar, whatever may be its composition, shall have equal purchasing and debt-paying power with every other dollar.

2. Profiting by the experience of Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton, and the teachings of the great students of monetary science, from the time that John Locke wrote to the discussion of the present day, we accept the truth of the principle now universally recognized and applied in the commercial world that the bimetallic standard can not be maintained where the ratio fixed by law for the free coinage of gold and silver does not correspond with the market ratio of the two metals, and that wherever and whenever the legal or coinage ratio varies from the market, or commercial, ratio to any appreciable extent, the dollar, whether of gold or silver, which thereby becomes more valuable as bullion than as money, will go to a premium and retire from circulation. We saw this principle applied in our own national experience when, under the act of 1792, which fixed the coinage ratio at 15 to 1, gold retired from circulation because of a slight decline in the price of silver in the open market, whereby the bullion in a gold dollar became worth a few cents more than the bullion in a silver dollar, and was therefore sold as a commodity, because it was worth more as bullion than as money; and, again, under the act of 1834, which fixed the ratio at 16 to 1, when the silver coin retired for a like reason. We are, therefore, opposed to the free, unlimited and independent coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1, when the market or commercial ratio is more than 30 to 1 and the difference between the bullion value of a gold and silver dollar is about fifty cents, on the ground that such action, instead of restoring the bimetallic standard, would inevitably result in silver monometallism.

3. At this time there is no country in the world which maintains the bimetallic standard, and neither is there any country where the free coinage of silver obtains which is not on a silver basis. Each country, on account of its inability to adopt independently any bimetallic standard, must elect for itself which it prefers—the gold or the silver standard. We, therefore, favor, in the absence of international co-operation, the retention and maintenance of the existing gold standard, because a change from the gold to the silver standard would have the effect to repudiate all public and private obligations to the extent of the difference between the bullion value of the gold and silver dollar; because whenever such change should be seriously threatened, it would cause an immediate attempt at a collection and liquidation of all debts in anticipation of the result it would produce. Because such transaction from the gold to the silver basis would destroy public and private confidence and would involve the country in such panic, confusion and distress that the products of agriculture and the wages of labor would be unremunerative; the business of commerce would become unprofitable and our people engaged in industrial occupations would be thrown out of employment; because there is not a progressive, an enlightened country in the world which has not elected gold as the preferable standard; because gold standard countries retain silver in their circulation on a parity with gold, whereas there is no silver standard country which does or can utilize gold as money; because there is not a silver country on the whole globe where the wages of labor are sufficient to sustain the working classes in comfort and independence; and, finally, because the high destiny of the United States demands for the use of the American people that money which experience has taught mankind to be the best suited for the promotion of commerce, the development of manufactures, the development of labor and the advancement of civilization.

4. We would rejoice over the adoption of real bimetallism, but, in view of the continued fluctuations in the price of silver in the open market, we realize that it is impossible for the United States, independently, to adopt a bimetallic standard, and we deem it unwise and hazardous to the best interests of its people, for this country to attempt its establishment. We favor the policy of this country standing in the attitude of readiness at all times to co-operate with the other powers in any effort they may inaugurate looking to the adoption of true bimetallism, but, in the meantime, and until such co-operation is assured, to maintain inviolate its existing standard of value.

5. We favor the retention as part of our money of the silver now coined, and in order to give a wider field for the use of silver, we favor the funding of all money other than silver and silver certificates below the denomination of $10 into higher denominations, so as to make our entire circulation below the denomination of $10 either silver or silver certificates, and, to this end, the secretary of the treasury should be authorized by law to coin, from time to time, as the people may require them, silver dollars, until the demand of commerce for money below the denomination of $10 is at all times satisfied.

6. We realize that our national banking system was adopted during a time of war and that it is not adapted to existing conditions. We therefore favor such legislation as will secure to the people a system of banking surrounded by such safeguards as will at all times furnish them a safe, elastic and sufficient currency for the transaction of their business.

7. We can not too highly commend the unflagging courage and sturdy patriotism of President Cleveland in his efforts to protect the national honor, and to maintain the public credit during a period of great financial distress, and under conditions which threatened danger to both; and we congratulate him and the entire country on the evidences of returning prosperity.

The reading of the resolutions was frequently interrupted by applause.

Resolutions indorsing the work of the reform committee on sound currency of New York, urging the organization in the southern states of sound-money clubs to carry on the campaign begun at this convention, were adopted.

In response to numerous calls, Congressman Patterson made a speech on the work of the convention. At the conclusion of his remarks a resolution was adopted authorizing the appointment of a committee of one delegate from each state represented to superintend the distribution of proper literature coming under their control, the chairman of the committee to be a resident of Memphis.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

North Carolina's Confederate Dead.

The confederate monument erected by the ladies of North Carolina was unveiled at Raleigh a few days ago.

It was the anniversary of the Mecklenburg independence. There were 50,000 people present. Little Julia Jackson Christian, aged 7 years, and granddaughter of Gen. Stonewall Jackson, pulled the cord that released the bunting covering the monument, and the granite shaft stood revealed.

The monument is of Mount Airy granite. Its height is 72 feet 6 inches, and it will be lighted by four bronze electric lamps, in clusters of three each. Partly up the shaft stand two bronze statues, one of a cannoneer with a rammer in his hands. On the side opposite him is a cavalryman, dismounted, with a saber half drawn, and in a very spirited attitude. On the base are circular bronze medallions, with the seals respectively of the Confederate States and of North Carolina. There are two inscriptions. One of these is:

"North Carolina to Her Confederate Dead."

And the other is:

"First at Bethel, Last at Appomattox, 1861-1865."

The main portion of the shaft is one block of stone, 27 feet high, and weighing 55,000 pounds. The monument is surmounted by the bronze figure of an infantryman in light marching order, standing in an easy attitude, with musket tightly clasped with both hands. This statue is 10 feet high and weighs 2,500 pounds, while the two already mentioned are life-sized. All are from life, the models being veterans living in Raleigh, and the statues are pronounced very good. The bronze work was done in the Royal Foundry at Munich, Bavaria. The monument stands in the western entrance to the Capitol square, or "Union square." Its design is remarkably fine, and it is set in relief against the massive building in the rear. It faces a noble vista of avenues. The cost was $25,000, of which the legislature appropriated $20,000, and the Ladies' Monumental association, of which Mrs. Armstead Jones, of Raleigh, is president, collected $5,000 by popular subscription from all over the state.

[The people of Mecklenburg county took an early and spirited part in the resistance to Great Britain, and in May, 1775, they publicly renounced allegiance to the crown, and adopted a declaration of independence.]

OFFICERS ELECTED.

Gen. John B. Gordon, of Georgia, commander-in-chief.

Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, lieutenant-general, department of the Tennessee.

W. L. Cabell, of Dallas, Tex., lieutenant-general, trans-Mississippi department.

Very Encouraging.

A comprehensive inquiry has lately been made among southern wholesale dry goods dealers with regard to the business situation, and the replies are very encouraging. About 80 per cent. of them say that appearances are indicative of a more or less rapid return to prosperity; 60 per cent. of them express the belief that considerably higher prices will come before long; and 20 per cent. give the opinion that there will be only a slight increase of average rates. These are the views of men who make a constant study of business conditions and whose judgment is apt to be substantially correct.

United Confederate Veterans.

The United Confederate Veterans at the Houston (Tex.) reunion selected Richmond, Va., as the next place of meeting.

Gen. Stephen D. Lee reported a new constitution. The instrument is much shorter than the old one. Among the amendments are sections setting forth the objects of the organization, monuments, parks, historical features, etc.

The committee on the Jeff Davis monument, to be erected at Richmond, reported that the corner-stone would be laid next spring, and the treasurer reported $12,551 on hand May 1. One thousand dollars has been added since, and camps were urged to send in subscriptions. Eloquent speeches were made by Gen. Cabell and others for the monument.

Cremated in Jail.

Robert Dunbar, a negro, was burned to death in the jail at Rodney, Miss. The jail was also destroyed. He had assaulted a negro girl near the little town. The jury of inquest returned a verdict of death at the hands of unknown parties. The fire, when discovered, was in the interior of the jail, so it may have been accidental.

Throat Cut by Belting.

James Wade, of Knoxville, manager of the Southern lumber mills at Offutts, Tenn., was killed the other day. He was attempting to replace some belting while the machinery was in operation. The belting caught his head and cut his throat. He was 30 years old. He leaves a widow and 3-weeks-old baby.

Killed Over a Woman.

Perry Calhoun was killed by William Black in Geneva county, Ala., a few days ago. Black, it is stated, had several times warned Calhoun to desist in his attentions to Mrs. Black, which he failed to do. Finally the men met in the public road, and Black deliberately shot him through the heart.

Mistook Chloroform for Whisky.

Three young men in Lee county, Va., J. Burton, Ed Galligher and Sam Jones, went behind a counter in a store where liquor was usually kept secreted for their benefit and others. They made a mistake and drank from a bottle containing chloroform. As a result only one, Galligher, lives to tell the tale.

A Love-Sick Youth.

At Atlanta, Ga., a few days ago, John D. Simmer, aged 19, a drug clerk, shot himself because of disappointment in love. It was believed his wound was fatal. When conscious he called for "Nellie," who is supposed to have been his sweetheart. He recently joined the church.

The Buffalo Gnat.

The buffalo gnat, or Texas fly, is doing great damage to stock in the southeast portion of Jackson county, Miss. They are more severe on dark-colored than light-colored stock.

German Immigration Society.

A German Immigration society has been organized at Birmingham, Ala., to induce Germans to remove to Alabama, especially to Jefferson county.

On the Co-Operative Plan.

President Greeil of the Montgomery (Ala.) Commercial and Industrial association wants to build a cotton mill there on the co-operative plan.

An Opinion.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat expresses the opinion that the south needs a supply of new interpreters who don't care a continental for cotton.

A Monster Devil Fish.

A devil fish 16 feet long and weighing 2,000 pounds was caught near Horn island, not far from Moss Point, Miss., a few days ago.

The Boll Weevil.

Farmers in southwest Texas, especially near Beeville, have abandoned the cotton crops altogether on account of the boll weevil.

Cut His Throat and Died.

Nicholas Bolling, a resident of Montgomery, Ala., but traveling for an Atlanta (Ga.) shoe house, cut his throat and died.

THE largest warship in the world, the Terrible, just launched on the Clyde, is 583 feet long and 75 feet across the beam, will draw 27 feet, and must make 22 knots an hour on her speed trial. The performance of this giant among cruisers will be noted with interest by navy men.

THE Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal printed an article recently alleging that Liggett & Myers, the big plug tobacco manufacturers of St. Louis, had bought up all the burley leaf round the country. They had bought about 12,000 hogsheads in the burley district, about 9,000 or 10,000 hogsheads in Louisville and also made heavy purchases in Cincinnati. When it is recalled that cash is paid for tobacco, the immensity of the corner may be better realized. It was said to be pretty certain that the parties had accumulated not less than 30,000,000 pounds.

CHARLES R. CULVER, of Springfield, Mass., has patented an electric carriage for pacing wheelmen, which is expected to bring the record for a mile down to a minute. It has three wheels, is 11 feet long over all, pointed at the front end, and from 4 to 5 feet high. The carriage is mounted on ordinary bicycle wheels, with pneumatic tires. The motive power is derived from a storage battery, applied to the rear axle. The operator controls the motor which steers the machine by means of a lever. Three-horse power is required to run the machine, which weighs 700 pounds.

Of this amount $25,000 is claimed for injury to reputation and mental and physical suffering while in prison; the rest is his computation of the amount he lost in business by this false imprisonment, with his attorney's fees added.

He is desirous of spending some of his vast fortune in a manner that will aid homeless and unfortunate people, and knows of no better plan than to give them a home and feed them. His plan will be carried out at once.

Wm. C. Whitney Returns and Will Put Tammany in Line.

HIS VIEWS OF THE POLITICAL FUTURE

NEW YORK, June 1.—Hon. William C. Whitney, who has just arrived home from Europe, says that he has not returned with the design of re-organizing Tammany but the fact remains that the ex-Secretary of the navy is popular with the Wigwam forces, and that his advice will be eagerly sought when the time comes to gather the scattered warriors.

Wm. C. Whitney.

Concerning the visit Mr. Croker paid him in London, Mr. Whitney declares that local politics had nothing to do with it. Mr. Croker is more interested in his horses than in the affairs of Tammany Hall, and he will not come back to straighten out the kinks in the organization. If there is to be a reorganization of Tammany, Mr. Whitney says that he will serve as one of a committee of democrats appointed to bring about harmony in the party.

The money question is to be the great issue of the next presidential campaign, says Mr. Whitney. He believes that the manufacturing interests of the country will demand that the tariff be left undisturbed. He can see no reason why the tariff should be a factor in the campaign. In speaking of the financial question Mr. Whitney remarked that an international bi-metallic convention was a certainty of the near future.

Foot Ball With the Great Teams.

Captain Thorne of the Yale foot ball team, who is in the city, says that he wishes it to be distinctly understood that Yale will not play the University of Pennsylvania next fall. Yale's schedule for next fall is practically complete and is about the same as that of last year, with the exception of the Harvard game. Princeton is the only big game that will be played. The Princeton game will not be played in New York city if arrangements can be made to avoid it. Negotiations have been entered into with the officials of Columbia Oval at Williamsbridge.

The date of the game has been fixed for November 23 or the Saturday previous to Thanksgiving day. No agreement has been signed between Princeton and Yale, but the feeling between the two is so friendly that no difficulty will be experienced.

Captain Thorne also announced that a change will be made in Yale's training. Last year Captain Hinkey took his candidates to Travers Island September 3. Captain Thorne proposes to defer active work until September 15. Then, providing the N. Y. A. C. offers Yale the privileges of Travers Island, Captain Thorne will take the candidates, and they will remain until college opens, when the training of the entire team will begin. "Billy" Bull, the great ex-full back, will be invited to coach the men at Travers Island, and when the work is commenced at the Yale field Hinkey will take charge.

He won one race in imposing fashion, but was subsequently defeated by Keenan, and yesterday by Stowaway and Ajax. Rey el Santa Anita is a dark bay colt by Imported Cheviot-Alaho. He was not a consistent performer. His best race was for the Great American Derby, which he won in very easy fashion. He was a candidate for the Suburban.

SUICIDE IN SOCIETY

DUNKIRK, N. Y., June 1.—Miss Elsie Coleman, daughter of the late William Coleman, a wealthy banker of this city, committed suicide last night by shooting herself. Miss Coleman was a prominent society woman and spent the early part of the evening calling upon friends. She was to all appearances in a cheerful mood and her friends detected nothing about her actions that would indicate anything wrong. Returning to her home about 11 o'clock she went directly to her room. A few minutes later members of the family heard a pistol shot, and hurrying to the girl's room, found that she had blown her brains out with a 32-calibre revolver. Miss Coleman was about twenty years of age and surrounded with all the luxuries that wealth could provide. Her friends are at a loss to determine why she should have taken her own life, but the circumstances indicate premeditation.

SOME GAINS AT THE SOUTH.

The Condition of Trade as Reviewed by Bradstreets.

NEW YORK, June 1.—Bradstreets says:

The observance of memorial day services served to check the volume of general trade this week, but there has been a further shrinkage in the amount of business transacted, due to not altogether well founded fears of serious damage to the grain crops. The bank clearings total for the week is only $833,000,000, but this is 17 per cent heavier than in the corresponding week (also one day short) in 1894. As contrasted with last week, the shrinkage is 25 per cent, and with the week two years ago (during the panic) 7 per cent. Compared with the last week in May, 1892, the falling off this week is 13 per cent.

The tendency of prices this week is again upward, notably so for steel and iron, which are in better demand, despite higher prices, as are cereals and cotton, and leather and shoes, which, with some other staples, in all sixteen, close higher on the week.

There are some gains at the south, with improved agricultural prospects in Tennessee affecting business at Nashville, Memphis and Chattanooga. Only a moderately active demand in a few lines is announced from Atlanta, Savannah and at Jacksonville, where the vegetable crop is the largest for years. There is an improved demand at New Orleans, and buyers are showing more of a tendency to anticipate wants.

TROUBLES NOW ADJUSTED.

The Seaboard Restores Association Rates and the Boycott is Raised.

MACON, Ga., June 1.—The troubles between the Seaboard Airline railroad and the Southern Railway and Steamship association have been adjusted. The Seaboard had petitioned the federal court for an injunction against the association, whose lines had practically boycotted the Seaboard. An exparte injunction was granted and yesterday set for hearing the case before Judge Speer. A big fight was imminent. Some of the most prominent railroad lawyers in the country were present, but an agreement was reached, the terms of which are yet a secret. It is admitted, however, that the basis of the agreement is a contract between the parties to the effect that the Seaboard will maintain the state commission rates while the association will raise the boycott. The temporary restraining order has been vacated without prejudice to the rights of the complainants to again bring the matter into court should the necessity arise.

THIRTY-THREE WERE DROWNED

Terrible Disaster to a Number of Canadian Lumbermen.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 1.—Details have reached this city of a terrible accident which occurred on the Spanish river, by which thirty-three men lost their lives. The victims were lumbermen. All had gone to sleep without leaving a watchman to guard the crib. Somehow during the night the crib broke from its mooring and carried the cargo of the sleeping men, all unmindful of their fate, into the surging waters below. The crib was broke to pieces on the rocks, and not a man escaped.

South Carolina Dispensary Constables Openly Arrested.

VIOLATION OF INJUNCTION ORDERS.

The Officers Get Bold, and Seize the Jugs, Despite the Proper Label "For Personal Use Only"—Coming to a Speedy Crisis.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 1.—Governor Evans has given the state liquor constables strict instructions to wage a relentless war against the blind tigers and has advised them to seize all liquor packages shipped into the state which in their judgment is not for the "personal use" of the consignees. In consequence of these instructions and in view of the fact that no one whose liquor has been seized seems disposed to have the constable punished for the violation of Judge Simonton's order of injunction, the constables have become very bold and this week no end of jugs and small kegs coming from North Carolina have been seized. Most of these jugs come addressed to the consignee in proper form and bear the adtional inscription "for personal use only," yet they have been seized. Yesterday several citizens of Columbia concluded to submit to this no longer and one swore out a warrant for the arrest of the constables before United States Commissioner Banskett, for the violation of the injunction orders. Today a United States deputy marshal will serve the warrants. Other proceedings of a like character will probably follow.

NOW IN THE LAND OF THE SKY.

Correspondents, After a Day in Knoxville, Leave for Asheville.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 1. — The Washington correspondents reached Knoxville, yesterday morning, having been met on the way by a special committee of Knoxville citizens. After breakfast at the Hotel Imperial, an address of welcome was delivered by Edward T. Sanford, to which brief responses were made by Messrs. Dunnell, Annin, McFarland and Gradiner.

A short drive was taken to some leading manufacturing establishments when a special train was placed at their disposal and the immense shops of the Southern railway were visited, winding up with a visit to one of the large marble mills which are a feature of Knoxville. Lucheon was then served at the elegant home of Col. E. J. Sanford, president of the Knoxville and and Ohio railroad. After spending more than an hour here, the tourists were driven back to the depot and at 1:30 left for Asheville, N. C., accompanied by Col. F. K. Huger, division superintendent of the Southern railway. The day was intensely hot; but the tourists expressed themselves as greatly pleased with their visit to Knoxville, and they indulged in hearty cheers for the city just before their special train moved away.

NEGROES LYNCH A NEGRO.

And for a Negroe's Attempted Assault Upon a Negro.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 1.—In Columbia county Wednesday night James Freeman, a negro, attempted to ravish the wife of Frank Corsele, also colored. Freeman was arrested yesterday and last night three officers started with him to Lake City to place him in jail. About half way the prisoner was taken from the guards by a mob, tied to a post and shot to death. The mob was composed partly of negroes. Near the same place a negro was lynched three weeks ago for a similar crime.

WEALTH IS NOT HAPPINESS.

A Rich Young Farmer, of Calhoun County, Ala., Would Throw Off the Coil.

ANNISTON, Ala., June 1. —Bud Gunter, a wealthy young farmer of Calhoun county, attempted suicide yesterday, and there is but little hopes for his recovery. He left home for the field where his men were at work, but went in another direction and when found was sitting by a tree with his throat cut and several wounds in his chest. He gave as a reason for the act, that he was tired of living.

HAMPTON CONTINUES WEST.

The Other Members of the Confederate Party Leave for the South.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The party of distinguished southern ex-confederate officers and the ladies who came to take part in the monument dedication, started on the return journey by special train with the exception of General Hampton, who goes to California in the line of duty as United States railway commissioner. At Cincinnati the chamber of commerce will give the party a reception.

Secretary Herbert's Proposed Movements.

WASHINGTON, June 1. — Secretary Herbert will go to Annapolis, Md., on Tuesday to attend the commencement exercises at the naval academy, remaining there through the week. The following Sunday he will leave for Alabama, and on Wednesday June 12th, he will deliver the address to the graduating class and students of the Agricultural and Mechanical college at Auburn.

Cleveland's Return to Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 1. — President Cleveland and a part of his companions at Gresham's funeral reached Washington at 5 o'clock yesterday evening. Secretaries Carlisle and Morton did not return with the party.

The Weather Continues Fair.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Forecast: For Georgia, fair, variable winds. For Alabama, fair, southeasterly winds. For Tennessee, fair, southerly winds.

Hostilities Again Declared.

LONDON, June 1.—A dispatch to the Times from Hong Kong says the Japanese landed at Lelong, Formosa, May 30th, and fighting began May 31st.

THE VICTIM OF LEGISLATION.

Mr. William H. Pugh's Experience With Sundry and Divers Offices.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—Wm. H. Pugh, superintendent of the income tax, will be legislated out of office on the first of the fiscal year, and his friends are wondering in what way he will be provided for by secretary Carlisle. Mr. Pugh has been a victim of legislation. After the incoming of the present administration Mr. Pugh was a candidate for appointment as assistant attorney general. The appointment of Solicitor General Maxwell, who was from the same state as Mr. Pugh, made this selection inadvisable, and he was offered the office of commissioner of customs. Before he had been in office two months it had become apparent that his place was of short life, and after it had been abolished by an act of congress Secretary Carlisle provided for him temporarily by detailing him as chief of the coast and geodetic survey until the appointment of a permanent head of that branch by the government. The office of superintendent of the income tax being created, it was at once given to Mr. Pugh. On the 1st of July this place will be abolished, and, so far as can be seen, there is no prospect of another place being found for Mr. Pugh in the treasury department.

NECK BROKEN ON THE TRACK.

A Young Jockey Killed Riding the Races at St. Asaph, Virginia Track.

WASHINGTON, June 1.—"Dick" Corbly, 24 years old, jockey for Frank Wier, the turfman, had his neck broken during the last race at the St. Asaph Va., race track yesterday afternoon. Corbley was riding Kirkover, who, at the time, was running sixth in a five furlong dash. As the horses made the turn at the home stretch, Kirkover fell, and two other horses, Charley R. and May Irwin, fell over him, and consequently upon the unfortunate rider, Corbley, whose neck was broken and he died instantly. George McLaughlin, who rode Charley R. had his collar bone fractured. Punch, one of the horses running close behind Kirkover, became jostled by the accident, and a little further down the stretch he too fell, and broke his leg. He was afterwards killed.

THE NEW CABINET SLATE.

Rumors of Various Transfers Bring Acting Secretary Uhl a Notch Higher.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1.—Speculation in the executive departments as to Mr. Gresham's successor has developed a cabinet slate which tranfers Attorney General Olney to the state department; Postmaster General Wilson to the department of justice, vice Olney, and Acting Secretary Uhl, of the state department to the postoffice department, vice Wilson. These, of course, are simply speculations, but the sources from which they originate suggest that they may be put out as "feelers" to elicit public sentiment.

CHURCH MAN GONE WRONG.

The Southern's Agent in a North Carolina Town a Defaulter,

GOLDSBORO, N. C., June 1.—C. M. Levister, who has been agent of the Southern railroad company in this city for the past four years, has come to grief. He is a defauter for $2,000. His shortage, which dates back several months, he managed to cover by aid of presenting ficticious checks when the auditor would come around to check up. Levister has been quite a society man here. He was a leader in the St. Paul's M. E. church choir and the Y. M. C. A. He came to Goldsboro from Winston.

CAROLINA COTTON MILL FAILS.

To Be Sold Under a Deed of Trust July 31st—Surprise and Regret.

MONROE, N. C., June 1.—There was a great deal of surprise and talk today when it became known that the Monroe cotton mills will be sold at public auction on July 1st next, to satify indebtedness to the amount of $54,000. As there was a number of small stockholders it is very much to be regretted that this step was fonnd necessary, for it will be a death blow to inducing people of small means to invest in any kind of similer enterprise in the near future.

MAY MOVE FROM ATLANTA.

The Officers of the Seaboard Air Line May Go to Portsmouth.

ATLANTA, June 1.—It is announced, though not officially, that the general offices of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad company are to be removed from Atlanta to Portsmouth in the very near future. That will take General Manager Winder, General Supt. McBee and others now located here to Portsmouth, leaving only a division office here. Seaboard officials do not deny the rumor.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 1.—T. F. Manning, of Detroit, Mich., dropped dead on the street here yesterday evening from heart failure, caused by heat. He was on his way home from Asheville, N. C., where he had been in search of health. Mr. Manning was a well known and wealthy citizen of Detroit and an alderman.

THE CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, JUNE 6, 1895.

HARD TIMES.

For several years our people have heard a great deal about hard times and much of the talking upon this subject has proceeded from their own lips. A period of stringency in financial matters has its dark and forbidding side, and causes a great deal of suffering to many people, yet it is not without its corresponding benefit. Much of the damage caused by it is due to wrong methods of living and therefore when this period sets in careless people are not in a condition to meet and successfully cope with it has its injurious effect also upon others for society is so bound together that and their misfortune in this respect the misfortune of one man may injure one hundred others. Speculation, extravagance in living, spending every cent of one's income as fast as it comes in, or going beyond the income, utterly unfit a man for passing successfully through a financial depression.

Yet these periods are not an evil unmixed with some good, for they often lead to reflection, and this leads to reform in methods of living. Often a person does not know how little he really needs until necessity forces him to give up what he thought was indispensible but which he now sees to be simply a luxury or a convenience and not a necessity. Unsafe and unhealthy business methods, which in the end must have proved injurious if not disastrous, are given up for surer and safer methods—methods that will be a benefit instead of an injury to society in general, for every man who is conducting an honorable business in an honorable manner is a benefit to his own community and thereby to the world.

Hard times also frequently cause a man practically to realize that there is a power above whom we acknowledge as Creator and worship as sovereign who giveth us the power to get wealth. It is violation of his laws ordinarily that is the cause of hard times, and if they lead society to see his hand in chastisement, and thereby it is lead to repentance the curse becomes a blessing.

If people will cease so much talking upon this subject, go to work energetically to make at home as far as it can be done everything that is needed at home, using their best judgment in all their work, and in every transaction "mixing their brains with their business," as some one has expressed it, and especially and chiefly giving their Creator the homage that is due him, prosperity will be rained down upon us in such a measure that it will tax our capacity properly to profit by it.

The month of June is the period of the year selected by most of the colleges of our country for their commencement exercises. On the last day of the school year the young people who receive their diplomas are supposed to commence for themselves the struggle for existence. Shall this existence be an honor to their country and a blessing to their race? The future conduct of these graduates will answer this question.

Judge Gildersleeve, of the New York Superior court, is not to be trifled with, even by corporations. He gave judgment against the Manhattan Elevated Railroad Company for $45,000. The company neglected to pay the judgment, but got the Supreme Court to fix the value of the property in dispute at $30,250. Thereupon Judge Gildersleeve fined the company the difference, $14,750, for contempt. His honor has a sense of humor as well as a sense of justice.

Hon. J. Asa Rountree, editor of the Hartselle Enquirer and the efficient Secretary of the Alabama Press Association, will wed on the 6th of June Miss Jennie Maude McIver, of Opelika. The Chronicle extends congratulations with the wish for a long life of wedded bliss.

A. F. SMITH,
Tax Collector.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kan., was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

THE crop report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, for Alabama, shows a decrease of cotton acreage of 14 per cent compared with last year; an increase of corn acreage of 13 per cent; an increase of wheat acreage of one-third of 1 per cent: a decrease of oats acreage of 6 per cent; an increase of Irish potato acreage of 5 per cent, and an increase of tobacco acreage of 4 per cent. Cotton is backward and in poor condition, owing to the cold weather in May; corn is in excellent condition; other crops and fruits generally in good shape.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rhuematism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Each bottle is guaranteed to do all that is claimed or money will be refunded. Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong's Drug store. Large size 50 cents and $1.00.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolut

AYER'S

THE ONLY

Sarsaparilla

ADMITTED

READ RULE XV.

"Articles that are in any way dangerous or offensive, also patent medicines, nostrums, and empirical preparations, whose ingredients are concealed, will not be admitted to the Exposition."

Why was Ayer's Sarsaparilla admitted? Because it is not a patent medicine, not a nostrum, nor a secret preparation, not dangerous, not an experiment, and because it is all that a family medicine should be.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

Miss Elvina Verchott has been quite sick for several days.

E. S. Martin, of Coalville, transacted business here Monday.

Miss Nellie Parker was a guest of Montevallo friends the last of last week.

T. J. Martin and E. V. Caldwell, of Harpersville, were in town a few hours Monday.

W. J. Seale and wife, of Childersburg, spent Saturday and Sunday here with relatives.

Miss Alma Duran, of Calera, is spending some time with her cousin, Miss Allie Nelson.

Mrs. W. B. Browne and little Margaret, are visiting relatives in Montgomery this week.

We regret to know that Mrs. W. G. Parker is very ill, but we hope soon to report her recovery.

After waiting patiently for six or eight weeks, we have at last been blest with a good rain.

Frank Norris came down Saturday from Anniston, in order to enjoy the novelty of riding on a pass.

Miss Naldo Christian, of Shelby, was a guest of her friend, Miss Anna Milner, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Tennie Elliott, who has been visiting relatives here, returned to her home in Vincent yesterday.

Mrs. Jeff Elliott has returned home from a pleasant trip to Texas. She was delighted with her visit and the country generally.

Messrs. T. Dunn, Roy Christian and Clarence Abbett, of Shelby, attended children's service at the Presbyterian church Sunday night.

Col. G. W. Hewitt, of Birmingham, Ala., who, some years ago, represented his district in the lower house of congress, died on the 26th of May.

Evander Morrison, who has been in Texas for several weeks, has returned home again. He is delighted with the country and gives a glowing account of it.

There will be a union Sunday school picnic on the mountain next Wednesday. Let everybody go and be sure to take the children, not forgetting the basket of dinner.

Mrs. H. H. Parker will leave today for Texas, where she will join her husband who has been there for several weeks. We regret to lose Mr. and Mrs. Parker as citizens of our town.

We have received the first copy of the Alabama Leader, the populist paper just started at Anniston, Ala. Its editor is A. P. Longshore and its publisher is Frank Norris. Both are from Columbiana.

The children's exercises Sunday night at the Presbyterian church were very creditable, and attracted a large crowd. Something over six dollars was collected for the missionary cause.

Rev. T. K. Tierce, D. D. L. L. D., arrived by the Southern Pacific route at Rev. Henry Millstead's this morning at 6:45. He addressed a small but select audience gathered to welcome him, but being fatigued from his journey, soon fell asleep. He is a stunner—weight about 15 lbs net.

Last week in giving the names of the young ladies who contributed to the paper, we unintentionally omitted Miss Emma Wilson. We regret very much that so serious an oversight could have occurred, for Miss Emma rendered valuable service, and we feel that we owe her and the other young ladies a debt of gratitude for the very excellent edition they published. It was a hummer from start to finish.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker and Armstrong.

Tuesday evening about 8 o'clock the stable of W. A. Tallant caught fire in some mysterious way, and in a very few minutes was entirely consumed, together with its contents. A mule belonging to Mr. Williams, his renter, was burned to death, and a second was so badly burned that it may yet die. Mr. W. L. Davis had a mule in the stable, and its back was burned into a crisp before it could be driven out. Mr. Tallant was injured by the fire in his effort to save the stock. About 100 bushels of corn, and considerable fodder and hay was destroyed. The accident, as we presume it was, will prove a serious loss just at this season when crops demand work.

Quite a number of our people attended the Methodist children's day exercises at Shelby the fourth Sunday night. All were delighted with the way in which the program was rendered. The boys and girls did their parts well, showing they had the work of their church at heart. It is needless to say the young gentlemen were in sympathy with the work and added much to the success by singing, reciting, etc. Of course the young ladies deserve special mention and much credit is due them for the practice given and decorations, which were beautiful. Messrs. Frank Spears and Louis Christian were ushers and we are under many obligations to them for courtesies shown our party. Mr. A. H. Avery has a right to feel proud of his Sunday school, and Mrs. Finch should congratulate herself on the success of the music, for it was grand. As a whole children's day celebration at Shelby will long be remembered by all those who were fortunate enough to attend.

ELLIOTTSVILLE DOTS.

The Sunday school picnic at Elliottsville the 25th of May was a grand success.

Rev. J. H. Zwingle and wife returned to their home in East Birmingham last Monday, accompanied by Misses Leila and Nannie Fulton.

Rev. Mr. Butler preached an interesting sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday.

We extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved relatives and friends.

BONAMI.

A FREE TRIP TO ATLANTA.

The Cotton States Exposition should be visited by every resident of Alabama. Knowing, however, that there are many people, especially in the rural districts, who can ill afford the heavy outlay necessary in order to attend this exhibition, The Advertiser has devised a plan, whereby all who are willing to devote a little spare time to calling their neighbor's attention to the excellence of the Semi-Weekly Advertiser as a newspaper, can visit this display of Southern industries and resources.

Every person in the State of Alabama who will send us 100 yearly subscribers to the Semi-Weekly Advertiser at $1 each, before October 1st, 1895, will be presented with a ticket from his or her railway station to Atlanta and return, and in addition will be given $25 in cash for the purpose of defraying his or her expenses while there.

It will not be necessary to send the entire 100 subscribers at once, but names can be forwarded from time to time as they are secured, the sender stating that they are for our Cotton States Exposition Excursion prize. An acurate account will be kept with each competitor, and the announcement of the successful ones will be made as soon after October 1st as is practicable.

There is no good reason why several hundred people should not thus be able to visit the Atlanta Exposition at our expense, as The Semi-Weekly Advertiser is unquestionably the best newspaper of its class in America, and the low subscription price places it within the reach of people of very limited means. It is an Alabama paper for Alabama people and that field defies competition.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 8.

Geologically, the whole county of Shelby is underlaid by the mountain limestone formation, exposed on a pretty large scale in North Alabama, and more or less farther south. The lime rock makes a lime equal as cement, and, for plastering purposes, to the famous Thomaston lime, formerly imported from Maine. The surface of the underlying limestone formation is always and everywhere decidedly undulating, consisting in depressions, sometimes quite deep, divided by corresponding elevations into rounded hills and sometimes mountains. Overlying this formation are masses, varying in thickness from a few feet to much greater thickness, of clay, gravel, mixed detritus, and slate beds in the section I am about to describe. This section, some fifteen miles north and south, by twelve east and west, constituting the lower or southern end of Coosa valley, may be described as the slate section, drained by Waxahatchee and Beeswax creeks and their tributaries. On it are the towns of Calera, south, Columbiana and Shelby, north. The soil is composed of friable slate, mixed with vegetable matter and clay, tinged into a chocolate color by iron, with occasional portions, where the limestone formation is exposed, of deep red. The limestone slips or plateaus are the best land, chiefly because they are level, while the prevailing slate lands are very rolling, the slopes of the hills sometimes quite steep, and very liable to wash. Hillside ditching and terracing might delay serious washing, or, better still, instead of burning the timber cut off in clearing, it might be laid horizontally along the hillsides at distances say of fifty yards apart, so as to prevent washing and, decaying, to enrich strips of some width where they lay. The soil is nearly all tillable, generally fertile, often producing when fresh twenty-five bushels of corn or a thousand pounds of seed cotton per acre. The country is thickly settled by small farmers, the stationary and industrious ones thrifty. One-third to one-half is, or has been, in cultivation—one-half forest. The two creeks mentioned above are perennial; Waxahatchee, however, not sufficiently so to furnish waterpower for mills or gins; the lower reaches of Beeswax furnish good millseats that have been utilized at several points, notably at a point near the ford of the creek where it is crossed by the valley dirt road, from St. Clair county to Wetumpka and Montgomery.

Judge J. T. Leeper, in his lifetime, had a fine grist and flouring mill at that point, now owned by Mr. Browning, though the gradually diminishing amount of wheat grown in the vicinity, renders the flouring business less considerable. The low prices of cotton are inclining the people to produce as much of everything as they can at home, and it is to be hoped they will soon produce again all the wheat needed for bread and more, as in the early history of the country. Drinking water, of the purest character, is abundadtly supplied by springs, limestone in the lower places, soft or freestone, in the more elevated, or by wells easily obtainable in every part, not even needing to be curbed where slate prevails.

I am persuaded that most valuable quarries of roofing slate would be revealed, on a large scale, by thorough scientific exploration. I have examined places where in the ravines slate is exposed that looks to an unscientific eye of the character suited for roofing, near and on the lands of Mr. Shelby Nelson; and I am told there are many such exposures, all over the section. The same slate formation, however, reaching across the Coosa eastward, has been examined and found too soft and brittle. I do not think this will be found to be on the west side. The specimens I have examined are quite hard, and divided by seams or lines into plates of the right laminar thickness of every width from a few to many inches. Transportation would be easy, as the section I am describing is traversed by two important railroads running right through the deposits. I may here say that iron is very extensively and profitably mined and smelted in the eastern part of the section, near the Coosa river, found in broad pockets running into each other, over an area several miles in diameter. Indeed, the Shelby Iron Works, where rolling mills, as well as making pig iron, were some years ago operated, are widely known. The ore is the best best brown hematite, suitable for car wheels, and for every purpose where strength and tenacity are wanted. Limestone is right at hand, and both in practically unlimited quantities. A few miles north is a vein of considerable length of red ore. All around Calera, at the crossing of the L and N and Southern railroads, in vast extent, is a great exposure of lime rock, whence the name, Spanish Calera, Latin, Calx, English lime. The timber, over the whole section, was once thick, tall, and varied in character; many species of oak, short leaf, in some cases long leaf, pine, in abundance, and yet remaining in considerable quantities. Fencing, therefore, is yet easy, and lumber cheap.

I will enumerate some of the products of the soil, italicising those to which it is best adapted, capitalizing a few that come to the greatest perfection: CORN, COTTON, WHEAT, rye, barley, oats, ground peas, SORGHUM and RIBBON CANE, in the lower places: tobacco, potatoes, sweet and Irish, apples, SUMMER and WINTER peaches, especially on the higher places, PEARS, GRAPES, STRAWBERRIES. Cotton matures especially well; wheat better than on any other soil in the county; pears until more or less affected by blight of late years—a temporary difficulty no doubt—come to the greatest perfection, as witness those sold from Mr. Adams' orchard, south of Calera. Grapes of the finest character, have been produced wherever tried, by Dr. J. Reed Morgan, Col. Gardner, Frank Hazard, colored, west, north and east of Calera. Hazard sold, a year or two ago, from a single acre, second crop of young vines $125.00 worth.

The people of this favored section need only to settle down on permanent homes, build their houses or cabins on inviting sites, arrange out houses with reference to making sites attractive; let the women have every encouragement to raise flowers, and embower their houses with vines; build and maintain churches and schools. Such people have the most happy and contented lives, and form the substratum of the state and the country, and serve their day and generation quite as effectually as any other class. Indeed we need nothing else so much as intelligent farmers. It is a great mistake to suppose that any other calling demands more intelligence. Science, united with experience and observation, will yet work wonders in this direction. The farmer needs to know chemistry and botany as much as the professional man, the science indispensable to ability in his calling. Nor need he be discouraged if he have not enjoyed the privileges of the school, though that were a great advantage. What is necessary to understand the philosophy of fertilizing and plant-culture he can easily learn in scraps of time. But if he can go to college, let it be so; college training is not thrown away on him who proposes to be a great farmer, a character so rarely, alas, to be found, in the present condition of our country.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

DALLAS, TEX., May 12, 1895.

EDITOR CHRONICLE:—I have been delighted in reading the letters of the Rev. Dr. Teague of the early settling of Shelby county, and, in his last, he says he will discontinue them for a time, which I hope will not be long. So in order to keep up the interest and try to stir others up to writing and giving their knowledge of the early settler, and events left out by the Dr., I will write a short letter, especially as this is my sixtieth birthday, and my mind naturally runs back to the old times, but on this, when I read the Drs. letter and think it over, I feel that I am but a boy of a larger generation.

I regret that I cannot personally call to mind the earliest settling of that, to me, loved time, but I have to depend on tradition and recollection of a later period, which seems as vivid as if it were but yesterday, when I used to go with my father to the musters, and take a dime and buy a ginger cake and a glass of cider from Mrs. Joe Roper, and when father was the Major General, Philpot, of Montgomery, was the big General, and on Sundays would go to Chapel to hear Bro. Foust, or West, or some other circuit preacher; or to Four Mile, to hear Bro. Scott or Holcomb.

The first white persons I have any account of visiting, was on the spot of ground where Columbiana now is, was my grand father, Amos Elliott, and my great grand father, Linzie and Stump Elliott. When they came to the branch below the spring, they turned up to find good water, &c., and when they came in sight of the glade, where the square is, there was a bunch of wild horses standing in the shade of some trees, and Uncle Billy Elliott tried to shoot and crease one but failed to get him. These same parties afterwards moved from where they then lived, which was in Madison county, to Shelby, and Amos E. Elliott settled in the cove on Waxahachie creek, where afterwards, my mother, Mahala, was born and raised and married; I was born on the same place 69 years ago today. Billy Elliott settled the place on the north side of the same creek, on the road leading toward Montgomery from the Kingdom neighborhood about 1836. Amos E. Elliott, the father of Jeff E. and Mrs. Francis and Hardie Nelson of your vicinity, settled or rather bought out the old Saltzer place and moved on it, and built the two story house that Jeff E. was born and raised in, and now known by his name, about seven miles north of Columbiana on the Harpersville road. The Elliott's and Hale's have raised one of the largest and most prolific families in all Shelby; they have a goodly number still in Shelby, and have contributed more to Texas than any one county in the United States. I think about half of Hopkins county are from Shelby, or are decendants of Shelbyites, and nearly all of the Hales and Elliotts, with a score or so of Brinkers and McGinnesses, formerly from near Harpersville. In the early twenties, Jonathan Clower with Andrew Cavaness, James Hueaby, the Greens, Mimses and Timses, settled in and around the old Rocky Mount camp ground in the lower part of Shelby county. Grand Father Clower was the only revolutionary soldier that I know of ever living in Shelby county. He was one of Gen'l Morgan's men from near the first until the surrender of the British at the battle of the Cow Pens, Eutaw Springs and others. He settled the place afterwards known as the Jim Cobb place, where he died about 1837 with old age, over 80 years. Marion Green, who was raised from boyhood in that neighborhood, is an honored old man living in Drew county, Ark., in ease and comfort, never having but one child, and she still living in Monticello, Ark., with children from there to Texas all in good circumstances. Many old settlers will remember the Dollars, the younger one, Robert, and Sam Dollar, as well as the Burnsides and many others, many of whose descendants I have met in Texas and Arkansas. The relict of Robert Dollar lives at a ripe old age in Union county Ark. Some of the Mondigus lived in Milan county, Texas; Lemuel Burnside was alive some years ago in Union county, Ark.; but space forbids me to continue much longer, so when you wish cut and throw as much into the waste basket as you choose to do so.

But I do want to say that the Sam Brasher who now has the scar of the coon bite is still living in Texas, although I have not seen him in several years, and he was bitten at Columbiana, or that was always my understanding of it, which gave it the name of "Coon Town." I never heard of "Coonsborro" until I saw it mentioned in the Dr's letters.

Texas is now having fine rains and the prospect for crops are good except for wheat, which will be short of acreage, as it was too dry in the fall to sow. Fruit prospects were never better. Times are looking up, and a general state of improvement going on.

Respectfully,
Your Ob't Serv't,
D. M. CLOWER.

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood.
As fond recollections present them to view,"

It was a beautiful Sabbath evening March 5th, '95, when my many friends gathered around the depot in the dear little town of Wilsonville to bid me a parting farewell, and at 3 o'clock I boarded the train for the far west, and with a few dollars, a big trunk filled with emptiness, and the best wishes of all present, I went my way rejoicing. I landed in the red man's country three days later with less money, no friends, my big trunk filled with emptiness, no job, and fifty cents per day board bill to pay; but I held a high head and wore what I imagined a haughty look, asking for a position on every corner but of no avail, and was eating three meals per day just the same. I soon found that the counters were pretty well jumped, and everything else in my line pretty well filled up. I didn't like the idea much but I mustered up courage enough to go to the wagon-yard and ask the farmers how wages were for farm hands. I soon decided that this was the garden spot of the world, but that I didn't care to garden. I began to turn pale behind the ears, and to scratch my head where it had not itched. Then I thought of the happy days in the past when I talked saucy and ate as much as I pleased, but with all this, I had too much pride to go straight back, so I decided to live or die with these people. I received a drop note through the mail one evening, saying: "Mr. ——, please call at my office tomorrow evening at three o'clock." So I put on my Sunday looks and went down. He very cordially invited me into his office, and said: "I heard you were seeking a position in the mercantile business." Great Gosh! I thought I had it now: I am satisfied I would have measured two inches higher than five minutes before. He said: "Have you any money?" My feathers began to fall. I said: Yes, yes-ss sir, when I didn't have $200 to save me. "Well, he says, if you have $2.00 you can loan me, I will give you good security for it and pay you a salary of $50 per month." I couldn't see any other way out except to tell him that I didn't care to buy a job, and bid him good day. But at last I struck an old fellow that seemed to take a liking to me and I obtained a job at last. I am flying high again.

I have two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Ben-agra, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

RAILROAD FIGURES.

It is said that at least 400 car fender patents have been taken out.

Of the 161,000 miles of railroad in the United States in 1880, 71,000, or nearly one-half, were west of the Mississippi river.

The length of new railroad built during the year ended on June 30, 1893, was 440 miles, and during the next succeeding year 38 miles.

In nearly all the American cities the street railway companies say that the rapidly extending use of the bicycle has hurt their business greatly.

During the past 12 years nearly 10,000 miles of narrow-gauge railroad have been either converted to standard gauge or abandoned entirely in the United States.

The new shops of the Baltimore & Ohio and the yards to be built at Cumberland, Md., will be the most extensive in the country. The buildings alone will cover 650,000 square feet.

After the grip or other serious illness, you find Hood's Sarsaparilla exactly the medicine to build up and give strength.

"I feel thankful to Hood's Sarsaparilla for benefit derived from it. I had the grip and failed to regain health. I did not have any appetite and in fact, was a mere shadow of myself. I at last resorted to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon began to improve. I could soon eat without distress in my stomach. Four bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and a box of Hood's Pills took away all signs of the grip. I want to say to all who suffer in a like manner, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it will surely do you good." George Marler, Green Oak, Michigan.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Sir Bache Cunard, who married Miss Maude Burke, of New York, is the second baronet of his line. In marrying an American girl Sir Bache has followed the laudable example of his father.

—The mother of Aubrey Beardsley, the artist, is a gentle, old-fashioned Englishwoman, who lives entirely for her son and his pretty young sister. Mrs. Beardsley regards him with reverential admiration.

—An unknown work by Charles Baudelaire, author of "Fleurs du Mal" and the model praised by the new poets of France and England, has been discovered, and is to be published soon. It is a bitter satire on the manners and customs of the Belgians.

—The widow of John Brown, of slavery-day fame, lives in a pretty cabin in the Sierra Azure mountains, about fifty miles from San Francisco. The picturesque situation of her home and the fame of her great-hearted husband attract many visitors, who are kindly received.

—Ex-Senator Edmunds, of Vermont, who frequently appears before the supreme court at Washington to argue cases, is in more robust health than when he retired from the senate, and he looks younger and more brisk and dapper, partly owing to the clothes of fashionable cut that he now wears.

—Dr. Rudolf Doehn, editor of the Dresdener Presse, and auther of several works on American history and of translations from American poets, died recently in Dresden at the age of seventy. He was one of the many Germans driven to America after 1848 for political reasons, but returned to his country after Prussia's victories in 1866.

—While in England Alphonse Daudet will be in charge of Henry James, who has made all the arrangements for his stay. Daudet intends to study London, as it is in part the scene of his new story, "Soutien de Famille." Daudet says that shortly before the publication of "La Petite Paroisse," a rich Spaniard offered him one hundred and fifty thousand francs if he would dedicate the book to him. He refused, and considers the blank page to be the best thing in the book.

—The recent exhibition of regard for Prince Bismarck has affected the old man not a little. One of his guests recently remarked to him: "You must have had many years of happiness in seeing the reverence and affection that the gerat German nation feel for you." "Yes," replied Bismarck, "I am happy in that respect. Hatred is contagious, as I have learned; but love is the same. The great preparations for my birthday show such love and good will that they put all the hatred I have ever experienced out of my head."

—A duel arising out of the Oscar Wilde case took place in Paris lately. M. Jules Huret, of the Figaro, in his literary news mentioned the names of the literary men whom Wilde met in Paris, among them Catulle Mendes. The paragraph was an innocent one, and left no room for any suggestion that M. Mendes had any acquaintance with Wilde other than as a foreign man of letters. He complained, however, at bringing his name in connection with Wilde's, and the Figaro expressed its regrets, leaving no ground for offense. M. Mendes replied by an insulting letter which left M. Huret no choice but to fight, and in the duel Mendes was wounded.

A LIVING SHADOW.

Remarkable Transformation of a North Carolina Man.

Strange, But True, Story from the Lumber Regions of a Southern State—Verified by Personal Investigation.

(From the Greenville, N. C., Reflector.)

The following interview has just been given our reporter by Mr. G. A. Baker, the overseer at the farm of Col. Isaac A. Sugg, of Greenville, N. C. It will interest anyone who has ever had Typhoid fever. Mr. Baker said in part:

"I was living in Beaufort county, and on the 2d day of October, 1893, I was stricken down with typhoid fever. I had the best of physicians to attend me and on the 15th day of January, 1894, I was allowed to get up. I was emaciated, weak and had no appetite. I could only drag along for a short distance and would be compelled to sit down and rest. This continued for some time and I began to give up hope of ever getting well. I lost my position in Beaufort county and having secured one in Pitt county, clerking in a store, I undertook it, but was so weak I could not do the work, and had to give it up. The disease settled in my knees, legs and feet. I was taking first one kind of medicine and then another, but nothing did me any good. I was mighty low spirited. I moved out to Col. Sugg's about four or five months ago and commenced taking Dr. Williams' Pills. I took three a day for about three months. I began to regain my appetite in a week's time, and then my weakness began to disappear, and hope sprung up with a blessedness that is beyond all telling. At the expiration of the three months I was entirely cured and could take my axe and go in the woods and do as good a day's work as any man. I was troubled with dyspepsia and that has disappeared. It is also a splendid tonic for weak people. I say, Mr. Editor, God bless Dr. Williams. May he live for a long time. I know he will go up yonder to reap his reward, for he has done a wonderful lot of good. Tell everybody that asks you about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People that if they will come to me I can certainly satisfy them as to their merits. I always carry a box of pills with me and whenever I feel bad I take one."

We were forcibly struck with the earnestness of Mr. Baker and his statement may be relied on.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

IMPERSONALITIES.

Seven New York Romeos were arrested in one week for borrowing money of their lady loves and then refusing to marry them.

An ambulance cycle has been invented by a Berlin doctor. It is a litter resting on two wheels at one end and attached to an ordinary tricycle at the other, and worked by two men. It would be useful in small towns, where a horse ambulance is too expensive, or in the country.

A great romance reader, a Brooklyn girl, who wished to appear extremely devout in church, apparently continued reading her Bible even during the sermon. A shrewd old lady, an occupant of the pew just in the rear, looked over the girl's shoulder and discovered that the Bible cover was detachable, and that the inside was a popular novel.

A young broker of New York attended a ball in Yorkers, and returned home about six a. m. He tried to enter his room without arousing his parents, but was astounded to behold them at the head of the staircase. "I had to work all night at the office," he confusedly explained. "What sort of labor was it," the father asked, "which compelled you to work in a dress suit?"

Dr. Max Simon Nardau, author of "Degeneration," is of Jewish extraction, and was born at Buda-Pesth in 1849.

"The Golden Pomp" is Mr. Quiller Couch's recently published volume of selections from the Elizabethan lyric-poets.

"Pony Tracks" is to be the title of the volume in which Mr. Frederick Remington will record his western experiences.

"Hans Breitman" is about to issue a new series of ballads. It is about forty years since he first essayed this form of popular verse.

Anthony Hope has written a series of four story-telling dialogues which he calls "Bad Matches," and which are said to be particularly witty.

Mr. Bliss Perry's new novel, now on the Scribner press, is called "The Plated City," and deals with a busy New England town wherein silver-plated ware is made.

THE AMERICAN INDIAN.

The Cherokees of North Carolina number 2,885.

The word Esquimaux means "Raw Fish Eaters."

The Indian reservations amount to 212,000 square miles.

There were 249,273 Indians in this country at the last census.

No Indian tribe north of Mexico had domesticated any animal but the dog.

The great temple of the sun at Cuzco, in Peru, was attended by 4,000 priests.

At the coming of the whites, tattooing was almost universal among the Indians.

DISAPPOINTED BIRDS OF PREY.

Instances of Defeat in Their Predatory Attacks.

Birds of prey occasionally meet with victims that effectively resist their attacks. An incident is recorded of an owl meeting death in a peculiar manner. It had pounced upon a weasel during its wanderings, and was attempting to carry it off in its usual fashion, but the vicious little animal fixed its teeth in the body of the bird and robbed it of its life-blood as it was on its way to its nest. The owl was found dead on the grass, with the persistent little weasel still clinging to it.

A hunter tells of a similar case which came under his observation. He saw an eagle soar into the air with its prey in its talons. Watching it, he noticed it rise steadily with a graceful sweep, but suddenly reel, stagger, and appear about to fall. Then, losing its balance, it came rushing down to the ground with folded wings. The hunter, hurrying to the spot to discover what had happened, found a wounded prairie-dog under the dead body of the eagle, struggling vainly to escape. The captive animal had fastened on the eagle's throat and had killed it.

It is a well-known fact that small birds will often attack birds of prey. A flock of sparrows has been observed attacking a wounded hawk, and so vigorous was their onslaught that they finally succeeded in killing it outright. How the hawk had been wounded in the first place we do not know, but it is probable that the sparrows were avenging themselves for the death of a companion, their combined efforts having deprived it of its strength of wing, and its weakened condition then rendering it an easy victim.

Though the heron is a bird of great size, it is by no means powerful, and often falls a victim to birds of prey, sometimes of the smaller species. In more cases than one its self-possession has been the means of its salvation, and the wielding of its short, blunt wing has often deprived its would-be murderer of its prey.

A more ready plan has been adopted, for a sportsman tells of a heron adroitly darting aside its head, and, with a quick motion of its neck, impaling the hawk on its spear-like beak, both birds being brought to the ground by the suddenness of the movement.

In this case the hawk was killed as effectually as if stabbed with a dagger, while the heron was maimed by the fall, which was rendered more severe by the weight of the hawk, still fixed on its beak.

The heron, in the old days of falconry, was frequently observed to strike backward with its beak, often wounding the hawk or falcon, when a fresh bird would be sent up to complete the capture.

A small species of hawk, something equal to a pigeon in size, and commonly called the gos-hawk, has been observed to attack an eagle. The agility and sweep of quickness of the wing together, compared with the more sweeping style of the king of birds, enables it to execute a series of movements rapidly with the wings which allows it to baffle the superior bird.

Eagles are generally believed to be very courageous. That they are not always as is supposed is proved by the following anecdote: A naturalist tells of a combat between ten missel-thrushes and a white-tailed eagle, in which the latter was thoroughly vanquished, and was discovered squatting down in a shed, where he had been driven in hope of refuge from the angry birds.

In England they have a hawk called the merlin, a very small bird, but one of the most fearless of all winged creatures. But even this hawk has been known to flee before the savage attack of a field mouse. Roosters have also been known to drive away chicken hawks.

Foxes often kill buzzards and the smaller hawks that have been impeled to attack them through hunger. They have mainly done this by dragging the birds through brambles and brushwood; for they usually have their talons deeply imbedded in their intended victim, and are unable to let them go.—Golden Days.

THE EARLY GERMANS.

Some Strange Laws on the Treatment of the Women.

The Germans were fond of adorning their persons as well as their houses. The women wore necklaces, bracelets, rings and charms or amulets of gold, silver, brass or amber. They had buckels and clasps for their capes. They adorned their clothing with rude embroidery. The men, at least, and possibly the women, colored their hair red, and Pliny speaks of a hair dye much used at Rome, which was imported from Germany.

In personal appearance the German women resembled their husbands, seeming, as Tacitus remarks, to belong all to the same family. They were nearly seven feet tall, with fair skins, ruddy cheeks, bright blue or keen gray eyes, and long fair hair upon which they bestowed the greatest care. So tall were the Germans that Sidonius Appollinaris, a Latin poet, plaintively relates that "being in Gaul, and finding the people so tall, it was impossible for him to address verses of six feet to patrons who were seven feet high."

In maidenhood, the hair of a maiden was allowed to flow freely over her shoulders; not until her wedding day could it be bound up. Girls "in their hair" meant the same as "girls in their teens" with us. Married women could braid and pin up their hair and adorn it with garlands. Long hair was a mark of the free woman. Anyone who should cut it off was punished with death. Heavy fines were imposed upon one who should disarrange a woman's coiffure or "obbo" so that it came down, or upon one who should touch a maiden's braids. Women sometimes took oaths by placing their hands upon their braids of hair. German law prohibited familiarities of any sort, between men and women. The dress of a woman left her neck and arms bare. A heavy fine was imposed upon anyone who should touch her hand, or her arm below the elbow, still heavier if he touched the upper arm, and heaviest of all if he touched her neck.—Louis Prosser Bates, in Chautauquan.

A Matter of Course.

"John," said the minister, "will you take this woman to be your wedded wife?"

"Now, here, parson, what's the use of asking questions like that? What do you suppose I am after, a divorce?"—Texas Siftings.

Mr. Justice Harlan leaves his dignity behind him when he goes to his country place near Washington, where he may often be seen romping on the lawn with his big setter dog, or playing with the children, to whom he is very partial.

Bishop Wesley J. Gaines, of Georgia, the new star in the theological firmament, is a colored man of vast proportions. He is said to have a wonderful fund of oratory, originality and wit, a man who believes in putting, as he expresses it, lots of ginger into his sermons, and who realizes his sentiments.

Rev. Mr. Fairbanks, an American missionary in India, attributes a large part of his success to the use of a bicycle. Not only is he enabled to cover a more extensive territory with it, but the natural curiosity of the natives brings large crowds to see "a horse that needs neither grass nor grain."

TREES AND PLANTS.

The climate of Mexico is so varied that in that country can be raised any product of the tropics or the polar regions.

Perhaps the largest camellia in existence is at Piluitz Castle, near Dresden, Germany. The tree is about twenty-four feet high and annually produces about 50,000 blossoms.

The "witch tree" of Nevada and southern California exudes or exhales a phosphorescent substance which makes every branch, leaf and section of its bark visible on the darkest night.

For many years green glass has been used for the roof of the Kew Gardens, London. A recent experiment with white glass demonstrated that the plants thrived much better with glass of this tint, and the green is to be discarded.

and those soon to become mothers, should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription robs childbirth of its tortures and terrors, as well as of its dangers to both mother and child, by aiding nature in preparing the system for parturition. Thereby "labor" and the period of confinement are greatly shortened. It also promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

Mrs. Dora A. Guthrie, of Oakley, Overton Co., Tenn., writes: "When I began taking Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I was not able to stand on my feet without suffering almost death. Now I do all my housework, washing, cooking, sewing and everything for my family of eight. I am stouter now than I have been in six years. Your 'Favorite Prescription' is the best to take before confinement, or at least it proved so with me. I never suffered so little with any of my children as I did with my last."

A Happy Woman.

At last I am a well and happy woman again; thanks to McElree's Wine of Cardui. I have suffered for four years from womb trouble of the most horrible kind. Twelve years ago I went to the San Antonio Hospital where they performed an operation, but it left me in a worse state than ever. I went to Dr. Kingsley and Dr. D. Y. Young, but they gave me little relief. After spending $125 I was not able to leave my bed, and most of the time suffered pains to equal a thousand deaths. On the tenth of last October my friend Mrs. Stevens advised me to try McElree's Wine of Cardui. The first bottle did me good, and I got more, and today I am a new woman; am able to do all my cooking and house-work. I am running a boarding-house and doing all the work myself. I still use the Wine, and always keep it in the house—it saved my life.

THE Colorado M. E. conference voted to admit women to the general conferences.

KRUPP, the great German gun manufacturer, pays an income tax of $200,000 a year. A brewer at Bucharest pays one of $316,000.

THE report of a recent inquiry by a government committee shows that while crime generally is decreasing in England, offenses against morality are increasing.

A NEW YORK paper estimates the annual revenue of the churches in that city at $5,560,000, or about $1,000,000 less than the theaters, although the churches outnumber the theaters ten to one.

IN the first five months of 1893 the net gold exportation from the United States was about $62,000,000; in the first five months of 1894 it was $37,000,000, and in the first five months of 1895 it was $12,000,000.

THE mayor of New York city and the governor of New York state have approved the bill to construct a $6,000,000 tunnel under the East river to carry passengers to Brooklyn in four minutes. The tunnel will be located above Sixteenth street.

A WRITER, named W. T. Hornaday, who has made a close investigation of the matter, says that there are now only 209 wild buffaloes alive in the United States—150 in the Yellowstone park, 20 in Colorado and 30 in Texas—out of the vast herds that once roamed over the plains.

ROBERT MCCALLUM, a daring young Scotchman, has started from New York to make the perilous attempt to cross the Atlantic in a 22-foot sloop. His only companion is his black Scotch terrier "Jack." If the lad completes the journey successfully, which he expects to do in forty-five days, he will receive $5,000 and a gold medal.

THE New York Evening Sun says that 20,000,000 packs of playing cards are consumed in the United States each year, and of this quantity no less than 500,000 packs are used on Manhattan island. Since the prices of the cards vary at wholesale from 2 cents a pack up to 75 cents and the retail prices are from 5 cents to $1.50 per pack, it would be safe to say that New Yorkers spend $100,000 for their playing cards every year.

ASSISTANT SURGEON EDGAR A. MEARNS, who has been attached to the international boundary commission during the last three years in its work from El Paso, Tex., across the burning deserts of New Mexico, Arizona and California, has made a valuable collection of specimens of birds and mammals, many of which are absolutely new to scientists. It is reported that he has collected nearly 20,000 specimens of curious life which will be added to the Smithsonian institution at Washington.

THE review of the fruit conditions of the country for the calendar year 1894 by the pomologist of the agricultural department at Washington is printed for the first time in the year book now almost completed. It characterizes the season as a peculiarly disastrous and unprofitable one in most lines of fruit culture. The average value of apples per barrel exported was about 20 per cent. less than in 1893. Peaches were almost a total failure in the commercial peach districts of the south, except in Florida and Texas.

"WE must repeat it once more," the New York Sun said recently, "that the bicycler, man or woman, who doubles up the body while riding deforms the human shape, presents a most ungraceful appearance, invites spinal disease, and loses a great part of the benefit that would otherwise accrue from the exercise. We don't know why the doubling-up habit is so widely prevalent, or why men make an exhibition of it more frequently than women. It is not necessary. Many a rider looks as though he were a hunchback on wheels."

F. J. STANLEY, who has spent several years in the Orient, a large part of the time as professor in one of the native colleges in Japan, recently said at Washington that he was not surprised at the reports of uprisings in China against the missionaries. The Chinese, he said, regarded the Europeans and Americans as the instigators of the Japanese war and therefore held them largely responsible for the degradation of the Chinese nation. He however, expected the ultimate effect of the late war to be the rapid growth of civilization in China and predicted an era of railroad building.

THE international railroad congress will be held in London June 26, and will have for its presiding officer the prince of Wales. There will be present at the congress representatives of more than 300,000 miles of railway lines, who will be afforded an opportunity for the interchange of views on the broadest possible grounds. A large number of carefully prepared papers will be presented and discussed. The congress promises to be the largest and most important conference of railway officials ever held, and some of the brightest railway men of the United States will be there.

GOLD is said to have been found in paying quantities at the bottom of the ocean near the western end of San Clements island, near California. While Archibald Read was cruising about in his yacht it became necessary to ascertain the character of the bottom with a view of casting anchor. The lead had a small cavity in the bottom filled with tallow that was used to indicate what kind of a seabed it touched. In this tallow the gold was found imbedded. It is supposed there is a rich placer concealed by the waves. An expedition is to be fitted out in the near future to go to the island.

SOLID FOR SILVER.

The Declaration of Principles Adopted and a Central Committee Chosen with Power to Call a National Convention.

First Day.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 13.—Fully 1,500 delegates were present in the hall at 2:15 p. m. when President Brown of the Central Bimetallic league of Tennessee called the convention to order and introduced Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, who offered prayer.

President Brown then called for nominations for permanent chairman, and Senator Isham G. Harris, the ante-bellum governor of Tennessee, received an enthusiastic reception when he arose to present the name of Senator David Turpie, of Indiana. Mr. Harris said that he had no idea of making a speech; that he only wished to state in a word the purpose and objects of the convention. It was called by the Central Bimetallic league of Shelby county, a strictly nonpartisan organization, composed of democrats and republicans and populists. Its doors were thrown open to every American citizen who honestly believed in the propriety, the advisability and the necessity of the rehabilitation of silver. Their doctrine is bimetallism, and by bimetallism they mean the free and unlimited coinage of all the gold and all the silver produced in the country.

"They hold, as to this convention, that a democrat can be present and participate in its deliberations without impairing in the slightest degree his allegiance or fidelity to his party organization, and the same is true of republicans and populists, whose party fealty can not be impeached because of their open advocacy of free silver coinage.

"We are here," concluded the senator, "as a band of free men, to consider this all-absorbing question which now confronts the American people. We are here to consider the coinage question, and that question only. That is the object of this convention, as I understand it, and as I believe it to be understood by the hundreds of delegates who are here to-day. I beg now to present to you Hon. David Turpie, of Indiana, whom I place in nomination as your presiding officer, than whom there is no truer or abler bimetallist in the United States of America."

The distinguished senator from Indiana was warmly received. While he bears his sixty-eight years lightly, his voice was rather weak for the large hall, and he showed that the warm weather made the task of delivering an elaborate address before the convention a difficult one. After Senator Turpie had been elected by acclamation he assumed the chair and addressed the convention.

The convention then completed its permanent organization by the election, by acclamation, of B. Wade, of Tennessee, reading clerk of the house of representatives, to act as secretary. Mr. Wade was nominated by Gov. Lowry of Mississippi.

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, moved the appointment of a committee on resolutions, to be composed of one delegate from each state represented. The motion carried, after it had been amended, at the suggestion of Judge John W. Tomlinson, of Birmingham, Ala., so as to provide that on roll-call each state should present the name of a member of its delegation to act as vice-president of the convention and one member to represent it on the committee on resolutions. The roll-call resulted in the naming of the following vice-presidents:

State Treasurer Craig Smith of Alabama; Senator J. H. Berry, of Arkansas; Alex. Delmar, of California; J. B. Bush, of New Mexico; B. F. Weaver, of Virginia; A. P. Blackwell, of Texas; Wm. B. Bate, of Tennessee; Gov. John C. Evans, of South Carolina; Congressman Jos. C. Sibley, of Pennsylvania; F. E. Brown, of Nebraska; Gen. A. J. Warner, of Ohio; G. F. Key, of North Carolina; Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada; William F. Smith, of Missouri; Paul A. Dews, of Montana; W. C. Yerger, of Mississippi; M. J. Cunningham, of Louisiana; J. R. Reynolds, of Kentucky; Anson Walcott, of Indiana; W. A. Hidell, of Georgia, and Alva Adams, of Colorado.

The following committee on resolutions was named:

Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas; J. P. Tankhead, of Alabama; Senator Marion Butler, of North Carolina; Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada; C. F. Cockran, of Missouri; Chas. A. Hartman, of Montana; Senator J. S. George, of Mississippi; J. H. Dupree, of Louisiana; J. P. Barion, of Kentucky; Senator David Turpie, of Indiana; F. M. Longley, of Georgia; Chas. S. Thomas, of Colorado; ex-Gov. L. Bradford Prince, of New Mexico; Alex Delmar, of California; E. C. Tradway, of Virginia; S. F. Watson, of Texas; E. W. Carmaci, of Tennessee; B. R. Tillman, of South Carolina; Jos. C. Sibley, of Pennsylvania; William H. Bryan, of Nebraska, and A. J. Warner, of Ohio.

Upon the motion of a Mississippi delegate, Senator Harris was nominated, as "The Old Wheel Horse of Free Coinage," to be a member of the committee on resolutions for the United States at large, and was elected with great enthusiasm.

Judge J. H. McDowell, of Tennessee, arose to ask recognition for the populists on the committee on resolutions. The judge, it appears, bears some resemblance to Peffer, of Kansas, and the most striking characteristics of his style of oratory and his gesticulations. He carried his point without difficulty, and it was agreed that he be empowered to present the names of delegates, who were added to the committee on resolutions, as representatives of the people's party.

Ex-Gov. L. Bradford Prince of New Mexico, in explanation of the fact that a number of western and northwestern states had failed to respond to the roll-call, said that but a few weeks ago the representatives of every one of those states had attended a silver convention at Salt Lake city, at which a committee had been appointed to represent them, collectively, at the Memphis convention. The absence of delegates from individual states should not be construed to indicate any lack of interest in the free-silver movement or of sympathy with the Memphis convention. The south and the west were hand in hand in this campaign, and must stand together.

The next speaker introduced was Alexander Delmar, the well-known writer on the coinage question and a member of the silver commission of 1886.

At the evening session, which began promptly at 8 o'clock, Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada, presided, and introduced Congressman Joseph C. Sibley, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Sibley expounded the four political principles, which, he said, contained the result of his study of the money question. They were:

"First—Double the volume of money and you double prices.

"Second—Divide the volume of money and you divide prices.

"Third—Double the volume of money and you divide the debts.

"Fourth—Divide the volume of money and you double the debts."

At the conclusion of Mr. Sibley's speech there were persistent calls for Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, but that gentleman evidently desired a more favorable opportunity and more time in which to deliver his views upon the silver question, for he declined to respond.

Then, upon invitation of the convention, Mr. Charles S. Thomas, of Denver, occupied the remainder of the time of the evening session.

Second Day.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 13.—At 10:05 Rev. Dr. Brooks, of Memphis, opened the convention with prayer, after which the arrival of delegates from Arizona and one from Arkansas was announced. Chairman Turpie then announced that the committee on resolutions was not ready to report, and introduced Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada, who addressed the convention.

Senator Stewart said: The object lessons of the last three years show that the American people are face to face with concentrated capital, the enemy which destroyed all previous civilizations. A shrinking volume of money as compared with population and business produces falling prices, paralyzes industry and compels the producers of wealth to pawn their property to continue the struggle against impending fate.

Four-fifths of the American people, yea, nine-tenths, have been at heart in favor of restoring silver ever since the crime of 1873 was discovered, but the gold combination has seized every avenue of communication. Four thousand national banks are its agents; five thousand other banks and trust companies do its bidding.

The people have at last taken this matter into their hands. Twenty years of betrayal have taught them that equivocal platforms and good-lord-good-devil politicians mean gold monopoly. They now know that those who say they are friendly to silver but want it accomplished without doing it themselves are enemies and can not be trusted. No man is a bimetalist who does not advocate bi-metallism as it existed for thousands of years before Sherman visited England in 1867, and before he carried out the purpose of an English syndicate to strike down silver in 1873.

The democracy of Illinois has broken the ice. The rank and file of the republican party south and west are sullen and angry, but the manipulators are still in control. The republican convention of Kentucky renewed the allegiance of the party of that state to the alien gold syndicate, but the ties of party are not strong enough to hold the republicans of the great northwest in line. The south and west and the producing classes of all sections have a common interest in restoring the money of the constitution and regaining control of the government of the United States.

When Senator Stewart had finished his speech Secretary Wade read a telegram from Congressman Benton McMillan, of Tennessee, in which he expressed regret that personal business prevented his attendance upon the convention, and added:

"Cessation from the use of silver as redemption money would be a calamity to mankind. While bimetallism by international agreement is much to be desired, it is useless to expect England to make any agreement. To expect her to concede bimetallism now is as idle as it would have been for our forefathers to rely on her doing them justice without a fight in 1776."

At this juncture loud cries were made for Congressman Money, one of the silver leaders of Mississippi. He advanced to the front of the stage, and prefaced his remarks by saying:

"I am here," a silver man from head to foot, and a democrat all over."

Mr. Money was suffering from a sore throat, and spoke but a few moments, deprecating any attempt to settle the silver question outside the democratic party.

'Private" John Allen, of Mississippi, was the next called by the audience to speak. He began:

"I, like the poor, am always with you." He advanced no new arguments, but caught the crowd, throwing a verbal bouquet at Senator Stewart, and reminding the people that the west was the friend of the south.

The speaker elicited rounds of applause when he said that the fight should not be taken out of the democratic party. He said that the gold men were threatening the people with disruption of the democratic party, and he invited the republicans to come into the democratic party and fill up the ranks left vacant by deserters, who went to the republican party.

Mr. Allen kept the audience laughing for about fifteen minutes, and at the conclusion of his remarks the convention took a recess until 2:30 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Immediately after the convention was called to order for the afternoon session Senator J. K. Jones, of Arkansas, as chairman, presented the report of the committee on resolutions, which he read.

The reading of the resolutions was frequently interrupted by tumultuous applause, and they were adopted with a hurrah, without discussion.

Report of the Committee on Resolutions Adopted.

The report made by the committee on resolutions and adopted by the convention follows:

Silver and gold coin have to all ages constituted the money of the world, were the money of the fathers of the republic, the money of history and of the constitution.

The universal experience of mankind has demonstrated that the joint use of both silver and gold coin as one money constitutes the most stable standard of values, and that the full amount of both metals is necessary as a medium of exchange.

The demonetization of either of these historic money metals means an appreciation of the value of money, a fall in the prices of commodities, as diminution of the results of legitimate business, the increase in the burden of debts, a withdrawal of money from the channels of trade and industry, where it no longer yields a safe and sure return, and its idle accumulation in the banks and in the great money centers of the country.

There is no health or soundness in a financial system under which a hoarded dollar is productive of increase to its possessors, while an invested dollar yields a constantly-diminishing return, and under which fortunes are made by the accretions of idle capital or destroyed by a persistent fall in the price of commodities and a persistent dwindling in the margin of profits in almost every branch of useful industry.

Such a system is a premium upon sloth and a penalty upon industry, and such a system is that which the criminal legislation of 1873 has imposed upon this country.

The bimetallists' standard of silver and gold has behind it the experience of ages, and has been tested and approved by the enlightened and deliberate judgment of mankind. The gold standard is a departure from the established policy of the civilized world, with nothing to commend it but twenty-two years of depression and disaster to the people and extraordinary accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few.

There are some facts bearing on this question, recognized and admitted by all candid men, whether advocates of bimetallism or of the single gold standard. Among these is the fact that the very year that marked the change from the bimetallic to single gold standard is the very year that marked the change from a condition of rising prices, large profits, general contentment and great prosperity to a condition of falling prices, diminishing profits, insecurity of investments, unemployed labor and a heavy depression in all branches of trade and industry. It is not a matter of dispute, even among the honest advocates of the gold standard, that general prosperity came to an end with a destruction of the bimetallic system, and that hard times, falling prices, idle workingmen and widespread depression came in with the gold standard and prevails to-day wherever the gold standard has been adopted.

CAUSE OF DEPRESSION.

Every international monetary conference that has been called, every demand in this country and in Europe for an international agreement to establish the bimetallic standard, is a confession that the demonetization of silver was a blunder, if not a crime; that its consequences have been disastrous, and that the conditions that it has wrought are full of menace and of peril. The logic of facts establishes beyond intelligent question that the destruction of silver as primary money by a conspiracy of self-interests is the cause of the wide depression and suffering that began with the gold standard. There can be no restoration of prosperity, nor permanent relief from prevailing conditions, until the great cause has been removed by a complete restoration of silver to its proper place as a money metal, equal with gold.

We believe in a money of stable value. We believe least of all in an appreciating standard. It is only through the practical operation of bimetallism that a stable standard of value can be secured. A standard constituted of money constantly increasing in value is not a sound nor a stable standard, but a constantly changing standard. The effect of gold monometallism is to establish one standard for the creditor and another for the debtor, and there can be no more dishonest monetary system than that which gives short measure to the borrower and long measure to the lender.

Under the policy prevailing preceding 1873 there can be no violent change in the relative value of the two metals, for a rise in the value of one metal is counteracted by a decreased demand and a fall in value by the other. Under the operations of this beneficient law and established relation was maintained between them, in spite of most extreme changes in relative productions. From the earliest period of our history up to 1873 the right of the debtor to choose whether he should pay his debts in silver or gold coin was always recognized. The subsequent policy has been to transfer his right to the collector, thus tending to constantly increase the value of the dearer metal and destroy the parity between them.

Believing that it is absolutely necessary to reverse this iniquitous and ruinous policy, we therefore, resolve:

DEMAND SILVER'S RESTORATION.

"That we favor the immediate restoration of silver to its former place as a full legal-tender standard money, equal with gold, and the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold at the ratio of 16 to 1 and upon terms of exact equality.

"That while we should welcome the co-operation of other nations, we believe that the United States should not wait upon the pleasure of foreign governments or the consent of foreign creditors, but should themselves proceed to reverse the grinding process that is delaying the prosperity of the people, and should lead by their example the nations of the earth."

That the rights of the American people, interests of labor and the prosperity of American industry have a higher claim on the consideration of the people's lawmakers than the greed of foreign creditors or the avaricious demands made by idle holders of idle capital. The right to regulate its own monetary system in the interests of its own people is a right which no free government can barter, sell or surrender. This reserved right is a part of every bond, of every contract and of every obligation. No creditor or claimant can set up a right that can take precedence over a nation's obligations to promote the welfare of the masses of its own people. This is a debt higher and more binding than all other debts, and one which it is not only dishonest, but treasonable to ignore.

Under the policy that now prevails the land is filled with idle and discontented workmen and an ever-growing army of tramps—men whom lack of work and opportunity have made outcasts and beggars. At the other end we find that a few thousand families own one-half the wealth of the country. The centralization of wealth has gone hand in hand with the spread of poverty. The pauper and the plutocrat are twin children of the same vicious and unholy system. The system is full of menace to the liberties of the people and the life of the republic. The issue is enfranchisement and servitude. Whatever the power of money can do by debauchery and corruption to maintain its grasp on the lawmaking power will be done.

We, therefore, appeal to the plain people of the land, with perfect confidence in their patriotism and intelligence, to arouse themselves to a full sense of the peril that confronts them and defend the citadel of their liberties with a vigilance that shall neither slumber nor sleep.

The following resolution was also presented and adopted:

Resolved, That a committee, composed of one member from each state, be appointed by the delegates thereof in this convention, whose duty it shall be to correspond with the representatives and advocates of bimetallism and the bimetallic societies in the different sections of the Union, and advise measures to advance the cause throughout the country. This committee shall have power to call a national conference of bimetallists whenever, in the opinion of the committee, the cause of bimetallism can be advanced thereby. Said committee shall have power to fill all vacancies.

Senator Harris then presented letters from Senators John T. Morgan, of Alabama; Pugh, of Alabama, and Jones, of Nevada, indorsing the convention, and containing words of encouragement for the advocates of the free coinage of silver.

In response to repeated calls from the audience, Senator Jones, of Arkansas, advanced to the front of the stage.

"I had no idea, gentlemen," said he, "of making a speech. The resolutions just presented contain my views on this subject as tersely and forcibly as they could be expressed in words. I believe that the people of the country will digest this great question before the next national election and find the fallacies of the arguments of the gentlemen on the other side.

"In this campaign of education the bloated plutocrats will find that they are the pupils and we are the teachers, instead of they being the teachers and we the pupils, as they claim. There never has been a time in the history of the world when the nations were as much interested in a question as they are in this one. Hard times do not exist in America alone. They exist in every country where gold is the measure of value. This shows what the root of the evil is.

"They talk of Mexicanizing this country. Why, Mexico is paying better wages and is more prosperous than ever before. In conclusion, I will say that I believe that there is no hope for the return of national prosperity to this country until this question is settled, and settled by the rehabilitation of silver as a money."

The convention was further addressed in succession by ex-Gov. Prince of New Mexico; Senator Tillman, of South Carolina; Gov. Adams, of Colorado, and Senator Butler, of North Carolina. At the close of the latter's remarks the convention took a recess until evening.

EVENING SESSION.

Congressman Bankhead, of Alabama, presided at the evening session. He introduced Gen. A. J. Warner, of Ohio, who declared that any man who says that silver was demonetized with the full knowledge of the people of the United States simply lies.

"You can disentomb all the traitors whose lives are written in history and all can give a better reason for their traitorous ends than can the senator from Ohio give for his action on the financial question."

He insisted that the silver question was the most important one before the public, and that free coinage must be carried, whether within party lines or not, but he asked no one to leave his party. He said that he had no doubt that Sherman and Cleveland would vote the same ticket next year.

Wm. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, the next speaker, in the course of his remarks, said:

"Populists will not envy you republicans when you follow the famous motto of your martyred president, 'Government of the people, for the people and by the people,' and win victories for truth.

"They will not envy you democrats any victories won for truth, if you follow the rules laid down by Jefferson and Jackson. Republicans and democrats will not envy you populists, who are made up of the two mother parties, and honor alike Lincoln, Jefferson and Jackson, if you win victories for truth."

Most of Mr. Bryan's speech was devoted to answering Mr. Carlisle's recent Memphis speech.

State Senator Anson Walcott, of Indiana, was the last speaker of the evening.

Alabama—John W. Tomlinson.
Arkansas—Charles Coffin.
California—Alex. Delmar.
Colorado—A. W. Rucker.
Georgia—N. W. Longley.
Kentucky—J. A. Parker.
Louisiana—Senator Blanchard.

Nevada—C. S. Nixon.
Nebraska—C. J. Smith.
North Carolina—M. R. Elliott.

South Carolina—J. W. Stockes.
Tennessee—John R. Godwin.
Texas—J. H. Reagan.
Virginia—M. P. Brandon.
New Mexico—M. B. Prince.

The committee elected John R. Godwin, of Tennessee, as chairman. It will meet in Chicago during July to perfect a permanent organization.

The convention then adjourned sine die.

—Macaroni with Tomato Sauce: Put one-half of a quart can of tomatoes on to boil, with two sprigs of parsley and a small piece of celery, or a little celery salt and three whole cloves. Fry one tablespoonful of chopped onion in one heaping teaspoonful of butter, till yellow, then add a heaping tablespoonful of flour and stir all into the tomato. Season with pepper and salt, and strain into a clean saucepan. Set where it will keep hot, but not boil. Put one-fourth of a pound of well-washed macaroni in plenty of boiling salted water. Cover and boil rapidly from twenty to twenty-five minutes, then drain in a colander. Place a layer of the macaroni in a hot dish, then pour over it some of the sauce, having the sauce on the last thing. Set in the oven for five minutes, and serve very hot.—Boston Budget.

—The influx of the south of Europe people during the last ten or fifteen years has tended materially to lower the standard of foreign immigration, as the immigrants from Italy, Bohemia and Hungary are, in many respects, inferior to those from the north of Europe.

To the United States marshals in the states along the Atlantic seaboard this letter has been sent.

Department of Justice, Washington, June 13.

I have today sent to the attorney of the United States for your district a copy of a letter from the secretary of state in relation to alleged attempts to organize in this country expeditions to aid the insurrection now going on in the island of Cuba. Consult with the attorney who will show you the correspondence relating to this matter, and take all such steps as are necessary and proper to prevent any violation of the neutrality in the direction indicated, acting promptly and vigorously.

Very respectfully,
JUDSON HARMON,
Acting Attorney General.

Secretary Olney's letter to the attorney general, making the suggestion upon which these instructions are based is as follows:

Department of State, Washington, June 10, 1895.—The Honorable The Attorney General: Sir: It is matter of current rumor and newspaper report that at various points in the United States, attempts are making by enlistment of men, the equipment and arming of vessels, and other illegal measures, to aid the insurrection now in progress in the Island of Cuba. While this department has not been furnished with tangible evidence confirmatory of such rumors and reports it deems it of great importance that no possible opportunity be given for complaints that the government of the United States has in any respect fallen short of its full duty to a friendly nation. It is respectfully suggested, therefore, that the United States attorneys and marshals for the several districts embracing the coast line between New York and Brownville have their attention called to the subject and be specially enjoined to see to it that the neutrality laws of the United States are faithfully observed and all violations theoeof promptly and vigorously prosecuted. Respectfully yours,

THE GOVERNMENT SUPPLIES.

The Departmental Commission at Work Upon the Bids.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The departmental commission charged with the duty of making contracts for general supplies for the government service in Washington, including the local government, is now busily engaged in considering the proposals recently submitted to the various departments. This commission is composed of Assistant Secretary Hamlin, of the treasury; Assistant Secretary Sims, of the interior department, and Third Assistant Postmaster Craige. All the bids have been scheduled and will be finally acted upon in a short time, unless it should be developed that the competitors have entered into a combination to raise the rates on articles required in the public service. The commission was constituted for the purpose of securing the lowest and most advantageous terms and at the same time secure a regular schedule of rates for all the departments.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

Chief Engineer Craighill Receives Encouraging Reports From Southern Ports.

WASHINGTON, June 15. — General Craighill, chief of the engineer corps of the army, has received some very encouraging reports on the improvement of southern harbors. At the offices at Galveston, reports come that they have now between 18 and 19 feet of water, where there were originally but twelve feet. At Savannah the depth has been increased from 14 1-2 to 24 feet and it is expected that 26 feet will be obtained before long. When work was begun at Charleston harbor there was but 12 feet at low tide. The officer there now reports 15 feet and expects more when the jetties which are now nearly completed are finished. At St. Johns, Fla., an increase from 12 1-2 feet to 16 feet is reported, except over the bar, and this depth is expected there before long.

BETTER TIMES IN THE SOUTH.

Big Iron Company Increases the Wages of Its Employes.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 15.—The Howard-Harrison Iron company, located at Bessemer, operating the largest iron pipe works in the south, employing 1,500 men, has posted notice that the wages of its employes will be increased 10 per cent, effective June 15. The advance is voluntary. This is the second large iron company to increase wages in this district within a week.

MOBILE, Ala., June 15.—Philip Goodwin, colored, was hanged at 6 a. m. yesterday for the murder on August 5th, 1893, of John Poole, section boss of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, at Venitia, Mobile county. The hanging was devoid of sensational features.

THE FALL RIVER DISASTER.

FALL RIVER, Mass., June 15.—A catastrophe which created the greatest excitement in this city since the granite mill fire occurred yesterday morning at the Langley loom harness shop on County street, a three-story wooden building, owned by Henry I. Langley. A fifty-horse power boiler exploded in the rear part of the basement, blowing out the sides of the building, knocking away the supports and allowing the upper floors to settle into a mass of ruins.

Fire started in the ruins and began to burn briskly. The firemen made heroic efforts to rescue the imprisoned working people of whom there were 17. Shrieks from the girls in the ruins were mingled with the agonized cries of their friends, who had hurried to the scene when the first news of the catastrophe appeared spread. Ambulance calls were sent out hurriedly and every physician who could be reached was sent at once to the scene. The offices and the houses in the the vicinity were turned into temporary hospitals. At 9 o'clock the badly charred and scarcely recognizable body of a woman was hauled from the ruins. The fire had been quenched, but it was still smouldering and the work of rescuing could go only with difficulty. Up to noon the work of search and rescue was carried on amid great excitement and at that hour it was found that four persons had been killed, three more were missing and four had been seriously injured.

It is quite certain that seven deaths at least will result. Mr. Langley says the boiler was only three and a half years old. Napoleon LePage, the fireman and engineer, escaped without injury. There was plenty of water in the boiler, he says. He has been arrested. The total pecuniary loss will be about $40,000.

The engineer says the boiler had not been officially inspected in five years so far as he could remember, although it was repaired not long ago. He has been engineer for eight years.

JOINT DEBATE AT JACKSON.

Josiah Patterson, of Tennessee, and Ex-Governor Lowe, of Mississippi, Meet.

JACKSON, Miss., June 15.—An immense audience assembled at the Representative hall last night to hear a joint discussion of the money question between Hon. Josiah Patterson, of Tennessee, and ex-Governor Lowe, of Mississippi, the former an advocate of the single gold standard, the latter free silver 16 to 1.

Mr. Patterson eulogized Grover Cleveland and his administration to the skies and gave as his belief that 16 to 1 meant silver monometallism and the panic this country ever saw, while ex-Governor Lowe raked the administration fore and aft and asserted that prosperous times would never come till silver was restored to the place it occupied prior to 1873. Both are excellent debaters and it would be hard to say which came out best on the argument, but Lowe had the crowd largely his way and got the cheers.

BUSINESS DOES IMPROVE.

Dun Claims It is No Longer a Matter to be Questioned.

NEW YORK, June 15.—R. G. Dun & company's weekly review of trade says:

It is no longer a question whether business improves. Not for a long time have our reports from all parts of the country been so uniformly favorable. The daily average of bank clearings in June is 24.8 per cent. larger than last year, though 11.4 per cent. less than in 1892. The most potent influence has been the receipt of more favorable advices regarding growing crops. Even official statements helped, because altogether less gloomy than previous rumors. Labor troubles are getting out of the way, wages in many establishments are rising, and with the iron industry just now leading, there is general improvement in manufactures. Monnetary conditions also help. The time draws near when, with good crops, exports will bring gold hither, and though foreign operations on stocks and bonds have been insignificant this week, the effect of previous transactions has not been exhausted. Much diminished receipts of money from the interior indicate better employment in business, especially at the east, and the volume of commercial loans steadily rises, and is now fair for this season even in a good year.

THE NEW JERSEY FRAUDS.

Persons Indicted by the Grand Jury for the State House Irregularities.

TRENTON, N. J., June 15.—It has leaked out that the persons indicted by the grand jury in connection with the state house frauds are Bernard Ford, the fugitive ex-superintendent of the capitol; John L. VanClef, ex-chief clerk of the state board of assessors, John Mullins, the Jersey City furniture dealer from whom vast quantities of goods were bought to furnish the state house, and John L. Kuster, ex-business manager of the Newark Freie Zeitung, who is accused of having bribed several printers in connection with contracts for German state printing. These printers, it is rumored, have also been indicted.

International and Great Northern Robbed.

THE CHRONICLE

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, JUNE 20, 1895.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

TEMPLE TEX., June 10, 1895.

EDITOR CHRONICLE—In your last issue I noticed an article from Mr. D. M. Clower, of Dallas, and as this point is about 150 miles south of Dallas and nearer the coast, I thought I would say a few words in regard to same.

This town is situated on the G. C. & S. F. Ry. where what is now called Lampasas Branch of the G. C. & S. F. Ry., originallay the main line, before the road was extended north, leaves the main line and about 209 miles from Galveston and the coast, and is a town of about 9000 or 10,000 inhabitants. The country contiguous is slightly rolling with very little timber on it and the soil of a black waxy nature which produces very well. Cotton is extensively raised here almost to the exclusion of all other farm products, although it has been demonstrated that truck gardening yields handsome returns in this section of the country. The soil continues of a black waxy nature south to within about 10 miles of the coast where it becomes slightly sandy. Fruits, berries and vegatables of all kinds are extensively raised 100 miles south of here, or in what is known as the lower coast country.

This town is in what is called the upper coast country and with the present schedule one can spend the day at Galveston in the surf or otherwise and be back ready for business with only the loss of one day.

Crops in this section are good. Plenty of rain to make the corn crop, has already fallen. The cotton acreage in this immediate section has been reduced considerably, but to the south and west on the Brazos and Cow House Rivers the recent heavy rains have washed up much of the corn and oat crop and the farmers are replanting with cotton.

Belton, the county seat of this, Bell county, and a town of about 7,000 population, is situated 8 miles west of this point and is one of the oldest and wealthiest towns in this section of country. Among the recent industries established there is a canning factory for preserving all kinds of vegatables and the making of catsups and sauces all kinds and they anticipate doing a 3000 or 10,000 can business this season.

Well Mr. Editor as this is getting pretty lengthy and for fear all of it will go in the waste basket, I will close. Yours Respectfully, OBSERVER.

A WORD.

A passing cloud within the sky
Will make the blue of deeper dye;
A single tree within a field
Will make it a new beauty yield;
And one white sail upon the sea
Will break the dull monotony;
A kindly word in grief's dark night
Will fill the soul with hope and light.

THE USE OF

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For fully two years, I suffered from rheumatism, and was frequently in such a condition that I could hardly walk. I spent some time in Hot Springs, Ark., and the treatment helped me for the time being; but soon the complaint returned and I was as badly afflicted as ever. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being recommended, I resolved to try it, and, after using six bottles, I was completely cured."—P. H. FORD, Ouachita City, La.

Dr. J. W. Norton, of Athens, Ala., is assisting Bro. Wilson with his meeting at the Methodist church. All who attend are very much benefited, and great good is being done through Dr. Norton's preaching.

A very interesting and profitable series of meetings are being held this week at the Methodist church by the pastor Rev. T. M. Wilson, ably assisted by Dr. Norton, of Athens. May they reap a rich harvest of souls as a reward for their faithful services is our earnest hope.

On last Sunday night children's day exercises were held at the M. E. church. An interesting program had been prepared by the members of the Sabbath school, which was heartily enjoyed by a large audience. The collection amounted to $9.54.

A game of base ball was played at Shelby last Friday afternoon between the Columbiana and Shelby teams, which resulted in Shelby's defeat by a score 24 to 4. Shelby's team can certainly do better than that, and we hope to see the next game more closely contested.

A game of base ball was played yesterday in Childersburg between their team and our boys, resulting in a victory for Columbiana by a score of 25 to 14. Our boys were royally entertained during their stay in Childersburg, and they speak in terms of highest praise of the gentlemanly conduct of her team, and the very generous treatment given them. We hope to play these gentlemen again, and if they will come here, the town shall be theirs while they are here.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker and Armstrong.

RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Columbiana Christian Endeavor Society on Sunday. June 2, 1895.

WHEREAS, Our beloved young brother and friend, T. K. Roberts, who has been among us for the past year, having finished his work here and removed to other fields of usefulness, it is fitting that we express our regret at losing him and our appreciation of the work he has done for our society and community; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, 1st—That we, as a society, recognize in Brother Roberts one of the finest and brightest types of christian manhood; that he posesses in an unusually high degree all of those qualities and graces of mind and heart that go to make up the true man and the true and useful christian worker.

2d—That his rare consecration to his divine Master's cause is deep and abiding and beautiful to behold.

3d—That we recognize fully that our dear brother has, under God, done much for our city and community, in an intellectual and spiritual sense, during the short period he has been permitted to be with us, and we realize that his place cannot be easily filled.

4th—That we would hold "Brother Tom" up as a model for all young men to follow, emulate his example of christian courage, humility and energy.

5th—That while we deeply regret to lose him from our society and community we feel that it would be selfish in us, as christians, to detain him if we could, knowing as we do the grand work he has before him. But his influence will remain with us, and we feel that his prayers will be for us. We commend him to all good people and to the God for whom he so delights to work.

6th—That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of our society and that a copy be forwarded by our secretary to brother Roberts.

MARRIED.

On Wednesday, June 12th, at 5:30 a. m., Judge John S. Leeper was united in marriage to Miss Ella L. Calhoun at the residence of Mr. Wm. Long, in Bessemer, Ala., Rev. E. C. Hawkins officiating, and were attended by Mr. John C. Perry and Miss Mollie Woodruff.

Mr. and Mrs. Leeper arrived at Columbiana on the noon train, Wednesday, and were driven to the Leeper homestead, in the north part of the town, where they will reside.

The many friends of Judge Leeper wish him and his bride a long life of happiness, and that their pathway through life may be one of roses devoid of the thorns.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express through your paper our profound gratitude to our many friends, who have aided us in so many ways since our unfortunate loss by fire, and also to correct the error in your last issue that there was no insurance. Since the fire I have found out that the loan company from whom I negotiated a loan, had taken out a policy for $200 on my residence.
Gratefully,
MRS. AND MRS. SHELBY W. NELSON.

I have two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bon-aqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

HIS MENTAL SCREEN.

He said: "I always hold a screen
Myself and the rude world between,
That none may know me, all in all."
As he the boastful words let fall,
I thought, and at myself did wink—
"That screen of yours is lower than
You know, or some of us, young man,
Are rather taller than you think!"
—Puck.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 10.

It would have been amusing to describe Yellow Leaf as an agricultural country sixty years ago! There were only a few squatters settled on the south prong. A vast territory drained by the north or muddy prong, was left to wolves and straying herds of cattle, without an inhabitant, regarded too poor for human habitation. But I am not now ashamed to celebrate it as abundantly fitted for men to dwell in, proved by the fact, for much of it is thickly settled by people not at all destitute of facilities for comfort. The territory is fan-shaped, the stem formed by a narrow strip as you approach the debouchure of the creek into the Coosa, where is situated the fine farm of Captain Walthall. A few miles above this farm is the fine mill seat, long utilized, known as Morgan's mill, now owned, I understand, by a sagacious Columbiana merchant. Above this, in the broad end of the fan, embracing extended territory, very rolling and mountainous indeed, but the mountains and hills are interlined by strips of very free land, the slopes themselves not without value. A nobler fruit, vine and tobacco country cannot be found. I am told a Virginian, acquainted with the tobacco business, is proposing to test the adaptation of the country to tobacco raising. I have no question about his sagacity.

A sulphur spring is found near Mt. Calvary church, where people used to resort, in tents in the summer, to drink the water and hunt the abundant game in the hills around. I used to hear that farther out northwest there was a cabin resort in summer around a fine sulphur spring. Doubtless mineral water will be discovered here and there all over the territory. It may happen some day that wealthy men from South Alabama and elsewhere will build summer homes extensively in this salubrious region, and carry culture and refinement into the district. Stranger things have often happened.

Cotton matures admirably well in this region, and strawberries thrive phenominally. This, I know, is considered a small affair, but that is a mistake. In some of the best territory of Texas, the great land of promise, strawberry raising is being substituted for cotton as more profitable. I am informed of a community there, where is a large and flourishing school that gives its vacation in spring that the children may hire themselves out to pick strawberries, which they find very profitable. Abundant market facilities are afforded to sell strawberries raised in Yellow Leaf, at Birmingham and other towns. The facilities will be utilized fully in time.

Near Liberty meeting house, runing across the farm of Mr. Martin, crops out a wonderful vein of coal, I should think eight feet thick, dipping at about an angle of forty-five degrees. A cursory examination, a few years ago, impressed me that the coal is well-fitted for coking. Exploration will doubtless reveal neighboring veins, reaching out and connecting with the coal region of Broken Arrow in St. Clair county.

Much of the Yellow Leaf country is covered with abundant pine forests, inviting a large lumber business. Sandstone, suitable for building purposes, I think, is found in many parts. The once supposed valueless part of Alabama territory is being found rich in minerals and valuable as the agricultural land, for long alone attracting notice. God has lavished resources for wealth and comfort all over our goodly land. We need only to recognize our advantages, and to get rid of the illusion that we can find the end of the rainbow and the bag of gold in Texas. Texas is right around us and under our feet if we could only know it.

The denizens of the comparatively unnoticed section of Shelby so briefly and imperfectly sketched, may be a little piqued that I have neglected to say that the best part of the Harpersville section, next to engage our attention, is drained by tributaries of their long-known and noted creek. The apology must be that it is natural to group the kindred features of a country together—slate lands, red lands, gray land; and that the Harpersville people would be very loath, with their enviable tradition to be located on Yellow Leaf, coming into notice in the late history of the country. So, I must submit myself to whatever criticism may be forthcoming.

Wilsonville Waifs.

Jim Pope, of Fayetteville, visited his brother here Sunday last.

Gordon DuBose, of Columbiana, transacted business in town Thursday.

Prof. Kilpatrick filled the pulpit at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

J. H. Wilder, one of Oxford's prominent business men spent Tuesday in the city.

Mrs. A. M. Ballard, of Talladega, is here at the bed side ofher mother, Mrs. Robertson who is very sick.

Misses Blossom Densler and Purnie Pope after a couple of days stay with Columbianians returned last Monday.

Our appetites are already sharpened to devour the lucious fruit which promises to be so plentiful this year.

Will Pope an employe of The Southern Shoe Co., (factory) of Piedmont, is spending a few days with his brother's family.

Marvin Self after spending a week here recruiting up from a spell of sickness returned Saturday to his work in Mississippi.

Wilsonville has intered the journalistic world and publishes a newspaper on a very small scale known as "The Junebug."

Mrs. Wellington returned Thursday from Montgomery where she went a few days ago to have her eyes tested for glasses.

Miss Sallie Bolin who has been stopping some time with her sister Mrs. Wilby, of Atlanta, returned home Thursday with friends.

Mrs. Robertson's friends will regret to learn that she is no better at this writing. She is very old, and is natural to suppose she cant live much longer.

Mr. Williamson our punctual and accommodating agent is off for a couple of days visiting kinfolks at Coatoba. Mr Stam is serving us in the meantime.

Miss T. Hammond returned Monday from Columbiana accompanied by her brother and his friend John Leeper Jr., who will remain with us one week in recreative sport.

Wilsonville played Childersburg in a match game of ball Tuesday on the latters diamond in which Wilsonville was defeated in a score of 9 to 40. The boys say they were not treated white there and they will "never go there anymore."

Harpersville Echoes.

Who is going to be our next school teacher?

The Baptists will protract their meeting commencing on Wednesday night before the third Sunday in July.

G. W. Thompson and his sister Miss Della attended the quarterly meeting at Easonville last Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. B. F. Giles the highly esteemed pastor of the Baptist church filled his regular appointment here last Saturday and Sunday.

The Misses Wallace returned home today, Monday, from East Lake where they have been attending the Atheneum the last session.

Some of the boys and older ones too content themselves every Sunday by taking roosters around and having them to fight. There is if we mistake not a law to prevent this cruelty and it should be enforced at once.

It is necessary in these changeful times for us all to state our position every now and then so our folks can tell where we are at. For the information of those who are trying to keep up with the trend of public opinion we will state that we are still hanging on to the old democrat party with teeth and toe nails.

We were all indeed sorry to hear of the death of that gentleman, lawyer and democrat Henry Wilson. No man ever lived at Columbiana who had any more friends at Harpersville than he. He was always ready to work for the democratic party, and we don't remember of there ever being a canvass in the county without his being one of the foremost leaders. Last year when the canvass was so warm, and when he was so frail, weak and feeble we heard him make one of the grandest speeches at Vincent that we ever listened to, and the enemy dreaded him and well they might for in him was honor, truth and right. But he is gone and is no more and all Harpersville mourns in his death, and we think that the democrats of Shelby county ought to erect a monument to his grave for the good work that he has done and for the love that they had for him.
"JAKE."

THE DEATH OF THE HON. HENRY WILSON.

Shelby county has lost a noble son. A bright light has gone out in Alabama. A brilliant star has been stricken from the constellation that ornamented the bar of the south.

Henry Wilson is no more. He passed away at Bordon Springs on Wednesday afternoon, June 12th. His remains were intered at Montevallo where he was born and raised. A large number of friends from Columbiana and other points along the road followed his remains to their resting place.

Aside from consideration of personal friendship, as a representative of the commonwealth we mourn his loss. Endowed with a mind singularly apt in grasping facts and arriving at logical conclusions, re-enforced by native eloquence, combined with an aggressive disposition and utter fearlessness in exposing the cause of justice, gave him a place in the front rank of his profession.

"Labor omnia vincit," is the motto of those of us who have to toil on our weary way through life. But a genius can brush away the cobwebs that bedim the way of the plodder, steps boldly to the front, with lance in poise, we read upon the silken folds of its pennant "veni vidi vici." So by common consent we yeild to the conquering hero and give him the place of honor.

Mr. Wilson came upon the stage of action at a time when the south was oppressed by a conquering enemy, whose vindictiveness and malignity was demonstrated to a degree that would make the blood of the most plegmatic boil with rage and stop the heart throbs of the most enlarged philanthropist. This fact gave color to his life. Being of a nervous, high-strung temperament. A south man, "to the manner born," he keenly felt the oppression of his people, and with a supreme contempt for the cowardly crew, for those pusillanimous sons of a down trodden constitution loving country, who were willing to condone the infamies of their enemies and bend the suple hinges of the knee that thrift might follow fawning, he bravely unsheathed his Damascan blade threw himself into the breach like Leonidas at Thermopylæ and won for his state independence. Independence wrested from the grasp of a set of rouguish vampires whose deeds will ever remain a blot upon the pages of southern history.

On the hustings, and at the bar, Mr. Wilson stood the fearless champion of right. A lion in the way of the oppressor, a lamb to his friends. We lament his early demise. Let not the lessons of patriotism bequeathed to us by those who have passed to their reward be neglected.

"One generation passeth away and another generation cometh." Let us be wise and imitate the virtues of constitutional liberty.

To his devoted wife who was ever a ministering angel through all the trying vicissitudes of a chequered life, to his afflicted brothers and sisters, and to his devoted friends we accord our cordial sympathy.

MR. JAMES BAKER.

This model christian and citizen passed away from a bed of suffering on the 15th inst., to the rest that remains for the people of God, aged 76 years.

The writer had known him from boyhood as free from the faults of other men, and long a man of exemplary piety. He took care of himself not expecting anybody else to do it, making his living at home, and independent of trusts and syndicates. His comfortable home and abundant board reminded one in style, and everything else, of old Virginia times long ago. All may imitate him as a christian and citizen. The loss of such a landmark is all ours. E. B. T.

CLOSING EXERCISES SHELBY HIGH SCHOOL.

The third session of the Shelby High school will assuredly be a memorable event in the history of the town, as it closed amid a halo of histrionic success, unequalled in quite a number of years. The conception was indeed a happy one, and the manner in which it was carried out reflects most creditably upon the management of Prof. C. E. Franklin. In fact the entire course of his school entertainments which began on the evening of the 30th and ended on the 31st were very interesting and attractive. The exhibition, which came first, was held in the Congregational church, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the school by its trustees. The program consisted of declamations, dialogues, recitations, and was interspersed with songs that added much to the charmful variety of the exercises. The stage was nicely prepared, the settings being so arranged that the confusion which sometimes happens to those who have to contend with curtains that get tangled, or made of diaphanous material where the actors can be seen through them en silhouette, was obviated. It would make our article too long to enter into a detailed description of the individual efforts of each participant. Suffice it to say the entire lot did well and won the unstinted plaudits of the audience. The occasion was truly an enjoyable one and the manner in which the crowd cheered was a sufficient attestation of their appreciation. At the close of the school exhibition Prof. Franklin announced that a public examination would commence at 8:00 o'clock on the morrow and that all were cordially invited. So on the morning of the 31st the examination was commenced and lasted through the entire day. The board of trustees attended in a body and were very attentive. In justice to the efforts of the pupils under one of the most trying ordeals that ever falls to their lot, we can readily say that we never heard more creditable examinations anywhere than those passed by them on this occasion. It was truly surprising in the face of some of the most unfortunate and humiliating circumstances that a school had ever had to contend with. The manner in which the scholars conducted themselves—so orderly and decorously, the quickness they manifested in responding to the various questions so correctly and intelligently given, the respect they showed their teacher, so candid and cordial, all proved that no one could have anticipated the true degree of advancement they had made unless they had had it demonstrated as upon this occasion.

At 11 o'clock an intermission was had for the space of 15 minutes, after which an announcement was to be made. This announcement was to be a retendering of the position of principal to Prof. Franklin. He was not aware of it, however, but the board had met at an earlier hour of the morning and re-elected unanimously, and had chosen Dr. C. C. Oliver to make known this fact to him publicly. When the intermission was over Dr. Oliver was asked to make an announcement, whereupon he ascended the rostrum and spoke as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—I have been complimented with the proud distinction of offering to Prof. Franklin again the charge of principal of the Shelby High school, in honor of the manner in which he has so worthily and admirably conducted it during the past session." Then addressing Prof. Franklin, he said: "Coming in our midst as a stranger, undertaking a charge so full of responsibility, with the incubus of an absconding associate's utter failure and discomfiture resting upon you, with the career of no predecessor as an example for your emulation, with naught of anything to be said of the school, and all the environments of an educational character seriously affected, you took hold of the helm and have directed its course with remarkable and deserving skill; you have substituted discipline for disorder, stimulated ambitious victory among your pupils, instilled principles of noble and manly deportment and established an esprit du corps which pervades your entire school creating a companionship among them founded upon the highest principles of love and respect. In re-offering the place you have so successfully filled, the board thus pass a tribute to your excellence as an educator, a gentleman and a scholar, and especially to the manner in which you have conducted the same under the most adverse circumstances. The citizens of this community, imbued with a love for learning planted this school in their midst not with the sordid and selfish aim of educating their own children but determined that it should be a cynosure of educational advantage, a magnet of instruction which would attract far and near and surely there is not anywhere a more highly cultured people to foster it with their means and love, than this one. It is therefore flattering, and veritably should be, to any man thus to have won in so short a space of time the approbation of such a community. We learn that you intend to visit your home in Mississippi to spend your vacation. Let me assure you that our best wishes for your welfare will attend you, and if you see fit to accept the position which is so unanimously offered you today, we will welcome you with open hearts and arms."

Prof Franklin was visibly overcome when he came to respond, and in a voice trembling with emotion, thanked the board for their spontaneous proffer, and said he knew of no obstacle to prevent him from accepting. The allusion made by the spokesman of the board to his coming as a stranger and the unenviable part played by the teacher with whom he labored as an assistant, was particularly stressed by him, and he fervently told aow he had striven to act well his part after the transfer of authority had been made. He said he would confer with the board privately before he decided definitely as to what he will do.

The remaining part of the day was spent in further examinations.

At 12 o'clock a picnic was served upon the shady grounds to which all visitors were invited.

Thus ended the exercises by the scholars, but the culmination of these literary attractions followed that evening in the presentation of a charming war drama entitled, The Spy of Gettysburg.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

JOHN W. MOORE,

MAKING NEW HOMES.

Some Interesting Facts and Suggestions on Emigration.

During the last year the demand for labor in the colonies has changed but little for better or for worse. As regards Canada, the nearest, on account of its nearness probably the most attractive of our colonies, the labor market was uncertain and in a degree dislocated. Artisans over and above those already on the spot are not required. Experienced farm hands and those of untiring energy and ready to turn their hands to any kind of work needed are practically certain to obtain employment, but the inexperienced farm laborer can find no place in Canada. It is a general complaint there against the ordinary English laborer that he lacks flexibility and is unable to adapt himself to various trades or even to the same trade under altered or different conditions. Above all things, it is necessary in Canada to forget the lessons of the specialists, and to know a little of many callings. As a general rule, the emigrant intending to succeed must be ready and able to turn his hand to many things. The standing demand for female servants in the country districts was last year better than it had been previously, owing to the fact that the commercial depression in the towns induced many young women to migrate into the country districts. In an appendix of the report Mr. Lawson, M. P., who last year paid a visit to the dominion, denounces the "pupil system" as a fraud and a useless expenditure. There are agencies in this country still offering terms for cadets or pupils, and there are people apparently still foolish enough to accept their offers and pay their fees. Again, the report points out that the system is unnecessary, and most objectionable as opening the door to grave abuses.

It is not approved by the dominion government, and the emigration office desires to warn the public against it. Of the Australian colonies, Western Australia and New Zealand alone are said to have thriven during the last year, though gold mining in Victoria was prosperous, and in Queensland the sugar industry was fairly active. At the Cape the labor market was overstocked and no workmen should go there in the hope of plying their usual occupation, unless they have secured employment beforehand. A special warning is addressed to clerks and railway employes against proceeding to South Africa. The annual education report of the colony calls attention to the dearth of experienced teachers, and domestic female servants are in great request. So far as emigration to foreign countries is concerned, the past year, as the monthly returns attest, has been very uneventful. The situation in the United States, combined with the severe stringency in the immigration regulations, has tended to check the ordinary flow of emigration thither, and the South American republics remain practically closed to European emigrants. Notice must also be taken of the fact that any assistance on the part of our colonial governments to emigrants is withdrawn. No free passages are now given to any colony. Queensland grants assisted passages to domestic servants, and certain classes of useful laborers and western Australia to persons with a small capital ready to employ it in agriculture. The result of all these limitations is to throw intending emigrants practically on their own resources.—London Chronicle.

MR. POST AND THE BURGLAR.

His Wife Was Warned Not to "Squawk" and She Didn't.

"I should just like to see burglars take off any of my valuables, that's all," said Mr. Post in the deep bass tones he reserves for family use.

"But suppose he got the drop on you?" suggested Mrs. Post. She read the newspapers and had caught some of their vernacular.

"I should like to see him—I just would, reiterated her husband in an infuriated voice: he would never live to be hanged."

"But you couldn't shoot him without a revolver."

"Wait until he comes, Mrs. P. I have several methods at my fingers, ends, only don't you wake up and squawk. A woman always hampers a man at such a time; you just keep still and let me settle with the burglar."

"You're quite welcome," said his wife. She believed that Mr. P. would be frightened into a fit by the mere suggestion of a burglar.

As it happened, Mr. Post was awakened a few nights later by a light flashed in his face, and opening his eyes he saw a man standing over him with a black mask on and a revolver in hand.

"Your money or your life," said the burglar in the most burglarious manner.

"Don't shoot," implored Mr. Post; "you might kill my wife Maria," he called in an agonized whisper, but Mrs. Post had been told too often not to "squawk" and she didn't.

"Shut up," commanded the burglar, "and hand out the gold watch and the money under your pillow. Stop kicking your wife, unless you want me to shoot her. Shell out now, like a man."

And Mr. Post did shell out. He gave up his watch and the roll of bills he had neglected to bank, and then had the satisfaction of hearing the burglar say:

"I've half a mind to shoot you, anyhow."

"For heaven's sake, don't shoot!" gasped the frightened man.

Then the burglar laughed uproariously, pulled off his mask and handed back the watch and money to Mr. Post.

"M-a-r-i-a!"

"Yes, it's me," answered Mrs. Post, regardless of grammar. "I just wanted to show you, Mr. Post, that you aren't half as brave as you think you are, and I succeeded, too, didn't I?

"Maria," asked Mr. Post humbly, "won't you please point the pistol the other way—It might go off."

"It can't," answered his wife; "it isn't even loaded; it's your old nickel bootjack, Mr. Post.

In consideration of his narrow escape, Mr. Post forgave his wife her burglarious escapade.—Detroit Free Press.

About that time we got Dr. McElree's book on the treatment of female diseases and decided to try the Wine of Cardui Treatment. After using nine bottles, I am well."

SOUTHERN GLEANINGS.

Disappointed in Love.

"Good-by, Charlie; I'm going down here to shoot myself," were the words spoken at Bristol, Tenn., to Charlie Connor by Ed Patton, bookkeeper for a well-known wholesale house in Savannah, Ga. He walked deliberately to a hardware store and asked to look at a pistol. The clerk showed him one, and he called for a cartridge. Before anyone was aware of the fact, he had placed the weapon to his heart and fired. The ball entered above the heart, or death would have been instantaneous; as it is, recovery is doubtful. Young Patton went to Bristol to see a young lady. It is reported that the rash act is due to disappointment in love. He had been drinking heavily all day. Patton is 22 years old, and belongs to a leading family in Columbia, S. C.

Melon Growing in Texas.

The growing of watermelons is getting to be a big thing in Texas. Within a radius of 3 miles of Henrietta, there is 3,000 acres of melons which the Clay County Melon Growers' association estimate will produce not less than seventy-five or a hundred trainloads, or from 600 to 1,000 carloads. The freight on this output will average about $90 per car, or a total of about $75,000. The railroads have encouraged the production of melons by issuing a low tariff and insuring rapid transit to markets. These melons will be shipped to Denver, Kansas City, Chicago and St. Louis.

Northerners Protect Birds.

Northern people are very clever to the south in some ways. For instance, they carefully protect the robin, bobolink and some other migratory birds, which breed north, spend the winter south, and are recognized here as game birds and shot by the thousand. It was not very long since a New York preacher had to pay a big fine for shooting a few robbins, and the like fate has recently overtaken a man in Chicago, who trapped bobolinks and offered them for sale. The bobolink is the reed bird and delightful eating he is, too.

Says She was Poisoned by a Corn Cure.

A voluminous document filed with the clerk of the court at Atlanta, Ga., tells the story of the most unique suit ever begun there. The complainant is Mrs. Patta Dola Jeter, who sues the Jacobs pharmacy. She claims that not long since a pain in one of her feet caused her to send to the pharmacy for a certain kind of corn cure. They sent a remedy which she claims poisoned her feet, made her suffer from anxiety and made life a burden to her. She wants $1,000.

Didn't Care for Politics.

S. R. Cummins, a prominent school teacher of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and Miss Rebecca Dawson, who resided in Northport, just across the Warrior river from Tuscaloosa, eloped and were married at Birmingham. The girl's father, who is a strong populite, opposed the marriage bitterly because Cummins is a democrat, but the young folks cared nothing for politics. After they were married the old man wired his forgiveness.

Surprised the General.

Gen. I. W. Avery, the representative of the Atlanta exposition in South America, now in Caraccas, says that the number of languages he hears spoken by the people there makes him feel ashamed of his American ignorance. In the common schools the children are all required to master English, French and German, besides their native Spanish.

He Murdered His Daughter.

Wm. Jones, colored, will be hanged in Duval county, Fla., July 10, for the murder of his daughter. It will be remembered that the body was found in bushes with the throat cut and over sixty knife wounds in the body. The murder remained a mystery for several days, but finally Jones was arrested, and the truth was revealed.

At McCormick, a small station in South Carolina, Mrs. T. D. Creighton, wife of the most prominent citizen of the place, committed suicide the other day. She sent the servants away on errands, and then taking a gun, placed the muzzle against her head and pulled the trigger with her foot. Her action is attributed to jealousy.

THE GUNMAKER OF ILION

Jefferson M. Clough Refuses a Tempting Offer from the Chinese Government.

His Health Was Too Poor to Permit Attention to Business—A Great Sufferer for Many Years, But Has Now Recovered.

(From the Springfield, Mass., Union.)

There isn't a gun manufacturer in the United States who does not know Jefferson M. Clough, and why? Because he has been intimately associated all his life with the development of the two best American rifles, the Remington and Winchester. For years he was superintendent of the E. Remington & Sons' great factory at Ilion, N. Y. After leaving there he refused a tempting offer of the Chinese Government to go to China to superintend their government factories—and accepted instead the superintendency of the Winchester-Arms Co., at New Haven, at a salary of $7,500 a year.

It was after this long term of active labor as a business man that he found himself incapacitated for further service by the embargo which rheumatism had laid upon him and resigned his position more than two years ago, and returned to Belchertown, Mass., where he now lives and owns the Phelps farm, a retired spot where he has five hundred acres of land.

Being a man of means he did not spare the cost and was treated by leading physicians and by baths at celebrated springs without receiving any benefit worth notice. During the summer of 1893 and the winter of 1894 Mr. Clough was confined to his house in Belchertown, being unable to rise from his bed without assistance, and suffering continually with acute pains and with no taste or desire for food, nor was he able to obtain sufficient sleep.

Early in the year 1894 Mr. Clough heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. He began taking these pills about the first of March 1894 and continued to do so until the first part of September following. The first effect noticed was a better appetite and he began to note more ability to help himself off the bed and to be better generally. Last August (1894) he was able to go alone to his summer residence and farm of 163 acres on Grenadier Island, among the Thousand Islands, in the river St. Lawrence, where from the highest land of his farm he commands a view for 13 miles down the river, and 60 of the Thousand Islands can be seen.

Instead of being confined to his bed Mr. Clough is now and has been for some time able to be about the farm to direct the men employed there and he is thankful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for him.

These pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and are sold only in boxes bearing the firm's trade mark and wrapper, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and are never sold in bulk. They may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

Foul breath is a discourager of affection. It is always an indication of poor health—bad digestion. To bad digestion is traceable almost all human ills. It is the starting point of many very serious maladies. Upon the healthy action of the digestive organs, the blood depends for its richness and purity. If digestion stops, poisonous matter accumulates and is forced into the blood—there is no place else for it to go.

The bad breath is a danger signal. Look out for it! If you have it, or any other symptom of indigestion, take a bottle or two of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It will straighten out the trouble, make your blood pure and healthy and full of nutriment for the tissues.

THE KEYSTONE LAID

Thousands Witness the Ceremonies Attending.

FORMAL OPENING OF CANAL AT KIEL.

The Emperor Christens It in Memory of William the Great, and Gave it the Name of Kaiser Wilhelm Canal. Another Great Event.

KIEL, June 22.—Everybody was stirring at an early hour yesterday securing places of vantage to see the ceremony of laying the keystone of the canal at Holtenau. Dozens of steamers went from Kiel to places near the lock among which was the press steamer, which was allotted a good place. Invited guests and those who had secured tickets for the tribunes arrived between 10 and 10:30.

Thousands flocked to Holtenau by land and water. Never did the harbor of Kiel present so animated an appearance. The warm sun from early morning shone upon hundreds of gaily decorated vessels and majestic looking warships at anchor. The Kaiser went to Holtenau early, on board a steam launch.

The entire highway from Kiel to the mouth of the canal had been beflagged. The country here is remarkably beautiful. Three trees line the road for the greater part of the distance and here and there groves of beech wood affording shade are passed. At places where the country is open, glimpses of the bay and distant sea are afforded. Innumerable triumphal arches, bearing mottoes and portriats of the emperer had been erected and the villages and hamlets of the short route showed a profusion of flag and bunting.

Holtenau, which gives its name to the new lock, is picturesquely situated four or five miles from Kiel, and nearly a mile from the mouth of the canal, where the foundation stone was laid. The arrangements at the scene of the ceremony were excellently devised.

The grand stand of vast proportions had been erected for guests and ticket holders. At 11 o'clock shouts of "der kaiser kommet" arose. The emperor, whose arrival was the signal of deafening cheer, in admirals' uniform and walked to his place with imperial bearing. He acknowledged the enthusiastic greetings smilingly. His Majesty, having taken a standing position before the dias, Chancellor Hohenlohe asked the imperial assent to commence the proceedings and then read a document relating to the ceremony, after which the kaiser approached the stone, and receiving a mallet from the Bavarian plenipotentiary in the bundesrath, tapped the stone thrice. The stone also received blows from the royal princes present, from the members of the bundesrath, ministers of state and a score of other state officials. The stone being laid, the kaiser returned to his place at the dais.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies at the keystone, the emperor went on board the Hohenzollern, where he took luncheon. Salutes of his majesty were fired by several of the warships in the bay.

It has been arranged in the course of the preparations for the celebration that the assembled warships should steam past the Hohenzollern in review, but for some unexplained reason it was decided later that the emperor,s yacht should merely steam through the lines of the German and foreign fleets lying at anchor. This was accordingly done, all the ships saluting the Hohenzollern as the passed. All of the ships were literally covered with flags and in the bright sunshine made a magnificent spectacle.

Miss Herbert, daughter of the United States secretary of navy, with a party of friends was on board the American cruiser New York.

The emperor in laying the keystone of the canal said: "In memory of Emperor William the Great, I christen this canal the Kaiser Wilhelm canal."

His Majesty then tapped the stone thrice, continuing: "I, in the name of God, in honor of the Emperor William I, for the weel of Germany and the welfare of nations."

The weather was brilliant and the spectators were numbered by thousands.

BRIEF NEWS BY WIRE.

Samuel Spencer, president of the Southern, announces that his company will build a handsome and commadious union station in Atlanta, Ga.

Governor Atkinson, of Georgia, improves steadily and while he is by no means out of danger his recovery can almost be predicted with certainty.

The Southern Railway has bought the Atlanta and Florida railroad. The line is 204 miles longs and extends from Atlanta, Ga., to Fort Valley, Ga., in the heart of the peach section, at the price paid, about $27,000.

Mr. James F. O'Brien, M. P., for Mayor, has been chosen as the anti-Parnellite candidate to contest Cork town in the election to fill the vacancy in the house of commons caused by Mr. William O'Brien's being declared a bankrupt.

The bondholders of the Macon and Northern met at Baltimore Friday and rejected the proposal that they join in the reorganization of the Georgia Central railroad, of which system it was formerly a part. The reason for the rejection was that the terms offered were deemed unnecesary.

A disbatch from Kiel says that on Friday morning the boiler of a launch belonging to the American warship San Francisco exploded. Two men were seriously, and two slightly injured.

Dynamite Explosion in West Virginia.

BALTIMORE, June 22.—A bulletin receives here late last night says: Lightning struck a dynamite magazine near Kingwood, W. Va., at 9 o'clock last night. Several men were killed and a great deal of property destroyed.

BOYTON ON OHIO POLITICS.

Campbell Would Make a Strong Leader If He Would Run for Governor.

WASHINGTON, June 22. — Henry V. Boyton, of Ohio, the distinguished correspondent, was at his office yesterday afternoon, just returned from a short outing. He is a zealous, highly conscientious and very independent-minded republican. To a request for a brief statement of the Ohio situation as it appeared to him, without prejudice, he replied:

The republicans would carry Ohio under ordinary conditions. They will probably do so the present year. The Democrats would like to nominate Governor Campbell if he could be induced to accept. And he would be a very strong candidate—the strongest they could have. He would have the support of his own party and of some republicans. My old regiment was raised in his town. A good many republicans there admire Campbell, who is an able and excellent man of popular manners. But the ex-governor is a poor man, struggling to recover from the effects of his business failure, which did not involve his integrity, and he would hardly re-enter politics until he had made some money. Still, if he should decide to yield to the pressure, he would be a powerful leader of the Buckeye Democracy. The republicans, as I said, ought to win, but if the Geo. W. Cox crowd, who control Hamilton county politics, try to boss the campaign, the indignant republicans will rebuke the attempt. If these fellows, for whom Foraker is sometimes held responsible, have too much hand in matters, the party will suffer the loss of thousands of votes. The majority would be cut down largely if not wiped out entirely.

As for the leadership of the democrats, young Allen W. Thurman would never have been heard of but for his illustrious father, Allen G. Thurman, whom all revere, to whatever party they belong. Young Thurman's attempts at leadership give offense to many democrats. I thought the silver men had the ascendancy there a little while back, but lately Brice seems to have given them a set-back.

CAPTAIN HOWGATE IS GUILTY.

Jury Returns a Verdict Recommending Clemency—New Trial Asked.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—The jury in the Howgate case brought in a verdict at 1:35 p. m. yesterday of guilty on each indictment. One indictment charged Howgate with forgery and the other with falsification of his official accounts.

The attorneys for the defense at once moved for a new trial. No action was taken by the court.

The penalty for the offences of which Captain Howgate is convicted is confinement in the penitentiary from one to ten years in each case, so the punishment in his case may be confinement from two to twenty years.

Accompanying the verdict was a recommendation to the court for clemency. It is hardly believed that Judge McComas will grant a new trial, but the attempt will be made to take the case to a higher court on appeal.

Ex-Chief Drummond, of the treasury secret service, who arrested Captain Howgate in New York, has filed a claim in the department of justice for $1,000 reward offered in 1884 for the arrest of Howgate. The law officers are said to dispute the claim alleging that it is outlawed.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Although he has been given up as lost for over a year, the first authentic information of Mr. Lenz, the American bicyclist, who undertook to make a tour of the eastern hemisphere on his wheel, was received at the state department yesterday. It came in the form of a cable message from Mr. Terrell, the United States minister to Turkey, bearing date of Pera, a suburb of Constantinople, June 20. The text of the message is as follows:

"British consul at Erzeroum informs me that Lenz, the cyclist, was murdered near Dahar by five Kurds, whose names he gives. Arrest and punishment demanded by me at the Sublime Porte and the co-operation of British consul requested."

ACTIVITY IN TRADE

What Bradstreet's and Dun's Agencies Say of It.

THE CROP PROSPECTS ARE FAVORABLE

From All Parts of the Country Comes Evidences of a Rising Tide in Trade and Business Industry—Iron and Steel Advances.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Bradstreet's today says:

The feature of the business week is the customary check to activity in trading in staple articles of merchandise, due to the near approach of midsummer, with the accompanying stock-taking in some lines; in addition to this, perhaps, the only other not pointing to improvement is the reaction of prices of cotton, coal, wheat, flour, wheat, corn, oats pork and lard from previous relatively high levels. In almost all other directions reports on the business situation and outlook are exceptionally favorable.

The New York stock market keeps its strength in face of high exchange rates and the absence of foreign interest.

Favorable crop prospects, especially in southwestern territory and the rise in iron and steel prices, create a bullish professional temper, under which realizing sales have little effect. The return of one of the bond syndicate leaders from Europe is regardad as a bullish influence.

Notwithstanding the reaction in the price of cotton, cotton goods in some instances are higher, with the market quiet and likely to remain so until after July 4th. Woolen goods are quiet with mills fairly well employed where labor troubles have not interfered.

Trading in wool has been heavy and while sales at the west have been made at low prices quotations have since advanced 1-2 a cent per pound, thus apparently placing wool in line with leather, wheat, corn, cotton, iron and steel. Among the staples which have enjoyed a revival the demand for iron and steel continues, perhaps the most striking feature. In a few instances certain grades of iron have enjoyed the unusual distinction of having quotations advanced twice within the week. Since the rise in prices began pig iron advanced 25 and steel billets about 30 per cent. in prices, and reserve plants is being pressed into service.

In the southern states business continues at about mid-summer proportions, with improvement in dry goods and groceries at Chattanooga and Atlanta, a better feeling in trade circles at Birmingham, and only a moderate expansion of business at Galveston.

BUSINESS IMPROVEMENT.

Dun & Co. Reports a Steady Increase in Volume and in Activity.

NEW YORK, June 22.—R. G. Dun & Co's. report says:

Failures for the second week of June show liabilities of only $2,092,385, of which $702,357 were manufacturing and $1,2:9,625 were trading concerns, against $2,917,335 in all for the same week last year, of which $388,137 were manufacturing and $2,220,766 were trading concerns. Additions for the first week of June raise the aggregate for two weeks including the Cordage concern to $14,321,811, of which $10,517,325 were manufacturing and $3,684,116 were trading concerns. Failures for the week have been 258 in the United States against 214 last year, and 31 in Canada against 25 last year

He who sees a set-back in business at this time must be gazing through a telescope pointed by mistake at some other country. From all parts of the United States the best advices obtainable tell of a rising tide of trade and industry, which threatens here and there to mount too far and too fast. The volume of all business is by no means equal to that of 1892 as yet, though in some important branches larger than in that of any other year.

NEW MILLS FOR CAROLINA.

The Building Up of the Cotton Industry Goes On.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 22.—The building of cotton mills still continues. Yesterday at Greenville, S. C., ground was broken for the F. W. Poe cotton mills, which are to have a capital stock of $250,000 and will run 10,000 spindles. This is the second of the five new mills which are to be built in Greenville this year. The advertisement for bids for the building of the third mill will be published within the next few days.

The Camden cotton mills filed with the secretary of state yesterday a notice that $125,000 worth of bonds had been issued for the building of the mill at Camden, S. C. These two new mills, with the Saxe-Gota mill at Lexington, S. C., which is nearing completion, show that the spirit of enterprise is not lacking in South Carolina.

THE A. P. A. IN CANADA.

A Member of the Legislature Asked to Put Up or Shut Up.

WINNEPEG, Man., June 22.—Mr. Martin, in the legislature, again rose to a question of privilege and stated that he had received a telegram from a president of the A. P. A., demanding that he give his authority for his statement regarding immorality of public school, in the United States or else apologize for his statements. He proceeded to read from the published reports the extracts which he said were unfit to be quoted. A large proportion of the inmates of houses of prostitution mentioned in Boston were stated to have ascribed their downfall to the public schools. Indecent publications were stated to be widely circulated among the pupils and this it was alleged was not confined to Boston.

The Illinoise Steel Company Expresses Its Belief in Better Times.

CHICAGO, June 22.—The Illinoise Steel company gave notice yesterday that on July 1 it will raise the wages of all its employes 10 per cent. This raise will affect 7,000 men at Chicago, Joilet and Milwaukee. Some time ago the company appointed a committee of workingmen to go east and investigate the wages being paid steel workers. The committee returned a few days ago and reported that the company was giving as high wages as any steel works in the east.

The Steelmen Meet.

NEW YORK, June 22.—A number of steelmen were in consultation at the Holland house yesterday. Among them were President J. W. Gates, of the Illinois Steel company, President Walter Scranton, of the Lackewanna Iron and Steel company, President C. A. Leischman, of the Carnegie Steel company, and Vice-President Paul Morton, of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. It was said that the meeting was not to discuss prices, but was merely to consider the steel situation and plans for its improvement.

BOTH MAY COME SOUTH.

Democratic and Republican National Conventions May be Held in the South.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Possibly one or both of the great national conventions will be held in the south the next time.

Democrats and republicans are taking a lively interest in the suggestion that the south will be especially desirable next year as the place for holding conventions. The south having by the results of the elections last year placed itself in the list of politically doubtful sections of the country many republicans are considering the effect of having the next convention held there. Senator-elect Carter, chairman of the national republican executive committee, when in this city a few days ago, said he thought the question of having the rallying of his party in the south was one that is worthy of serious consideration.

Southern democrats and republicans claim that Atlanta, New Orleans, Nashville or Lexington would be able to care for the physical comforts of the delegates and that no argument against having the convention in their midst could be made on that score.

AGREED AT LAST.

Iron and Sheet Steel Manufacturers and Amalgamated Association Agree.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 22.—The conference between the executive committee of the association of iron and steel sheet manufacturers and the committee of the amalgamated association reached terms of agreement late last night after two days session. The workers conceded a change of base which is now separate from the general scale based on bar iron. Another concession secured by the manufacturers is said to be an increased output, against which the workers made a strong stand. The wages will be about the same as last year with an advancement in proportion to advancements in the selling price of sheets.

Not So Great After All.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 22.—A sensational story was recently sent out from San Francisco by the Chicago Associated Press stating that the Colonel A. R. Cochran, of San Diego, Cal., was to come into possession of an immense fortune through a North Carolina land grant. The facts are simply these: Colonel Cochran instituted suit in the United States court at Asheville in 1883 for lands in Matag and Mitchell counties, based on some supposed land grant. At the November '94. term of court General T. F. Davidson, counsel for Cockran, stated that his client had been unable to file the bonds required to prosecute the case and it was accordingly dismissed.

Will Plead Guilty.

MOBILE, June 22.—In the criminal court yesterday, the case was set apart for the trial of George A. Pearce, ex-secretary of the Planters and Merchants Insurance company, who absconded several years ago with $84,000. Pearce's attorney, Congressman John Allen, asked the solicitor to take the case out of the call and next week his client would come into court and plead guilty to the charges against him. Pearce is now in Texas closing up his business preparatory to serving a term in the penitentiary.

Dispensary Constables Sentenced.

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 22.—In the United States court yesterday Judge Simonton sentenced three dispensary constables to jail for contempt of court. They are charged with seizing liquor sent into the state for private use against the injunction granted by the court. The constables are sentenced to two months imprisonment and will be confined thereafter until the seized liquor is returned to the owners.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Cotton rose 3 to 6 points and closed very steady with sales of 123,900 bales. New Orleans advrnced 9 to 10 points, showing mere strength yesterday as it showed more weakness Thursday. Liverpool declined 1-32 with spot sales of 10,000 bales. Futures dropped 2 to 3 points, but rallied and closed firm at a loss of only 1 point for the day.

Still Advanced.

CAICAGO, June 22.—The Illinois Steel company yesterday announced an advance of $2 a ton in the price of steel rails, the former price being $23. The increase is attributed to the increased cost of ore, coke and labor. It is said by the company that a further appreciation in values will be justified before the close of the year.

Coal and Coke Company Assigns.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 22.—A general bill of assignment was filed here yesterday afternoon by the Fox Coal and Coke company, of Graysville, Tenn. C. H. Peabody is named as assignee Assets $63,911; liabilities, which are not given, consist largely of liens on mining property, etc. No preferences are shown.

Inspecting Canal.

CASTILLO, Nicarauga, June 22.—The United States engineer commission which is inspecting the route of the Nicaragua canal, has arrived here. The commission is here for the purpose of commencing the inspection of that part of the canal route known as the "divide." There is where the heavy rock cutting is located.

May Be a Strike.

GLOUCESTER, O., June 22.—All of the mines in the Santa Creek Valley were idle yesterday on account of the discharge of two men by the Phœnix Coal company for loading dirty coal. The miners went out on strike and held a mass meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the matter.

Duke of Cambridge Will Retire.

LONDON, June 22.—In the house of commons yesterday Mr. H. Campbell Bannerman, secretary of state for war, announced that the Duke of Cambridge would retire from the command of the army.

CLOSES IN HARMONY

The National League of Republican Clubs Convention.

NEITHER SILVER NOR GOLD ENDORSED

Nor is Protection, Free Trade or a Presidential Candidate Endorsed — No Presidential Possibilities On Hand Until the Last Hour.

CLEVELAND, O., June 22.—There was nothing exciting about the last hour in the fight of the annual convention of the national league of republican clubs. The resolutions which have been public property for some time were adopted without preface by their introducer or parley on the part of those for whose consideration they were introduced. No roll call was had on their adoption and a lusty chorus of yeas against one or two nays showed that it was almost the unanimous sense of the convention that it had no power to proclaim its preference for gold or silver, for protection or free trade, or for any presidential candidate who is pushing his claims for recognition before the nominating convention of the party to be held in 1896. The most conservative party men who came here think the innovation is a wise one. The silver men are satisfied and all others seem to be.

There was no discordant voice in the big gathering which dissolved in the afternoon. Many sacrifices were made for the sake of harmony and it appeared to be the wish of the body that it should go on record before the world as united on all points at issue whatever differences might exist beneath the surface.

None of the presidential candidates came to the convention. Mr. McKinley arrived last night after everything was over. He was met at the depot by the leading republican clubs of the city and enthusiastically welcomed. Most of the delegates had returned to their homes, but those who remained were introduced, shook hands and chatted a while with the famous Ohioan, who held a reception in the corridors of the Hollenden hotel. Chauncey M. Depew was expected up to the last moment, but he excused himself on the ground of other engagements. Thomas B. Reed was invited but declined and Senator Allison did the same. Maine was one of the three states not officially represented at the convention and the enemies of Mr. Reed are pointing to this fact with much glee. The other two states were New Hampshire and and North Carolina, which were, however, unofficially represented. With General McAlpin as president and H. J. Dowling, of Minnesoto, as secretary, the delegates feel that they have elected officers with a view to the best results in the work required next year. No treasurer was chosen. His selection will be left to the executive committee.

An excursion on the lake in the afternoon ended the festivities provided by the local committee for the delegates. Today the newspaper men will be entertained on the water.

SUICIDE AND MURDER.

Harry Krooz Shoots His Friend and Then Himself—The Case a Mystery.

PHILMONT, N. Y., June 22.—A horrible case of murder and suicide occurred here yesterday at which Harry Krooz and George Jacobi are the victims. Krooz is the agent of the Harlem road here, having filled that position for the past twenty-three years. Jacobi is his father-in-law and acts as the assistant agent. Krooz was about forty-three years of age and Jacobi sixty-two. Krooz killed Jacobi by shooting him twice in the back of the head and then killing himself by firing a bullet into his own head. The motive for the crime is a mystery, as both were on the friendliest terms. The shooting occurred only a few moments before a passenger train was due. The only person in the station besides the dead man was a woman waiting for the train when she heard the shots and gave the alarm. Before anyone else reached the station, the passenger train had arrived and the conductor and trainmen found the dead men, both having died instantly.

Krooz shot Jacobi in the back of the head as the latter was sitting at the desk writing. Krooz had been discharged and the relief agent was on the train that arrived shortly after the tragedy occurred to relieve him. There is said to be no shortage in his accounts but that he had become careless in doing his business. Krooz leaves a wife and four children, one being a married daughter. The other children are aged 18, 12 and 8 respectively.

MARRIED AND LEFT.

Has The Young Bride Been Duped by a Rascal?

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 22.—Last night at Morristown, Tenn., Miss Hattie Griffin, a very popular young lady of this city, was married to Clarence H. Howard, late of St. Louis and a native of Kirkwood, Ga. It was a runaway marriage and Miss Griffin intended it as a surprise to her many friends. Mr. and Mrs. Howard returned to the city yesterday morning and the young bride was fairly prostrated when picking up a morning paper she found that the police were advised to keep a sharp lookout for Howard, who had, it was adjudged, been guilty of several sharp tricks at St. Louis. Howard left on the first train saying that he was going to Baltimore, where he had been offered a lucrative position. Mrs. Howard later in the day stated in an interview that the charges of theft, etc., had been inspired by his enemies, and that she did not believe a word of them.

Race Postponed.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 22.—The boat race between Cornell, Columbia and University of Pennsylvania has been postponed until Monday evening, because of an accident to Pennsylvania's boat.

REPRESENTATIVE BERRY.

He is Looming Up as a Possibility for the Kentucky Governorship.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Representative Berry, of Kentucky, is looming up as a possibility in the fight over the democratic nomination for the governorship of the blue grass state. Neither Harding nor Clay has developed such strength that his nomination can be looked upon as a sure thing, and there are indications that a dark horse may be brought into the race. Representative Berry is known to have entertained aspirations for the office of governor on a former occasion. Of all the candidates he is looked upon as most likely to receive the support of Secretary Carlisle and the administration forces.

While in congress Mr. Berry stengthened his political standing by securing, it is said, more federal appointments for his constituents than any other congressman. Mr. Berry is regarded as an excellent party organizer and his family influence is hardly second to that of any other Kentuckian. He is a good speaker with a strong physique that would stand him well in an aggressive campaign. If Clay and Harding demolish each other Mr. Berry is looked upon as having an exceedingly good chance for success.

GEN. SMITH SERIOUSLY ILL.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—About three weeks ago General Green Clay Smith was compelled to take to his bed on account of a carbuncle on the back of his neck, at the base of the brain. It was not thought dangerous at first, but a few days ago Dr. John W. Bayne performed an operation, which relieved him for the time being. Since then, however, he has been steadily growing weaker, and yesterday he was very low, though a very slight change for the better was noticed last night. He is only conscious at intervals, the danger being that his vitality may give out, though he is, physically speaking, a well constituted man. Drs. J. W Bayne and H. R. Street are attending him.

The general is sixty-six years of age, and commanded a brigade of Kentucky troops in the Union army. He represented Kentucky in congress from 1863 to 1866, was governor of Montana in 1866-69, presidential candidate of the prohibition party in 1876 and is now the pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist church in this city. He was an honorary pall bearer at the funeral of Abraham Lincoln.

SILVER DEMOCRATS' PLAN.

An Effort to Change the Two-Thirds Rule in the Convention.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Representative Jo. Abbott of Texas said to a reporter today that he thought there will be an effort made in the next democratic national convention to change the rule which provides that a two-thirds majority shall be necessary for the choice of nominees for the presidency and vice presidency. This rule might be changed by the convention by a majority vote, and although it has never been deviated from since the organization of the democratic party, it is thought the silver delegates will seek to change it, as the only hope they will have to nominate a silver man. It is generally conceded that the silver people will not be able to muster a two-thirds vote for a silver candidate, though it is thought likely they might get a majority for such a candidate. But there is a long-seated opposition among party men against changing a rule that has grown so venerable as that requiring a two-thirds majority for the election of a candidate for the presidency.

HAS WATERBURY RESIGNED?

A Cordage Report to That Effect in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, June 22.—Just before the close of the stock exchange yesterday afternoon it was reported that Mr. John I. Waterbury, president of the Manhattan Trust company, had resigned from the United States Cordage company reorganization committee.

The reasons given for the action were his alleged ownership of a large number of the bonds of the company, the fact that he is also a receiver of the company and an alleged disagreement among the committeemen.

Mr. Waterbury was not at his office, but close business friends of his expressed great surprise at the report and said that they did not believe there was a particle of foundation for the rumor, and that, on the contrary, the prospects of the committee's success were brighter than ever before.

THE BATTLE OF ALBACROCIA.

Spanish Account of the Flight of Troops From the Cubans.

MADRID, Spain, June 22.—The "Impartial" publishes a dispatch from Havana that in the fighting at Albacrocia only a small detachment of Spanish troops was engaged, while 600 rebels, mounted and on foot, poured a hot fire into the ranks. The Spanish troops were ordered to escape and the ammunition was distributed, the stores, etc., destroyed, and the troops dashed out, taking the rebels by surprise and got out of danger.

Kentucky Gubernatorial Race.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 22. — The gubernatorial race, which for several months has been red hot, was intensified last night when Congressman Berry, of Newport, declined to become Clay's candidate for permanent chairman of the convention and announced that he was a candidate for governor himself. The convention will be held at Louisville next Tuesday.

Cholera in Russia.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Gen. Karel reports to the state department from St. Petersburg that in the government of Valyn, Russia, eighty-one cases of cholera occurred, resulting in thirty-five deaths from April 28 to May 11, 1895. In the government of Podolsk the cholera has entirely disappeared.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Current News For the Week Throughout the State.

PREACH ON "SOCIETY GAMBLING."

Birmingham Pastors Leading a Crusade On Card Playing in the Homes. Other Happenings of Interest Through the State.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 17.—The pastors of several of the Birmingham churches last night preached on the subject of "society gambling." The sermons were all the instance of Dr. Morris, of the First Methodist church, who began what may be termed a crusade against card clubs in his sermon a week ago. In last night's sermon he read from the city code and the state code acts prohibiting card playing at hotels where liquor is sold. The law, he charged, had been violated by a fashionable card club within the past few nights. The city administration and county officials were charged with neglect of duty in permitting such practices. Other preachers took the same ground. The society people of Birmingham have a number of card clubs which meet weekly and play, prizes being given the best players at each. It was against these the sermons were directed.

BIRMINGHAM IRISHMEN

On the Proposed Convention Looking to Ireland's Independence.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 20. — The Emmett club at a meeting yesterday took action in reference to the convention of Irishmen and Irish-Americans to be held somewhere in the United States looking forward to the independence of Ireland. The following resolutions were passed:

"Whereas, A convention of Irish-American citizens is proposed for the purpose of adopting means, other than parliamentary agitation, for the independence of Ireland; and,

"Whereas, The political parties of Great Britain have betrayed the confidence reposed in them and failed to keep their many promises to give autonomy to Ireland,

"Resolved, That we indorse the proposed convention to be held in one of the largest cities in the United States and pledge ourselves to do all in our power, financially and otherwise, to further the object of said convention."

Another meeting will be held in the future, as soon as more can be learned of the proposed convention, when delegates will be selected and instructed.

ORGANIZED FOR M'KINLEY.

The Alabama Delegation to be Captured For the Ohioan.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 17.—Representatives of nine republican clubs in the ninth congressional district Saturday organized a district league by electing Dr. J. W. Hughes, of Birmingham, president, and Jessie Shaw, of Birmingham, secretary. William Vaughan, T. H. Aldrich, Henry Hall and R. Lowe, the two last named being colored, were elected delegates to the National League of Republican clubs which meets in Cleveland next week. The McKinly leaders are the promoters of these new leagues in Alabama, and the plan is regarded as the beginning of an effort to organize the McKinleyites and capture the Alabama delegation to the next national republican convention for the Ohioan.

BOTH ARE DROWNED.

Mr. Lewis Cox and Miss Corelia Torrence Find Watery Graves.

OPELIKA, Ala., June 19.—One of the most terrible accidents that has ever occurred in this county occurred yesterday morning at Perry's mill pond, just south of Auburn. Mr. Lewis Cox, a drummer from Tuskegee, Ala., and Miss Corlia Torrence, aged 19 years, the belle of her neighborhood and a remarkable beautiful girl, were out boat riding on the pond when unexpectedly the boat overturned, drowning them both. The children playing near the scene of the accident heard their screams for help, but were powerless to aid them. The pond is very deep at the point where the accident occurred and their bodies have not been recovered.

FIRE AT BIRMINGHAM.

Four Young Married Couples Lose all Their Personal Effects.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 19.—Fire at 1 o'clock yesterday morning destroyed the large and handsome residence of Mrs. Horace Ware, in North Highlands, causing a loss of $11,000. Four young married couples, who were boarding with Mrs. Ware, lost all their effects. The losses are about half covered by insurance. The fire is thought to be of incendiary origin. The inhabitants narrowly escaped from the burning building.

LYNCHING MOST PROBABLE.

Alabama Tough Citizen and Murderer May Be Executed By a Mob.

CENTRE, Ala., June 20.—Horace Tierce, a noted tough citizen of this section who had just been released from the chain gang, while drunk went to the residence of James Powers, a prominent citizen of Rock Run, and became very noisy. Powers tried to eject him when Tierce drew a pistol and shot Powers in the breast, killing him instantly. Tierce was arrested and placed in the Centre jail. Great excitement prevails and lynching is strongly talked of.

Rumbaugh, third artillery, has been detailed to attend the encampments of the Alabama state troops at and near Mobile, from the 20th to the 30th of this month and from the 3d to the 13th of July. THE * CHRONICLE.

COLUMBIANA, JUNE 27, 1895.

THE annual encampment of Alabama state troops is being held at Mobile this week.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND is at his summer home, Gray Gables, Buzzards Bay. He is in the best of health, reports to the contrary being erroneous.

THE sea serpent is due at some famous watering place on the coast soon and we have no doubt but that he will be on time, just as big and as natural as life.

THE English cabinet has resigned, which will cause a new election to be held in England. Lord Roseberry's term as premier of England was certainly a short one. Who will be the next?

THE late president of the republican leagues and his successor part their hair in the middle. This custom of the presidents is typical, to an extent, of the league's capacity for straddling the fence.

THE government is kept busy watching the Atlantic and Gulf coasts to prevent filibustering expeditions leaving for Cuba. Several United States cruisers are now patroling the Florida coast on the lookout for filibustering vessels bound for Cuba.

AMONG the qualifications of Mr. Olney to be secretary of state it has been mentioned that he is an enthusiastic tennis player and a first-class fisherman. The latter qualification undoubtedly had due weight with President Cleveland in making the appointment.

IT NOW looks as if the Cuban insurgents would be successful. They have conquered the Spanish troops at almost every engagement, and many desertions are taking place from the Spanish army to the insurgent troops. We believe Cuban independance is in the near future.

A WILD man has been discovered on Lookout Mountain, near Chattanooga. He has long shaggy hair, claws for hands, and in fact fills the bill of the proverbial wild man that has to be discovered in different parts of the country every once in awhile, just to keep up excitement.

THE great event of the country this week is the meeting of the Epworth Leagues of America at Chattanooga, Tenn. It has taxed the entertaining capacity of Chattanooga to the utmost, but the city was equal to the occasion and the Epworthians and their friends were all well taken care of.

RED cotton has been raised at Alpharetta, Ga., where a well-known planter has quite a quantity of that curious stuff, every stalk of which is a deep red, even the leaf, boll and bloom. This novel crop comes from planting seeds obtained six or seven years ago from a freak stalk of red cotton found growing in Florida.

IT IS telegraphed from Washington that colored republicans throughout the country are making an organization to secure the selection of a colored republican as chaplain of the National House of Representatives. This is well. There is nobody more zealous in prayer than the colored republican. It must be said, however, that there is nobody who prays more and gets less returns than the colored republican.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE Georgia Cracker says: "A man who tries to build up his town and country is worth a 10-acre field full of rich doubting Thomases, even if he is not able to buy a hen and chickens. The Lord deliver us from a fellow who is eternally trying to cast a damper over any sort of improvement. Every town and community has its full share of just such, and it would be better to colonize them in some section entirely surrounded by a territory of man-eating cannibals."

TWENTY YEARS HENCE.

A Northern Granger Looks Into the Future of the South.

It needs no prophetic vision on the part of the careful observer to see plainly that the seat of the greatest progress made by the people of the United States will be in what is termed the Southern states. This will be brought about by the sub-divisions of the great plantations of the South into small farms where intensive, instead of extensive farming will be the rule. Intensive farming can be followed only in a country where climatic conditions are such as to permit the raising of fruits and vegetables in the highest state of perfection, and it is beyond question that the southern states enjoy this climatic advantage.

Today all the great lines of railway of the northern states are seeking southern connection. Reports of the railway companies show that it is only those that have such connections that are able to report an increase of earnings. With the facilities that these new lines of railway will afford the southern farmer, they will be enabled to furnish the great cities of the northwest with fruits and vegetables fresh from their orchards and gardens at remunerative prices.

There are also two other lines of farming in which the southern farmer has proven that he can successfully compete with his northern rival, viz.: Poultry raising and dairying. The northern farmer is already keenly feeling the competition of the southern poultry raiser.

In dairying, the idea that was so long and firmly entertained by the northern as well as the southern farmer, that dairying could not be profitably followed in the south, has been dispelled by the successful management of this industry by a number of brainy and progressive farmers of the sunny south.

The inexhaustible mines, quarries and forests of the southern states will furnish the raw material to the great manufacturing plants that will cause the upbuilding of great cities in the south. These cities will furnish a market for all the products of the farm.

In the above statements we have taken no rosy view on account of misguided enthusiasm; but, as a resident of the northwest, I have come to these conclusions, after having made several visits to the southern states, and carefully investigated their resources. Unfortunately for them a large majority of the southern farmers do not fully realize the manifold advantages they enjoy. But there is a leaven at work in the way of emigration of northern farmers to the south who will join hands with their southern neighbors in introducing a new system of farming which will cause the waste places to bloom like a rose. Under these new conditions, the south will become the home of a happy and prosperous people.—Correspondent in Southern Cultivator.

MARCH OF PROSPERITY.

Day after day and week after week evidence accumulates establishing the fact that the trade revival which set in after congress adjourned is not a temporary flurry, but that it is the turning of the tide, the inauguration of an era of prosperity. The various weekly trade reports show a continuation of this onward march.

The railway earnings for the first week in June show that of sixty-six systems that have reported, fifty-five increased their receipts and two others came within a few dollars of it.

But no branch of trade has improved so much within the past week as the iron market. It has marked another advance of 50 cents per ton in the Birmingham district. "The past week has been one of the most stirring in the history of the iron trade in many years," says the Iron Age. "It presents an unbroken record of advances all along the line, and few are left who would characterize the upward movement as a soda water rise."

The bank clearings throughout the country show large increases, except a few places here and there. Birmingham, as has been noted, led all cities on increased clearings last week.

Wage advances continue. They are not confined to any particular section, either. During the last week more than 10,000 workmen had their wages increased and numerous industries were put in operation.

Crops the country over are in good condition for this season of the year.

The treasury gold reserve is at the $100,000,000 mark, with several millions still due from the bond syndicate imported for the government. The excess has, therefore, been in our favor, not counting the syndicate's gold. Contrast this with the excess the other way in other years. Our gold shipments exceeded receipts $36,523,744 in the months of February, March, April and May last year; $48,043,798 during the corresponding period of 1893, and $17,203,613 in 1892.

The government's revenues are on the increase, too, and confidence is abroad in the land. This onward march of prosperity shows no signs of cessation. It has come to stay. It is robbing the free silverites and republicans alike of the last vestige of their calamity arguments.—Birmingham News.

Sometime ago I was troubled with an attack of rhuematism. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to try the remedy and all speak highly of it. Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

AN HISTORICAL DOCUMENT.

New York Sun, June 13th.

Thirty years ago today Gen. Robert Edward Lee, the great soldier of the confederacy, never greater than in the hour of the failure of his cause, wrote to President Johnson a letter applying for the benefits of amnesty and restoration to his civil rights as a citizen of the United States.

Johnson's proclamation of general amnesty had been issued on May 29. Sixteen classes of persons were specfically excluded. Lee was excluded, not only because he was a West Pointer and had been a military officer of the confederate government, ranking higher than colonel, but also because he belonged to the thirteenth class excepted, namely: those persons who had voluntarily participated in the rebellion, and the value of whose taxable property was over $20,000. The amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865, provided, however, that special application for pardon might be made by any person belonging to the classes excepted; and Gen. Lee, therefore, wrote the subjoined letter:

"RICHMOND, VA., June 13, 1865.

"SIR:—Being excluded from the provisions of amnesty contained in the proclamation of the 29th ult., I hereby apply for the benefits, and full restoration of all rights and privileges, extended to those included in its terms.

"I graduated from the military academy at West Point in June, 1829; resigned from the United States army April, 1862; was a general in the confederate army, and included in the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, April 9, 1865.

"I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) "R. E. LEE."

The copy we have of this document is attested by Gen. George Washington Custis Lee, the eldest son of the great confederate commander; and Gen. G. W. C. Lee adds this highly interesting historical note concerning his father's motives in making so promptly an application to President Johnson for amnesty:

"When Gen. Lee requested me to make a copy of this letter to President Johnson, he remarked: It was but right for him to set an example of making formal submission to the civil authorities; and that he thought by so doing he might possibly be in a better position to be of use to the confederates who were not protected by military paroles, especially Mr. Davis.

"G. W. C. LEE."

In laying today before our readers and the public Gen. Robert E. Lee's application for pardon, and his own declaration of the motives prompting him to one of the most heroic acts of a life full of heroism, the Sun feels that it is adding lustre to a noble fame which is constantly growing as the years pass, and which is justly appreciated and generously prized in the north as well as in the south.

THE CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

The following from The Southern Immigrant of recent date in the language of the immortal Greely, is mighty interesting reading:

"We have been making a careful examination and study of the southern fruit crop and we fear our readers will be inclined to doubt our statement of the situation. It is a fact, however that every fruit bearing vine, bush and tree is literally loaded down with the finest of fruit, and all beyond the frosts and other damaging elements. It is true, that in Florida and the extreme south, much damage has been done to the orange and some other crops, but the great central South, it would seem, has fruit for the whole country and the indications are that the whole country will be in need of it. The severe damage to all fruit crops in the North, and especially the grape crop, will send the fruits from the southern hills to the farthest limits of the United States and it promises to be such fruits as will fully satisfy the people who have been accustomed to the delicious fruits of the northern states. Not only are the southern states blessed with a great fruit crop, but every other crop promises to be as abundant.

"Surely this is a great year for the South. With her products going into all the markets of the country and the people of all sections pouring into the South next fall to attend the soldiers' reunion at Louisville, witness the dedication of the Chickamauga National Park at Chattanooga and visit the great exposition at Atlanta, the South will become so thoroughly advertised and her advantages and resources so well known, that the years, 1896 and following, will see such an inflowing of northern people and capital into the South as has never been witnessed except in the immense movement that built up the great northwest. Every town and county in the South seem to realize what the events of this year mean to them in future growth and prosperity and are letting the people of the country know of the advantages they possess, all of which is legitimate and commendable. The opportunities for development in the South are greater than that presented by any other section, and the opportunities for the man of moderate means to secure a home for himself and family, never were surpassed anywhere, while the man of large capital cannot find a better field in which to operate, no matter in what channel he wishes to place his funds. We advise no man to be hasty in making a change of location, but commend the opportunities of the South to the careful consideration of all persons seeking new homes."

If you say "Good morning" to the devil he will spend the day with you.

ALABAMA'S ONE SONG OF STATE PATRIOTISM.

It should not be forgotten by Alabamians that Miss Tutwiler, the most prominent candidate for the presidency of the State Industrial School for White Girls, is the author of the only song of State patriotism that we have. It is used in our public schools on State days and other festival occasions.

I.

Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!
From thy Southern shore where groweth
By the sea thine orange tree,
To thy Northern shore where floweth
Deep and blue thy Tennessee,
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

II.

Broad the stream whose name thou bearest;
Grand thy Bigby rolls along;
Fair thy Coosa, Tallapoosa—
Bold thy Warrior, dark and strong;
Watered like the land which Moses
Climbed lone Nebo's mount to see;
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

III.

From thy quarries where thy marble
White as that of Para's gleams,
Waiting till thy sculptor's chisel
Wake to life thy poet's dreams;
For not only wealth of nature—
Wealth of mind hast thou in fee.
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

IV.

From the hills where coal and iron
Hide in thy exhaustless mines;
From thy prairies broad and fertile,
Where the snowy cotton shines,
Strong-armed miners, sturdy farmers,
Working men, where'er we be.
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

V.

Where the perfumed southwind whispers,
Thy magnolia groves among,
Softer than a mother's kisses,
Sweeter than a mother's song;
Where the golden jasmine trailing
Woos the treasure-laden be;
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

VI.

Little, little can I give thee,
Alabama, mother mine,
But that little—hand, brain, spirit—
All I have and am is thine;
Take, O take, the gift and giver;
Take and serve thyself with me.
Alabama! Alabama!
I will aye be true to thee!

"Helen," said Mr. Whykins, "what's the difference between a woman and an umbrella?"

"The difference," she answered serenely, "is that a man isn't afraid to take an umbrella with him wherever he goes, and that he doesn't try to conceal the fact that it's above him when a real emergency arrives. That's the principal difference, Henry."—Washington Star.

He pushes that blamed lawn mower.

A Household Treasure.

D. W. Fuller, of Canajoharie, N. Y., says that he always keeps Dr. King's New Discovery in the house and his family has always found the very best results follow its use; that he would not be without it if procurable. G. A. I have two little grand children who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I give them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and it acts like a charm. I earnestly recommend it for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux, with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work. Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bon-aqua, Hickman Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

W. J. Cannon, of Sylacauga, was a caller at our office last Saturday. Appreciating first-class work at reasonable prices he gave us an order for stationery, to be used in connection with his insurance agency.

The drought which has prevailed at this place for some time was broken yesterday morning by a copious downpour of rain, which was of untold value to the gardens and crops, which were suffering much from the long dry spell.

The Chronicle is highly gratified at the appointment of Miss Julia Tutwiler as president of the Girl's Industrial School. A better selection could not possibly have been made, and the success under her superb management is assured beyond a doubt.

The Columbiana Base Ball club will give an ice cream supper tommorrow (Friday) night at the Central Hotel. There will be a match game of ball in the afternoon with Calera, which should attract a good crowd. We hope to see many from Shelby, Calera, Wilsonville and other points. Come and enjoy a delightful day and encourage the boys by a big crowd at the supper.

The pluck, energy and enterprise displayed by Montevallo in her effort to obtain the Industrial school was wonderful to behold, and worthy of emulation. Such magnificent liberality can hardly fail of a reward, and for this reason among many others we rejoice the more that her labors have been crowned with success. May her most sanguine hopes be fully realized is our sincere wish.

While at Peekskill, N. Y., Mr. J. A. Scriven, a prominent manufacturer of New York City, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Such good results were obtained from its use that he sent back to the druggist from whom he had obtained it for two more bottles of the same remedy. When you have a cough or cold give this preparation a trial and like Mr. Scriven you will want it when again in need of such a medicine. It is a remedy of great worth and merit. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker and Armstrong.

The following is going the rounds; "The Monroe county (Pa.,) court has appointed a guardian for the estate of Isaac Brewer, of Stroudsburg. This is the climax of a strange career. He and his wife, Alice, have had ups and downs with the most alarming frequency during the twenty-two years of their wedded life. In that time the wife, it is asserted, deserted her husband exactly forty-two times. Forty-one times Isaac was able to coax or hire his better half to return home. But the forty-second time she refused and is now living with a daughter. They would have a slight disagreement and the wife would leave home. Perhaps she would be absent several days and then Brewer would go in search of her. The twenty-third disappearance was caused by a custard pie, and it cost the husband just $200 cash and the deed to a house to get his wife back. It seemed their tastes differed as to custard pie, the husband seeming to have peculiar ideas about its make-up. Now the wife says she cannot be hired to go back home, and the guardian has been appointed." Which goes to show that the way to keep a household in good order is to have cooking that pleases the paterfamilias.

Montevallo Wins the Prize.

We are all bubbling over with joy in this neck of the woods over the success of our sister town in securing the Girls' Industrial school, and our reasons for rejoicing are many. We are jubilant over the fact that we have in our county a town peopled with men so magnificently generous and enterprising as to wrest a prize of such magnitude from half a dozen or more of the wealthiest communities of the state. But it is needless to give all our reasons; they are too numerous. Suffice it to say our joy is genuine and unbounded, and we feel like throwing our arms around her neck and whooping until our wind is exhausted. In fact Montevallo has shown herself so big-hearted and generous that we feel that she is a very important portion of the county, whose bounds had been very considerably enlarged by this last valuable acquisition. Great is Montevallo and Shelby county, and greater still her generous citizens who have won our admiration by their unselfish patriotism.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 11.

I never visit the Harpersville community without being reminded of the vale of Galilee around the sea of Genesareth, Palestine. If the portion of Coosa valley in which Harpersville is situated were duplicated on the eastern or Talladega side of the river we should have a valley exceedingly like that of Galilee of, say, one-third to one-half the extent; the former being some fifteen by ten miles in extent, the latter forty-five by fifteen, soil identical and climate similar. The difference in productiveness of the Palestine valley, and the portion of Coosa valley in question, is due entirely to deeper plowing and better fertilization in the former. They plowed it, as a missionary to that country, who has written a monograph on the subject states, eighteen inches deep and fertilized to the utmost; so that in real fact, it yielded, "some thirty, some sixty, some an hundred fold," of the grain sown on it. If the very fine lands around Harpersville were plowed to half the above depth, or even less than that once a year, a similar yield might be obtained. But putting aside all speculation, that part of Coosa valley extending some fifteen miles from Yellow Leaf to Kelley's creek, with an average width of five miles, the soil deep and dark, composed of the detritus of lime rock and vegetable matter, with the requisite amount of oxide of iron, was originally well-nigh as fertile as the best prairies of South Alabama, and is proving more durable. When worn it is said to be more easily recuperated. It is certain that with scientific application of fertilizers, the level portions might be brought back to original productiveness much cheaper than the clearing and removal of timber and stumps required to clean it off for cultivation at first. Its value, therefore, has scarcely been diminished by seventy-five years growth and removal of crops. The elements of plant food most needed, I think, are potash, phosphorus and nitrogenous or vegetable matter, though I know little of these matters and name them simply to suggest the necessity of analysis, and the study of a little agricultural chemistry on the part of farmers. As it is, it is certain that they are applying commercial fertilizers very much in the dark, liable constantly to mistake what is needed, or even to use what is injurious. Intelligent farmers ought to make the whole area a garden.

In the absence of a full list of productions, kindly furnished by E. V. Caldwell, to the manor born, but mislaid, I enumerate from personal knowledge and memory: Peaches, PEARS, APPLES, strawberries, native and cultivated; corn, cotton, rye, barley oats, potatoes, sweet and Irsh, sorghum, RIBBON CANE, wheat, peas, all garden products, italicizing and capitalizing some of them deemed most remarkable. The section is the Eden of the country, unsurpassed in desirableness by any portion of earth. The hill portions of North Shelby, of course have the same adaptation to fruit, apples, grapes, tobacco, and the like already described in the accounts I have given of other sections.

The whole area of the section now being described is abundantly supplied with the best water—springs and flush streams burst forth from the foot of the hills as well as up from the rocks beneath, in every part.

Fine forests of yellow pine clothe the hills west of the valley, saw mills are frequent and large quantities of lumber are being marketed.

At various places the underlying limestone is exposed, notably on the Pitts place at the Big Spring. The railroad passes across the valley, giving every facility for transportation of produce east and west.

No other portion of Coosa valley has so long and fully attracted attention. Its only rival in this respect has been the narrow Cahawba valley. But the portion of Coosa valley below Yellow Leaf, embraces quite as much good land as this. The merits, particularly, of the Four Mile region, are well nigh equal, a large portion of which is still forest and unutilized. The difference is found in the facts, that Harpersville lands lie in large bodies together, almost all not only tillable, but good; while the lower portion of the valley consists of smaller tracts divided by poor hills.

I have thus finished what I have to say of the eastern portion of our county. A similar survey of the western portion, in one more number, will conclude these papers.

The Air in Kansas.

A man from the tamarack swamp went to Kansas, thinking to improve his condition, but after two years of it he returned to his native heath.

"How did you like it out there?" asked an acquaintance.

"Not very much."

"It's a good country, ain't it?"

"Sometimes it is, but not always."

"I don't see why it ain't as good one time as another."

"Well, it ain't."

"Why?"

"Cyclones."

"I thought they purified it?"

"That's what I thought till I tried it, but when I had to breathe furniture an' weather boardin' an' bedclo's an' shingles an' live stock an' household goods an' farms an' fence rails an' that sort o' things about three times a week I sort o' changed my mind an' came away. Kansas may have some advantages, but air ain't one of them as a steady thing."

Items from Sterrett.

J. C. Jarrett went to Birmingham last week.

Mrs. C. W. Baker is on a visit to her son in Anniston.

Mrs. G. H. Green, of Branchville, visited her father's family here last week.

W. T. and J. H. Falkner have gone to Anniston to work in the pipe works at that place.

We are glad to say Miss Frankie Vick has about or entirely recovered from her recent illness.

Sterrett and Cobb's base ball teams will cross bats at the latter's grounds the first Saturday in July.

Miss Della Neal, of Talladega Springs, is visiting here, and her many acquaintances are very glad to see her once more.

Walter N. Dyke has gone to Mississippi to work at a saw mill. He has many friends here who wish him success in his new job.

We were very sorry to hear of the death of Hon. Henry Wilson as he was very much esteemed here as a shrewd lawyer and a sound democrat.

Rev. S. V. McGinnis went to Birmingham last week to try to sell some of his large crop of peaches and we think he effected a deal for them.

A "musicale" was given at R. J. Byers' Saturday night in honor of Miss Addie Green, and was well enjoyed by the large crowd that attended.

Miss Mattie Johnston, who has been staying with her brothers in Mississippi for sometime, has returned home to the delight of her many friends here.

Prof. A. C. Wilder, of Weldon, was up Saturday night and of course he went of to Warren's mill, Sunday, to see —— well, we'll not say what but you can guess.

Miss Emma Gambrell, of Kelly's Creek, attended divine services here Sunday and she was attended by one of our young men; Mr. R. says he was "strictly in it?"

The summer session of Prof. J. P. Kennett's school will commence next Monday. This term promises to be of much interest as it is known that Prof. Kennett intends having a grand occasion at the close in the way of an examination and exhibition and it goes without saying that he will succeed.

Miss Addie Green, of Branchville, formerly of Sherman, Miss., visited R. J. Byers' family here last week. She is a beautiful, handsome and charming young lady and to say she captivated some of our young men would put it mildly, and there will be more sad hearts at her departure. They earnestly hope that she may come again in the near future.

BONAMI.

Shelby Siftings.

The Shelby base ball club is now organized with Lewis Christian, manager; Roy Christian captain; Robert Oliver, secretary and treasurer.

Capt. J. P. Christian is absent on a visit to Cincinnati, Detroit, Saginaw, Chicago, St. Louis and other cities in the Northwest to see the old customers of the Shelby Iron company. He will be absent two or three months.

Prof. Franklin has gone to Centreville, Bibb county, and from thence to Okolona, Miss., his home. He has been offered the school next session with many thanks and compliments for his services. He will return within two months and it is likely he will accept the offer.

Henry Myree, colored, an idiot has become quite a nuisance, especially to the ladies of Shelby. He has an insatiable appetite, and tramps about from house to house begging bread, frightening the women and children, besides being indecently clad. Dr. Oliver petitioned the asylum at Tuskaloosa to receive him, but they reported that they were over-crowded. Is there no room in the poor house for him?

A colored gentleman, for whom the 14th and 15th amendments of the constitution of the United States were enacted, and for whom Harriet Beecher Stowe spilt so much ink writing Uncle Tom's Cabin, became suddenly paralyzed near the Coosa river sometime ago. While the effect is well known, there exists some doubt as to the cause. Said gentleman reports that he had no shoes to protect his feet from the ice and snow, was the cause, another report is that after the sun had set and darkness overshadowed the earth he had within his grasp five spring chickens, when suddenly he heard the report of a double-barreled shot gun within close range, since which time he has been paralyzed from his waist down.

TO REMOVE STAINS.

Useful Facts to Know During the Fruit Season.

The many stains which come upon the table linen and the summer dresses of the children are a constant source of annoyance to the housekeeper, and as these become permanent disfigurements if left upon the goods when they are washed, it is necessary to know the immediate relief in order to deal with them at once. A list of the most common stains with the treatment which will remove each is a convenient clipping to paste into a fly leaf of the cook book, or other place of ready reference.

Fruit stains, when fresh, may be removed by pouring boiling water through the stained portion until the spot disappears.

Old fruit stains may be removed with carbolic acid. Wash the stained portion in the acid till clear; rinse at once in rain water, as the acid will streak the fabric if left upon it. Now wet the spot in ammonia and give a final rinsing.

Grass stains should be rubbed with molasses thoroughly and then washed out as usual. Another treatment is to rub with alcohol and then wash in water.

Rust and ink stains should be rubbed with juice of lemon and the spot then covered with salt and the cloth placed in the sun. If this treatment does not serve to remove the stain, or if the fabric is colored and so cannot be treated with the lemon juice, oxalic acid may be used as for old fruit stains Still another treatment is to apply a mixture of two parts tartar and one part powdered alum; this latter is good for a variety of stains which fail under other methods.

Ink that is freshly spilt upon a carpet should be covered with coarse or common salt or Indian meal. If the stain is not abstracted, rub with lemon juice.

Mildew is often a very stubborn thing to get rid of. Cut ordinary soap into shavings and cook it to a paste with rain water. Spread the paste upon the spot, scatter upon it finely powdered potash and spread the fabric upon the grass for twenty-four hours. Wash in rain water and in all ordinary cases the spot will have disappeared. If it is not entirely gone, repeat the process. The same treatment is effectual in the case of wine or fruit stains.

Wagon grease, pitch or tar may be removed by spreading lard upon the spot, rubbing it well in and then washing out as usual.

The same kind of stain upon silk may be removed by rubbing with a mixture of equal parts of oil of turpentine and ether until all impurities seem removed, then cover the spot with Fuller's earth or French chalk, cover with a blotting paper and press with a hot iron. Repeat this until the spot entirely disappears.

Tea, coffee, and undoubtedly cocoa stains, even those which have been previously washed, may be rubbed in lavalle water, if the fabric stained be white, otherwise the color will be bleached. Take a half-pint of lavalle water to a quart of clear water and let stained portion of the cloth soak in it for several hours. Then rinse thoroughly in three waters.

Colors which have been changed by the application of acids may be restored by sponging with chloroform or ammonia, while colors changed by alkalies may be given an acid treatment.

The Alabama Educational Association.

The A. E. A. will meet in Talladega, July 2-4. It is earnestly hoped that every progresive white teacher in Alabama will attend.

An interesting program has been arranged. The railroads will sell round trip tickets at one fare. Board can be had at $1 to $1.50 a day.

Wednesday, July 3rd, has been designated as "Superintendents' Day." Every city and every county superintendent in Alabama is urged to be present as matters of great importance and of far reaching influence will be discussed.

The Alabama Chautauqua will be in session in Talladega during the month of July, and members of the A. E. A. will have the benefit of their lectures at reduced rates.

Those desiring to arrange board in advance may write to Hon. J. B. Graham at Talladega. For program drop a card to the undersigned.

While in Topeka last March, E. T. Barber, a prominent newspaper man of La Cygne, Kan., was taken with cholera morbus very severely. The night clerk at the hotel where he was stopping happened to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy and gave him three doses which relieved him and he thinks saved his life. Every family should keep this remedy in their home at all times. No one can tell how soon it may be needed. It costs but a trifle and may be the means of saving much suffering and perhaps the life of some member of the family. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

THE MAGICAL ISLE.

"Oh! remembered for aye, be that blessed Isle,
All the days of life, till night,
When the evening comes, with its beautiful smile,
And our eyes are closing to slumber a while,
May the greenwood of soul be in sight."

"Oh, a wonderful stream is the river of Time,
As it runs through the realms of years.
With a faultless rythm and a musical rhyme,
And a broader sweep and a surge sublime,
And blends with the ocean of years!

"How the winters are drifting, like flakes of snow,
And the summer like buds between;
And the cars in the sheaf, so they come and they go
On the river's breast, with its ebb and flow,
As it glides in the shadow and sheen.

"There's a magical isle in the river of Time,
Where the softest of airs are playing;
There's a cloudless sky and a tropical clime,
And a voice as sweet as a vesper's chime,
And the June with the roses are staying.

"And the name of the Isle is Long Ago,
And we bury our treasures there;
There are brows of beauty and bosoms of snow,
There are heaps of dust—but we loved them so;
There are trinkets and tresses of hair.

"There are fragments of song that nobody sings,
And a part of an infant's prayer,
There's a lute unswept and a harp without strings,
There are broken vows, and pieces of rings,
And the garments she used to wear.

"There are hands that are waved, when the fairy shore
By the mirage is lifted in air;
And we sometimes hear, through the turbulent roar,
Sweet voices heard in the days gone before
When the wind down the river is fair.

A FREE TRIP TO ATLANTA.

The Cotton States Exposition should be visited by every resident of Alabama. Knowing, however, that there are many people, especially in the rural districts, who can ill afford the heavy outlay necessary in order to attend this exhibition, The Advertiser has devised a plan whereby all who are willing to devote a little spare time to calling their neighbor's attention to the excellence of the Semi-Weekly Advertiser as a newspaper, can visit this display of Southern industries and resources.

Every person in the State of Alabama who will send us 100 yearly subscribers to the Semi-Weekly Advertiser at $1 each, before October 1st, 1895, will be presented with a ticket from his or her railway station to Atlanta and return, and in addition will be given $25 in cash for the purpose of defraying his or her expenses while there.

It will not be necessary to send the entire 100 subscribers at once, but names can be forwarded from time to time as they are secured, the sender stating that they are for our Cotton States Exposition Excursion prize. An acurate account will be kept with each competitor, and the announcement of the successful ones will be made as soon after October 1st as is practicable.

There is no good reason why several hundred people should not thus be able to visit the Atlanta Exposition at our expense, as The Semi Weekly Advertiser is unquestionably the best newspaper of its class in America, and the low subscription price places it within the reach of people of very limited means. It is an Alabama paper for Alabama people and that field defies competition.

RAILROAD ECHOES.

THE auditor of the state of Colorado has announced that hereafter he will not allow mileage to legislators and public officers who travel upon railroad passes. His action is based on a recent decision of the state supreme court.

AUSTIN CORBIN is extending his railroad to the Montauk end of Long Island. The deeds to 5,000 or more acres of land about Fort Pond bay have been recorded in the office of the Suffolk county clerk in Mr. Corbin's name.

CONDUCTORS of the fast mail trains east and west over the Panhandle lines are required to go through every mail car and see that only bona fide mail clerks are on board. The regular mail clerks carry permits similar to a pass.

THE charge for carrying wheat from Chicago to New York by rail in 1864 was 60 cents per bushel; in 1874 it was reduced to 20¼ cents; in 1894 it was only 13.2 cents—one-half of the rate 20 years ago, and a little over one-fifth of the charge 30 years ago.

THE Michigan Central has abandoned the practice of testing for color blindness the train employes and yard men with several skeins of worsted of different colors, and only the regulation flags and lights are used. The tests are made both day and night, and the distances are half-mile and one mile.

SQUIRE RUFUS SANDERS.

The Sage of Rocky Creek Under a Sunstroke.

It Was a Clear Case of "Pushency"—The Fervent Stage of the Weather and the General Appearments of a Cornfield Was One Too Many.

(Copyright 1895.)

Here lately I have learnt a whole passle from the newspapers in regards to the hot weather and sunstrokes in the up country. And that's what makes me tell you what I do about dear old Rocky Creek. The mainest thing in hot weather, you understand, is to have plenty of handroom-ance and only a few clothes. Sometimes the weather gits mighty awful tremendius hot around about in these regions, but so far as I can now remember I never got sunstruck but onest in my life.

It Was a Case of "Pushency."

That was way back yonder in the old days, when me and Joe Nick Stringer was nothin but chunks of boys and thicker than three in a bed. One Saturday in July Joe Nick come over to our house and me and him had made it up to go down on the creek swimmin and fishin that evenin. But at dinner time it was give out to me from general headquarters, you understand, that a particlar piece of late corn down in the Red field bottom had to be hoed out before night, fish or no fish. And there I was, as the man says in the play.

So after dinner me and Joe Nick lit out and went down to the Red field, thinkin we could brush out that piece of corn inside of two hours and yet have plenty of time for fishin and foolin around down on the creek. But when we got down there in the bottom the fervent stage of the weather and the general appearments of that corn field was enough to turn the stomach of a saint. The corn was about waist high I reckon, and man sir, the hogweeds and cuckleburrs and mornin glories was high as the corn and thicker than the hair on a dog's back.

But somethin had to be done, you understand, and somethin had to be done right away immedintely if not sooner. I told Joe Nick that under the surroundin circumference about the best thing for me to do was to git sunstruck and faint and fall over in it. The proceedins then proceeded along that line. We had took a big jug of water with us, and after I had fell over in a soft shady place in a jam of the fence I told Joe Nick to pull the stopper and wet me good from head to foot, which at that time I felt like if I ever got to Heaven I would like to go by the water route anyhow. Then I got Joe Nick to take me by the arm and lead me and help me, and in that fashion we draggled off towards the house. When we got there I was ruther weak to talk much, which I lowed it wouldn't look natural for a boy that had fainted to remember anything for certhin about the calamity. But Joe Nick he put in and told the most hair-raisinest yarn you ever heard with regards to how I had got sunstruck and fainted dead away, and how he had brought me around finally at last by pourin the jug of water on me.

Naturally of course the old folks then made me go to bed and stay there till the next mornin. To be certainly it went powerful agin the grain with me to stay in the house and not go down on the creek fishin and foolin around with Joe Nick, you understand, but that was a whole tremendius big lot better than hocin corn in the Red field bottom about that time of the year.

Lucas is His Name.

If you will come and go with me back to the woods and hills—back across the creek and beyond the scenes of tumult and strife and trials and tribulations—back down to the old Panther Creek country, where the people are always honest enough and brave enough to be natural and true—where they take the measure of a man not by the beef upon his bones, nor by the money in his purse, but by the honor and the courage in his soul—I can show you the old log house and the very spot where a natural-born horse trader, and the most brightest man of his day and generation of people first opened his eyes on the wonders of this vain and fleetin world. And Lucas is his name, patient and long-sufferin reader—Andy Lucas.

Had a Round Trip Ticket.

Now Andy was a right smart chunk of a boy—with whiskers on his face and women on his mind, you understand—before he ever rode anywheres on a railroad train. All the Lucases was powerful handy with horses, and Andy was a reglar member of the family. He had a good plug of a horse which he could ride as far as he wanted to—go anywheres in forty miles around—and he didn't particlar need any railroad trains in his business.

But finally at last old man Lucas took up a meltin big notion that Andy must go off somewheres on the railroad, so when he got to be a man he could have it to say that onest upon a time he had rode on a railroad train. The Lucases was monstrous proud, you understand, and old man Hiram was kin to all the rest.

So along in the fall of the year whilst the State Fair was runnin and ridin on the railroad was uncommon cheap, the old man took Andy to town one day and bought him a round trip ticket up to Calhoun and back, and told him he could go up there on a visit to his Uncle Gus.

"You have got what they call a round trp ticket, Andy," says old man Hiram, "which means that it will take you to where you are goin and then bring you back to where you started from. You can go up there and see your Uncle Gus and his folks, and then come back home on the same ticket."

Well, Andy he got on board and presently the train lit out. She got faster and more faster, and Andy he got nervous and more nervous. By-and-by he got to jumpin up and down and givin in his general opinions in the case with powerful plain United States. It also come to pass that there was a preacher on board, and he got terrible sick of Andy and his cuss words. Finally at last the good man says to Andy, says he:

"Young man, do you know where you are goin?"

"To be certainly of course I do," says Andy. "I am goin up here to Calhoun to see my Uncle Gus and his folks."

"No you aint, young man," says the preacher, "no you aint. You are goin right on down to the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone forever more—you are goin to hell, young man."

"That's all right, mister," says Andy. "It don't make a continential bit of difference to me. I have got a round trip ticket anyhow."

The Gentleman Loses.

"The gentleman loses and the gamblers win."

That was a great sayin with slim Jim Blevins. It don't make any difference what sort of a game he was playin at, when bad luck broke him up and the other fellow scooped in the pile he would bow his head and smile a gentle, painful lookin smile and say:

"The gentleman loses and the gamblers win."

It was perfectly all right, you understand for slim Jim to say that. The boys all knowed him and everybody was willin for him to git all the comfort he could out of it in that way.

But by-and-by one day hard luck hit slim Jim all in a wad. Over at the Cross Roads one Saturday he got into a little game with three strangers which were travellin around through the country as agents for a lightnin rod concern, but they turned out to be second-class tin horn gamblers. In little or no time they had sized up slim Jim's pile and had it put away in their flanks. They played three agin one and it was a dead easy open and shut game. When it come to pass that he had dropped his package, as usual, slim Jim got up and bowed his head accordin to his reglar habit and said, says he:

"The gentleman loses and the gamblers win."

By this time, with plenty of "white ink" flowin free and promiscus, you understand, the whole crowd was right tolerable mellow, and the lightnin rod fellows fired up and got terrible mad. They cussed and ripped and snorted around considerable, and then presently one of them pulled his gun and opened fire on slim Jim, which he showed down and answered to the call quick as a flash. Then the firin got thicker and more furious till the general crowd scattered and left slim Jim there to play another hand out with the strangers.

And slim Jim he played it, too, for all there was in it. He never did have any luck, but I always maintained that whensomever a man took down his old musket and went forth to shoot slim Jim Blevins for a coward or a fool he was more than probable to back himself up agin a tremendius big snag. He was a plum failure at cards, you understand, and he couldn't even play marbles for keeps. But he was dead game, and game clean down to the bone.

So finally at last when the firin ceased and the smoke cleared away there was three lightnin rod frauds and tin horn gamblers layin around there on the ground dead, and slim Jim, when his friends got to him, was also nearin the great Divide betwixt the whither and the where. Some of the boys give him a drink of water, whereas he bowed his head and smiled his thanks. Then he caught me by the hand and pullin me down clost to him, he whispered with his last dyin breath:

"The gentleman loses and the gamblers win."

There was a four-cornered funeral in the settlement next day, and every eye was dry exceptin them as sheds a few tears for slim Jim Blevins.

Mixed as to Silver.

The people out here in the woods and hills are still mighty bad muddled and mixed up on the free silver question, whilst the "politicusses," as Aunt Nancy Newton calls 'em, are browsin around on both sides of the branch to the best of their ability. Right now I aint for nothin particlar but liberty or death, you understand, but it is my private, personal opinion a terrible confusionment and a mighty rattlin will be goin on now presently in this valley of dry bones.

RUFUS SANDERS.

RIFLE AND SABER.

EVERY German regiment has a chiropodist in its ranks.

THE Legion of Honor costs France about 14,000,000 francs a year. There are pensions ranging from 3,000 francs for the grand crosses down to a small sum a year for the military medalists.

A TWENTY-TWO-TON Armstrong rifle in the British navy throws a solid shot twelve miles, much further than its report can be heard. At its highest point for this extreme range the shot would be over three miles above the earth's surface.

AT the German army maneuvers a new shoe sole for soldiers will be tried. It consists of a kind of paste of linseed oil, varnish and iron filings, with which the soles of new shoes are painted. It is said to keep leather flexible and to give the shoe greater resistance than the best nails.

THE STEAMSHIPS.

IN the twenty-one years that the White Star steamer Germanic has been in active service she has run over 1,500,000 statute miles.

THE Hamburg-American line is said to be planning for the building of a steamship about 600 feet long and 87 feet wide.

NO DIVIDENDS were paid by the North German Lloyd company last year, as the profits amounted to only $1,065,900, as compared with $2,456,400 for 1893. The falling off in German emigration largely accounted for the diminution.

THE old Oceanic, the pioneer steamer of the White Star line, has just returned to England from the east. She has been used as a passenger boat for twenty-five years. From 1870 to 1875 she ran between New York and Liverpool, and for the last twenty years between San Francisco and Yokohama.

THE WAYS OF NATURE.

SEVERAL petrified forests have been discovered in Arizona.

EBONY wood is hardened after felling by immersion in water for periods varying from six to eighteen months.

THE web of the common garden spider is so fine that 30,000 of them, laid side by side, would not cover an inch in width.

THE eye of the vulture is so constructed that it is a high-power telescope, enabling the bird to see objects at an almost incredible distance.

AN unusual growth is noticed in the garden of Mr. George D. Colt at Norwich, Conn. A wistaria vine has entwined itself around an elm so tightly that it is gradually strangling the growth out of the latter.

AN AMERICAN UTOPIA.

Smith D. Fry Discovers It in the Pennsylvania Mountains.

Were It Not for the Demon of the Still Life There Would Be Practically Without Vice, Guile and Backsliding.

[Special Washington Letter.]

Long before he fell from grace and lapsed into a lordship; while the veins of his genius were almost bursting with the full blood and strong pulsations of laudable ambition; in the flush of magnificent manhood, Alfred Tennyson wrote his celebrated open letter to Clara Vere de Vere, "the daughter of a hundred earls." There is much doubt whether the poet guessed half the wisdom he expressed when he penned the lines:

ON THE MOUNTAINS.

"'Tis only noble to be good.
Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith, than Norman blood."

The world is self, and self alone, from surface to foundation stone. Kind hearts are rare, and seldom found, because of the callous encystment of selfishness. And simple faith is seldom found in cities. The gold and silver of the chalice, supplemented by the purple and fine linen of the modern Levites, have driven faith in fear to the mountains and plains where men and women toil so hard and learn to pray for their daily bread. Kind hearts and faith dwell together in unity; but they shrink from the temples of the money changers. Therefore is it that the anthems of the costly choirs and the thrilling orchestrations of great organs are heard only by the rich and the great in the pomp and the pride of their worldly estate; while the poor, whom we have with us always, worship afar from the splendor of our churches. In the homes of the meek and the lowly, kind hearts are developed, for, divested of selfishness, devoted to each other, hungry wives, mothers and children turn in their sufferings upward to God, and bless, while it smites them, the chastening rod.

Just for a change of air and scene I ran off for a few days up into the mountain regions of the new world, where only three generations ago the sturdy ancestors of modern Pennsylvania yeomanry dwelt amongst the savages and carried rifles with them when they went forth to swing their axes, fell trees, build log cabins for homes and till the soil. There I found kind hearts more dear than coronets, and faith more pure than Norman blood. They have not learned the theological and philosophical definition of love; but they live the truth which manifests an unselfish determination to promote the happiness and welfare of each other. This is love; and faith is its corollary. Those Blue mountain men and women have known each other since their childhood. They have not had their hearts rasped and their brains racked by the demons of self, who dwell in cities and thrive in the marts of modern business thrift. They truly live and exemplify their faith in the new commandment "that ye love one another" as little children.

But this was not Utopia. There is no perfect place on earth, and the best localities and best peoples only approximate perfection. Rev. Dr. Briggs goes so far as to say that because the hands of men have written the lines of the Bible, even the good book has marks of human imperfection in it. And so up there in the clear and pure air of the mountains, beneath the blue skies and twinkling stars, there are manifestations of evil; but it is a singular fact that they come from the demon of the still. If temperance could wholly prevail there would be a schoolhouse on every hilltop and no saloon in the valley. But, alas, the saloons are there, and they have the same effect upon the honest yeomanry of the hill country that the fire-water of our forefathers had upon the simple aborigines, who met the white men with corn and water, and were repaid in fire and flame, with bullet and saber.

On Saturday night just before midnight, when all the lights in Waynesboro had been put out or turned down low, and when the people were sleeping the sleep of innocence and dreaming of their church, Sunday-school or Epworth league meetings, the peace of old Church street was broken by the shrill cries of a woman in trouble mingled with the guttural profanity of a man in fury. The solitary policeman of the town, whose most aggressive labor is the wearing of brass buttons and a large hat, was sent for and soon reached the scene. He ascertained that a saloonkeeper had had the hardihood to drink some of his own poison and had gone home to kill his stepdaughter. Having ascertained this fact, and having received the assurance of the drunkard that he would be quiet, this valiant solitary policeman, following the example of the Tammany officers who were under obligations to many saloonkeepers for free liquor, folded his arms and walked away without making an arrest.

So much for Utopia. This was the only blur to mar the scene; but it was enough to demonstrate the truth of the saying that there is none perfect on earth. The true, the right, the perfect and the good are forms of reason and attributes of the supernatural. In man they are developed in part. With the exception of that single episode of sin and sorrow the simple faith and goodness of the community were constantly noticeable. For example, it was here that in his humble home I found a man who has been building a flying machine for thirty years, who said: "All of my best ideas have come to me upon my bended knees." That indicates the temper of the people. They all seem to realize that more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of; and that man may learn all things by studying the secrets of nature on their knees. The atmosphere of the crags and peaks and clefts seems charged and impregnated with simple faith and loyalty to the instincts of truth and virtue.

The cedars of Lebanon which furnished the timbers of the first great masonic temple grew upon hills less prominent and less beautiful than these blue ridges of the eastern portion of the new world. And when the ark settled upon Ararat the couples of the animal kingdom who were to re-people the earth had no such wonderful abiding place; while in the visible valleys far below the celebrated plain of Esdraelon is rivaled in fertility, and, like unto that historic splendor of the ancient World of vegetation; far-reaching beyond vision; the Cumberland valley is fair as the garden of the Lord, a paradise excelled nowhere on earth.

There are no great men here, but many good men and women multiply and replenish the land with their kind. It is better to be good than great. Many a young man in that country toils for ten cents an hour, supports himself, and saves a portion of his earnings for the comfort of his old age. The steam cars bring civilization with its luxuries and its vices to the doors of these honest people, but they are living as Christians, in the world and yet not of the world. The vices of civilization sweep by and over them all, but only the demon of the still invades the peace and placidity of their honest homes. Even this insidious serpent is held at bay by the women, for they frown upon it, and in their temperance societies the young ladies say: "The lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine."

No man of the world whose heart still beats responsive to the beatitudes of instincts of the supernatural, can attend a little prayer and praise meeting there without feeling that the vain pomp and glory of the cities with their spires, minarets and costly forms of adulation, as a substitute for adoration, are indeed travesties upon the simple faith of Wesley, Knox, Luther and the earlier fathers. Here one may realize the saying of Bishop Keane that "the light of the dark ages was never extinguished in the cell of the cloistered monk." There is no ostentation in truth and love. Among the plain people of our land we may best append the whole truth of the statement that "kind hearts are more than coronets, and simple faith than Norman blood."

Up in that mountain town I met a magnificent woman, the most popular woman in the borough. In her parlor there was a very fine organ, around which young ladies and gentlemen often gather to sing the songs of praise most popular in their religious meet ings. That organ was bought by the citizens of the town, and presented to the lady as a slight token of their appreciation of her public services during a fever epidemic. Without compensation or hope of reward this modern Elizabeth Fry, this Miss Nightingale of the village, attended the sick, soothed the dying, and prepared the dead for their last resting places, when just such unselfish services were most needed. She entertained neither fear nor thought of danger to herself, and fortunately escaped sickness. But she builded for herself a monument in the hearts of her people which will last as long as the mountain borough will last. No prince nor potenate on earth could outrank her to-day in the affections of her friends. Truly, "'tis only noble to be good."

We are largely creatures of association and circumstances. The influences of our friends are exceedingly powerful. If we mingle with the wicked, we will almost involuntarily become part and parcel of the bad elements of a community. If we mingle only with the good, we naturally endeavor to emulate their examples. Our natural instincts of pride make us desire to be as good as the best. And thus a short time spent with people whose simple faith shines forth in their many virtues has overshadowed me so that, in returning to this center and vortex of worldliness, I feel that I have brought back with me to Washington some higher and better aspirations by reason of associations with plain unpretentious people who are better and nobler than the rich and the great who pervade this place. SMITH D. FRY.

M. Faure and His Gift Dolls.

Ever since his election the French president has, it is said, made a practice of devoting at least two mornings a week to visiting hospitals. Instead of contenting himself with marching formally through the narrow wards, he makes a point of going from bed to bed, shaking hands with the patients, inquiring into their condition, and encouraging them with cheering words. It is especially by the bedside of sick children that he tarries the longest, and when he asks the little sufferers what he can do to give them pleasure the answer invariably is "une poupee." Then down goes the child's name on the tablet of one of the president's aides-de-camp, with the result that on the following morning there arrive at the hospital several boxes containing superb dolls. It is said that M. Faure has given away over one thousand dolls since he became president.

THE GOLD RESERVE

Will be Protected and Held Intact From This Time on it is said.

THE RETURN OF BETTER BUSINESS

Encourages in the Move and the Syndicate Says They Will Import More Gold If Necessary—Its Responsibility Not at an End.

NEW YORK, June 29.—The closing of the bond contract between the Belmont-Morgan syndicate and the government has awakened the greatest interest in financial circles as to whether the syndicate proposes to further protect the treasury gold from the raids of exporters. Certain bankers close to Messrs. Morgan and Belmont said yesterday that although the deal is virtually closed the bond syndicate does not feel itself released from obligations.

The gold reserve is now over $707,000,000 and for the first time in many months the treasury receipts for the current month will exceed the expenditures. Yesterday the treasury balance sheets for the month showed a surplus instead of a deficit, and as the expenditures are usually light towards the end of the month, it is regarded as certain that the surplus will continue to grow from now until July 1st.

The treasury is $46,625,311 behind in the matter of receipts and expenditures for the current fiscal year, and in the intervening days between now and July first it is unlikely that more than a million and a half of this deficiency will be made up, so that the year's balance sheets probably will show that the expenditures for the year were about $45,000,000 million greater than the receipts.

The syndicate does not expect to secure another issue of government bonds and anticipates that none will be issued. There is now more money in the treasury than would be sufficient to meet a $50,000,000 annual deficiency for more than one year, and at the expiration of that period, with the ratio of receipts unchanged, there would be more money in the treasury according to the bankers, than there was when the previous issures were decided upon. The return of better business in financial and trade circles also incourage the belief, there having been given employment to over 300,000 idle people in the last three months, at an average advance of 12 per cent, which indicates that there will be no further necessity for fears in the country's financial affairs.

DYNAMITE AS A TOY.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 29.—Yesterday near Argo, Ala., James, the 10-year-old son of Jeptha Miller, who had been watching his father blow up stumps in a field with dynamite, secured a stick of the explosive, and going into the yard where a kettle full of boiling soap was located told his younger sister to watch him blow it up. He threw the dynamite into the kettle and a terrific explosion followed. The boy was instantly killed and the girl so badly injured that she is not expected to live.

Needs More Troops.

THE SAN FRANCISCO FIRE.

Million and a Half Dollars Lost—Fatalities and Incidents.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 29.—The fire last night destroyed four blocks in the heart of the manufacturing district of the city, involving a loss of $1,500,000 in property and sacrificing one life. It raged unchecked for over four hours, feeding on a succession of wooden buildings and might have been beyond control for many hours longer but for lucky change in the wind.

The burned areas bounded by Townsend, Bryant, Third and Fifth streets. The flames made occasional invasions outside these limits but only to the extent of a few houses.

A Miss Gilroy was burned to death. This was the only fatality reported. She was attempting to save some of her belongings and was covered with burning oil. During the progress of the fire a steam boiler exploded in a French laundry. The force of the explosion sent about half a ton of boiler flying through the building. A piece lodged in Shirley's hotel. So great was the shock that all the windows not destroyed by the heat were blown into the streets. There was a thrilling scene while the convent and parochical school attached to St. Rose's church were in flames. A few moments before the roof fell in a boy was seen at one of the upper windows. A cry of horror went up from the crowd and the firemen yelled to the boy to jump. A blanket was held out, but just then the flames and smoke enveloped the building and the next moment the roof fell in with a crash. Everybody thought the boy was lost, but he jumped into the blanket held by the firemen and escaped uninjured.

KNOXVILLE'S BAD PLIGHT.

Must Issue Those $225,000 Bonds for the Cumberland Gap Road.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., June 29.—A special report will be filed today in the case of the Knoxville, Cumberland Gap and Louisville railway vs. the city of Knoxville, in which the former seeks to compel the latter to issue $225,000 worth of bonds voted in aid of the road. The city on a tecnicality refused to issue the bonds. The case was carried to the supreme court, and the road won. The decree made it conditional that the road could issue the stock, and a special master was appointed to investigate. He will report in favor of the railroad and the city will have to issue the bonds. The case has been in litigation for five years.

The Fourth Street National bank is one of the most prominent institutions in this city.

EPWORTH LEAGUES

Holding Their Second International Session.

SERVICES ON LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN.

Over Twelve Thousand People in Attendance and Still They Come—Many Distinguished Churchmen Are There.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 29.—The large gathering of the Epworth Leaguers in this city was yesterday considerably swelled by local excursions; the greatest addition was a train of 12 heavily packed cars from Knoxville, carrying 800 delegates, although 12,000 visitors are here the city has experienced little difficulty in accommodating them all. At sun up on the second day of the international conference, the work of the day began. Cars began moving toward Lookout mountain from the city at 3:30 o'clock, fully 1,500 people participated in the sunrise prayer meeting on Lookout. At 5 o'clock Rev. George R. Stewart conducted the service from Ellis Rock.

The speaker likened the scene and devotions there to memorable occasions in Bible history, the prayer of Elijah on the mountain to the Hallowed sermon on the mount; the transfiguration and the crucifixion. This service will be repeated today. Nothing like it was ever experienced before. Over five thousand will attend today's service on the mountain. In 25 minutes 110 testimonials were given and ten songs rendered by the North Ohio conference quartette. All yesterday was taken up in meeting of state conferences. At 9:30 the big crowd met again under the assembly tent which was filled. The general topic of the day was "Methodism; its life and mode of expression." During the morning the atmospheric conditions were as feverish and heated as the blood of the warmest Methodist present, but the grounds became much cooler in the afternoon. Owing to the illness of General C. A. Evans at his home in Atlanta, Judge L. H. Estes of Memphis, presided.

Perhaps the feature of the afternoon's session was the address on Christian citizenship, delivered by Rev. Carlos Martyn, president of the municipal reform league of Chicago. It is only three weeks since he resigned the pastorate of a large church to devote himself entirely to his work of reform with his people and tongue. He applied the lash mercilessly to Chicago's city government. Many could not gain admittance to the tent last night when Chaplain C. C. McCabe of New York, Bishop Homer C. Thoburn, of Indiana, and Rev. W. R. Lambeth, Nashville, the drawing card of the entire program, addressed the conference. Rev. Frank A. Hardin, of Freeport Ill., conducts the sunrise meeting today on Lookout. Today will be another excurson day and not till Monday will the delegates begin to leave. The high water mark of the attendance will be reached today.

HEAVY DAMAGE SUITS.

The Rocky Mountain News and Denver Republican to Answer $250,000 Worth.

DENVER, Col., June 29.—Five suits for damages were filed yesterday afternoon in the district court against the Denver Republican and Rocky Mountain News. The amount prayed for in the aggregate is $250,000 against each of the papers. The complaints are in the aldermen and supervisors who comprised the water committee of the city council.

They are Aldermen A. D. Young, Peter Fidel and Daniel Hingley, and Supervisors Abram Buckton and S. C. Phister. Each complainant asks for $50,000. For cause of action the complainants recite numerous alleged libelous utterances of the two papers since the beginning of the struggle over the water question.

THE FRUIT GROWERS

Demand Cheaper Freight Rates, and the Railroads Say They are Reasonable.

ATLANTA, June 29. — The Georgia fruit growers brought up their case before the Georgia railroad commissioners yesterday and the hearing was full of excitement, the fire between the fruit growers and the railroad men was becoming so intense as to almost precipitate a personal encounter between Major Shellman, traffic manager of the Central of Georgia, and Mr. M. E. Hatcher, a leader among the fruit growers. The fruit growers complain that the rates charged by the railroads for hauling peaches to market are excessive. The complaint is general and the warfare against the roads is red hot. They want rates particularly on peaches. The roads claim that the fruit traffic is the most expensive of all, that it costs more in the special quick schedule that have to be made, hauling from six to eight tons of ice per car for which they don't receive any freight. They claim that they cannot haul fruit with such advantages without charging what they do, claiming that there is no profits in the traffic for them even at the price they get. The case will be continued today.

If these matches occur next week she will not be sailed through all the Clyde regattas.

Adopted a Scale.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 24.—Yesterday the conference committees of the Amalgamated Association and the manufacturers agreed upon a wage scale for the coming year and signed, a committee being present to arrange details. The scale is practically the same as in operation now which expires August 1, which makes $4 for puddling, except that the card rate of iron on which the wage is computed, is made 1 1-10 instead of 1 5-10. Mills are crowded with orders and this caused the manufactures to affirm the scale as presented.

Another Increases Wages.

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa., June 29.—Notices were posted in all the departments of the Phœnix Iron & Bridge company yesterday announcing that the wages of the 2,000 employes of the company would be raised on July 1st. The works are now running full time on some large orders and the work on the material for the Sioux City bridge which was stopped when the panic began two years ago has resumed. The works are running night and day.

Iron Still Advancing.

PITTSBURG, Pa., June 29.—A special to the Times from Youngstown, O., says: An important meeting of the Bar Iron Manufacturers association was held here yesterday, it was unanimously decided to advance the price of bar iron $2 per ton. JACKSON, Ky., June 29.—"Bad" Tom Smith was hanged in the jail yard here yesterday in the presence of 5,000 people.

GOOD TIMES AHEAD

Is Indicated By the Advance in Coal and Iron in the South.

THE BAROMETERS INDICATE CHEER.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 29.—Iron was advanced $1 a ton yesterday by the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company, which makes a total advance of $2.75 a ton since the 15th of March, and the indications are that it is not done rising yet.

Prices ruling in the Birmingham iron market were as follows:

No. 1 foundry, $9.75; No. 2 foundry, $9.25; No. 3 foundry, $9.00; No. 1 soft, $9.25; No. 2 soft, $9.00; gray forge, $8.75; mottled $8.75,

The Tennesse Coal, Iron & Railroad company sold a considerable lot of iron at the new prices yesterday the market is active and continues to strengthen day by day. A reporter called on President Baxter of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company at his private residence yesterday for the purpose of interviewing him. Mr. Baxter was in the best of spirits and in response to the reporters question, said:

"We made the advance in iron today because we were selling that iron at the former price, than we were making, and on the account of activity and strength of the market and also to put us on an equal footing with the northern and eastern.

The advance today of $1 ton makes a total advance of $2.25 we have had on our iron since March 15. The advance of Bessemer iron at the same time has been $3.50.

Under this price coal miners working in mines of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company in this district are entitled to an advance in their wages of 50 cents a ton for mining coal. So soon as we announced the advance in iron, we immediately notified the miners that from and after July 1, they would receive 50 cents a ton more for mining than we have been paying them.

Notice to this effect have been posted today at all of our coal mines in Alabama.

The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company have about 3,000 miners employed and the increase in wages amounts to about 15 per cent.

"The people of this community have great cause to be congratulated, continued Mr. Baxter," on this advance in the price of iron and the increase in wages of miners, as Birmingham is more largely identified with the coal and iron industries than any other southern city. They will derive beneficial results from the advance in iron and wages. It means a great deal more money for distribution and circulation, and will attract labor."

Continuing, Mr. Baxter said:

"This advance in iron today brings it up to are prices of 1893, but is still lower than the prices that prevailed prior to the panic of 1893."

Mr. Baxter predicted that iron would go still higher this year even within a short time. In speaking of coal, Mr. Baxter said the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad company were opening the Henry-Ellen mines located twenty miles east of Birmingham, on the southern railway. By July 1, they will be ready to ship coal from the mine there. The company has spent a large amount of money cleaning out the mine at that point, which has been closed the past four years, and during the fall and winter they expect to make them a large amout of this very superior coal. The coal mines there is equal obtained from any mines in Alabama for grate uses.

Lumber is another article which is manufactured on an extensive scale in Alabama. A prominent lumber dealer stated yesterday, that he expected an advance in the price of lumber in a few days. He said lumber and iron usually rise and fall in about the same proportion. The demand for lumber he said, is good and the market displays considerable activity. The Jemison lumber company, located at Jemison, on the L. & N. road about fifty miles south of Birmingham has advanced the wages of its employes 12 1-2 per cent.

Will Call a Free Silver Convention.

MAXINKUSGEE, Ind., June 29. — At yesterday's session of the Midsummers democratic editorial association, resolutions were passed declaring that any declaration on the money question at this time would be unwise; that while opinions are forming and differences exist on the subject it is best not to cross the bridge until there is a necessity for it. Immediately after adjournment twenty-five free silver editors met and signed a call for a free silver convention but the time and place were left blank. Membership will not be confined to editors, but democrats only will be admitted.

REVIVAL OF BUSINESS.

It Must Be So, as That's What They All Say of It, Especially for the South.

NEW YORK, June 29.—Bradstreets today says:

Dominating business conditions of the week are continued by a large demand and further increases in prices of iron and steel which have surprised even the trade. The jump in rail prices and scarcity of the higher valuations for nails have tended to produce temporary scarcity.

With the further advances in prices of iron and steel should be coupled the rise of ½c per pound for wool, which apparently began its journey to higher level about a fortnight ago. Better quotations have also been made for cheaper grade woolen goods, 2½ cents per yard for prints, bessemer pig, billets, wheat, pork lard, hogs, shoes and copper, while declines in prices are recorded for flour corn, oats, coffee, cotton, naval stores and cattle. Sugar, coal and lumber are practically unchanged.

Business failures in the United States for the last six months as reported to Bradstreets, show a maked falling off in the second quarter of the past six months as was to be expected, but not such a decline relatively as in the second qearter of 1894 which resulted in a total for six months of 6,594, or one per cent more than last year. But the total liabilities have shrunk more than $3,000,000 from last year.

This shows of a general revival of business at the south but the merchants of most of the leading cities in that region report that demand continues very moderate and collections are slow. Cotton and fruit crops in the South Atlantic states promise well and the business outlook is reported encouraging. Incessant rains in Texas have hurt the crops.

R. G. Dun & Co., add:

The volume of business represented by exchanges through the principal clearing houses is for the past week 35.8 per cent larger than last year, a really surprising gain and only .7 of 1 per cent less than in 1892, while the average for the month is 28.8 per cent larger than last year and 7.1 per cent less than in 1892. The return is highly encouraging, in spite of the comparitive magnitude of speculative operations.

CONSTABLES AND WHISKY.

Three Men and a Mule Shot—What Will be the End of It?

SPARTANBURG, S. C., June 29.—Four constables went about five miles from here last night to intercept some whisky. On finding the wagon containing it, a fight took place in which constable Pettigrew was shot, and Jack Fisher and Bill Durham, of Trion, N. C. who were on the wagon were killed. It is also said that the driver, by the name of Brown, and one of the mules were also wounded.

The coroner held an inquest yesterday, and the verdict was that Fisher and Durham came to their deaths by gun shot wounds at the hands of parties unknown to the jury. The constables refused to give testimony and there were no other witnesses. It is believed that Fisher and Durham did not fire at all. Their guns were all loaded and the testimony was that they were shot while lying down in the wagon.

Sentenced for Life.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 29.—The state pardoning board yesterday commuted the sentence of William Jones, convicted of murdering his daughter, to life imprisonment. Jones was to be hanged on July 17, in company with Simms, the murderer of Policeman Minor. Jones is a negro and it is alleged that he ruined his daughter and killed her when she threatened to expose him. The girl was cut all to pieces. The evidence against Jones was circumstantial and many think not strong enough to convict.

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., June 29.—Another hold-up of the Klamath Falls and Ager stage occurred yesterday making the fifth within three months. ESCAPING THE NOOSE.

He Made a Plain and Profitable Explanation.

A boy came running up the street to the hotel and announced that they were going to lynch a man on the public square, and so we cut the dinner short and went over. There was a crowd of about forty rough-looking men, most of them from the Blue Ridge mountains, and in the miest of them was an "Indian doctor" who was selling a liver medicine. They had a rope around his neck, and though he looked rather pale, he hadn't lost any of his cheek. The landlord was a leading man in town, and as he made his way into the crowd and asked what was up an old mountaineer with hair two feet long replied for the crowd:

"We ar' jest a-gwine to hang him, Bill—that's all!"

"What yo' gwine to hang him fur?" queried the landlord.

"Fur lyin' and deceivin'. Down at Bristol, fo' weeks ago, him sold me a bottle of this stuff, and it laid me in bed fur two weeks. It was jest the same with five or six others."

"Hev you got anything to say?" was asked of the "doctor," who was calmly surveying the crowd around him.

"I hev," he replied. "I am charged with lyin' and decivin'. I deny it. Yere is a medicine that acts directly on the liver. It's purely vegetable. It was discovered by To-Wa-He, the celebrated Sioux chief, and I have been offered one thousand dollars for the secret of it. My friend here says he bought a bottle fur his liver and it made him sick."

"Mighty nigh killed me, it did!" said the old man.

"Yo' bought it fur yo'r liver, didn't yo'?"

"I did."

"But it didn't act on yo'r liver. Why not? Let's investigate a little. Hev yo' got a liver?"

"In co'se I hev! What sort of a varmint do yo' take me fur!"

"If yo' hev a liver please tell us whar' it's located?"

"Why, it's—it's—why—why—!"

But he couldn't tell. He looked around in a dazed and helpless way, and the crowd began to laugh.

"Kin any man in this crowd locate his liver?" asked the fakir.

No one cared to try it, and after a look around the man continued:

"I'm sellin' a liver medicine. If I sell to a man who hasn't got a liver the medicine naturally begins to work on his kidneys or lungs or spleen, and injures instead of benefits him. Am I expected to know who has a liver and who hasn't? Kin I go marchin' up and down this broad commonwealth asking every one I meet if he's provided with a liver? Of course not! I must take it fur granted that all of yo' are provided fur, and that thar is a basis fur my remedy to work on. Am I to be hung for that?"

"No!" No!" shouted a dozen voices, and five minutes later the "doctor" was passing out the dollar-bottles with one hand and taking in the dollar-bills with the other and saying to the people:

"Don't git onduly excited, good folks! This yere is a liver medicine. If yo' hain't got no liver it won't do yo' a durned bit of good. Be sure yo' ar' right and then come for'd and git the only purely vegetable remedy ever bestowed upon makind as a boon!"—Detroit Free Press.

An Obedient Boy.

A friend of mine has a little boy called Robbie, and Robbie is not at all an angel child. He is, in fact, the terror of the neighborhood. Not long ago his father bought him a bicycle and Robbie was more an object of dread to the neighbors than ever. One day he was detected in some particularly outrageous act, and his father, to punish him, forbade him to ride the bicycle for a whole week. Robbie promised, but as his father neared the home next day he saw his son whirling along on the wheel.

"Robbie," said he, more in sorrow than in anger, "didn't I tell you you were not to ride your wheel for a week?"

"Yes, sir," said Robbie, cheerfully, "and I'm not going to disobey you. This isn't my wheel. It's one I borrowed."—Washington Post.

In Easy Circumstances.

"Witness," said the lawyer in the police court the other day, "you speak of Mr. Smith being well off, is he worth five thousand dollars?"

"No, sah."

"Two thousand?"

"No, sah, he ain't worf twenty-five cents."

"Then, how is he well off?"

"Got a wife, who is a washerwoman, sah, and s'ports de hull fam'ly, sah."—Yonkers Blade.

An Exception to the Old Saw.

"They say—"

The German gentleman held the object out at arm's length.

"—that circumstances alter cases, but—" he smiled softly to himself.

"—no circumstance in the world can alter this sweitzer-kaso." Seizing a knife, he hurriedly cut into the limburger and devoured it ere the neighbors could complain to the board of health.—N. Y. World.

Miss Esmerelda—But suppose, Mr. Masher, that I tell you, in all seriousness, my entire fortune has been swept away, and that I am penniless. In that case, would you still say that you do love me?

Johnnie Masher—Well—er—I would say that I did love you.—Texas Siftings.

—Skillful as Ever.—Edward—"Isn't Dick going off in his writings?" Forrest—"I haven't noticed it." Edward—"It seems to me he has lost that exquisite delicacy of touch he used to have." THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, JULY 4, 1895.

If as much attention were paid to the pedigree of people as is bestowed on that of horses, then perhaps in time people would be as good looking as horses.

The price of southern farm lands is far below its real value, solely because we have not white farmers enough to occupy it. This will soon change as our population is rapidly increasing and those who buy now will reap the advantage of advanced prices.

White men need not thing so much of themselves. The population of the globe now amounts to 1,500,000,000. Of these, white people, practically including all the inhabitants of Asia except the Chinese, number only one-third. There are 630,000,000 Mongolians.

The next congress will open with at least twenty-six contested election cases to settle. The papers of that many have been received by the clerk of the house, formally "opened," and turned over to the public printer to put them in shape for the consideration of the proper committee.

Does every young man realize that the eyes of the community are upon him? That every debauch and every departure from the path of rectitude is known and is laid up against him? That whenever a position of trust or profit is to be filled these shortcomings which he thinks do not amount to much and which nobody knows, rise up and stand in his way?

The crop report of the commissioner of agriculture for Alabama shows a decrease in acreage of 14 per cent., compared with last year, an increase of corn acreage of 13 per cent; a decrease of oats acreage of 6 per cent; an increase of Irish potato acreage of 3 per cent; and an increase of tobacco acreage of 4 per cent. Cotton is backward and in poor condition owing to the cold weather in May; corn is in excellent condition; other crops and fruits generally are in good shape.

General James H. Lane has been made statistical agent for the states of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana for the agricultural department, the three states having been grouped as one division and numbered seven. The General has been for several years the statistical agent for Alabama and the appointment is a just recognition of his splendid services in that position. General Lane is eminently fitted for the position and his promition is well deserved.

The wave of workers' prosperity has reached the iron and coal region of the South. Wages are advancing with the price of iron. Some 10,000 men, so far, have been affected; and it is but a question of time when the whole industrial force of the South, will get more for its work, because the masters, through better prices for product, are able to pay more. The South and the country are now in the rising condition they were in in 1886, the year that followed the two low price and hard time years, 1884-85. Before the end of 1896 shall be reached, the country will be in the midst of such solid prosperity as it has not experienced before, in a quarter century; and this fact will be apt to set the politicial quid nunes' predictions all abroad. That race isn't yet lost to the democrats.

It begins to look as if only rich men's sons could secure a college education in this country any more. The average expenses of a student at Yale are now over $900 a year. The clerk, school teacher or book-keeper who can earn that much money in a year is considered fortunate in these times. There is little encouragement for the poor boy to work his way through college, since expenses have increased so greatly at all our highest institutions of learning. They have become a sort of educational aristocracy. It looks so hopeless for any young man, however gifted, to undertake to pay his own college expenses. On the other hand, too, the most gifted young men of the country are apt to be poor men's sons—not rich ones. Thus the very ones who would do most honor to a college training are the ones debarred from getting it. The only satisfaction in the case is the reflection that a college education is not necessary to success. The brilliant, determined young man or woman can climb the hill without it. Under the circumstances the best thing is to make our public schools the best in the world, so as to compensate to some extent poor young men and women for what they have lost by the vanishing from their reach of the college course. Even if they entered and undertook to dress and live cheaply they would feel like the ugly duckling of the story, and a sensitive person could not endure it.

WHAT PLUCK AND ENERGY WILL DO.

The following taken from the Montgomery Advertiser, shows what pluck and energy has done for Cullman county, and that, too, when times were not as propitious for planting colonies in this state as they are now:

"In 1872 John G. Cullman, who previous to that time had been a clerk in a Philadelphia store, conceived the idea of locating a German colony in North Alabama. Although the soil at the place selected was considered poor, Mr. Cullman was sanguine that German thrift and energy would be equal to developing it and felt very confident that his enterprise would be a success. In the spring of 1873 about fourteen families, who had recently arrived in the north from Germany, located there; but for several years few others could be induced to join them. Mr. Cullman's faith in the success of his colony never wavered, however, and in 1875 he succeeded in getting a charter for the town of Cullman, and in 1877 a new county was established, and given the same name. The undoveloped state of the country may be estimated when it is known that the taxes from all sources in 1876 did not aggregate $500.

"That Mr. Cullman was a man of great foresight and was wise in clinging to his colony, is shown by the fact that the city of Cullman now has a population of more than 2,000, and is growing fast, has a large furniture factory, a grist mill, three cigar factories, four cotton gins, one box and coop factory, one winery and an ice plant. The population in the county is more than 15,000. The city of Cullman has educational and religious facilities equal to those of the most progressive cities of similar size in the country, and her social advantages compare favorably with much older communities.

"In agriculture and fruit growing the development has been marvelous and stands as a grand monument to German thrift. In 1878 the number of bales of cotton shipped to market was 53, but in 1894 the enterprising farmers sold 9,000 bales. The strawberry crop brought to these people this season the nice little sum of $15,000, and all indications are that the peach crop will realize a larger amount.

"This is the result of the work of one man in a portion of the state that had no especial advantages over other sections and was considered by some to be inferior. He was confronted by adverse circumstances and conditions, but in spite of them considered in developing a large section of country and inaugurating industrial enterprises and profitable agriculture, that was amazing to men of less foresight. What has been done in Cullman can be repeated in every county in the state. Instead of having to fight adverse circumstances as John G. Cullman did, the promoters of colonies now have but to offer reasonable inducements to western or northern farmers to get thousands of them to come here. The farmers of the drouth-stricken west and frozen north, are but waiting a favorable opportunity to come to us. If the owners of the agricultural lands and the various industrial associations throughout the state would join hands and go systematically to work and make arrangements whereby immigrants could secure homes in Alabama without a large outlay of ready cash, the history of Cullman would be repeated as many times as there are counties in the state."

Two Women Fight a Duel.

Daisy Mattingly and Rebecca Fordyce, partners in a miners' boarding house at Johns, Ala., were rivals for the affections of one of their boarders, Jesse Milligan, a miner. Saturday after an animated debate over the beloved swain they become involved in a personal encounter. The Mattingly woman used a case knife and the Fordyce girl a club. The result of the combat was the death of the Fordyce girl and the probable death of the other.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-wonths-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

CURED BY USING

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Several years ago, my blood was in bad condition, my system all run down, and my general health very much impaired. My hands were covered with large sores, discharging all the time. I had no strength nor energy and my feelings were miserable in the extreme. At last, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon noticed a change for the better. My appetite returned and with it, renewed strength. Encouraged by these results, I kept on taking the Sarsaparilla, till I had used six bottles, and my health was restored."—A. A. Towns, prop. TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

This is the glorious Fourth. Does anybody notice it?

C. L. O'Neal, of Calera, was in town a few hours yesterday.

Dr. T. G. Nelson and Walter Hubbard, were in town Tuesday.

This promises to be the record-breaking year both for heat and cold.

The County Medical Society held its regular monthly meeting Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christian, of Bessemer, are on a visit here to relatives.

C. T. Davidson, a prominent merchant of Helena, was in town Monday and Tuesday.

Miss Elva Greek returned home Saturday from an extended visit with friends in Calera.

The watermelon season is now on and the railroads are carrying melons north by the hundreds.

Mrs. Wilson, widow of the late Henry Wilson, arrived in Columbiana on the noon train Monday.

A splendid poem, by Miss Ozella Harrell, is omitted for want of space. It will appear next week.

Hog cholera is killing hogs by the score in this vicinty. Several having lost nearly all they owned.

E. S. Lyman and family, of Montevallo, were guests of the family of W. B. Browne the latter part of last week.

The base ball club has erected a grand stand on their grounds with a seating capacity of 125, which should be filled at every game.

The semi-annual report of the commissioners showing the disposition of the peoples money for the past six months will be found in this issue.

FOR SALE.—A mower and rake, both good as new, dirt cheap for cash.
EVANDER MORRISON,

Commissioners court was in session Monday and until noon Tuesday. This board will meet again next Monday to fix the tax rate for the next year.

A Cincinnati firm exhibits a chicken with two pairs of eyes. The chicken with four pairs of drumsticks and no liver is familiar in every boarding-house.

The Childersburg and Calera base ball clubs have cancelled their engagements to play the Columbiana team. What's the matter, boys, afraid to tackle them?

R. B. Posey, of Harpersville, sent us the first cotton bloom of this season. He counted five on one stalk the first of last week. Jake usually "gets there" along with the first.

J. T. Leeper has gone to the University of Virginia, where he will take a special course in law. Ollie is one of our bright young men of whom we may well feel proud.

If our merchants were to advertise and bring a little business into the town it would not only work a hardship on the proprietors and clerks, but the chairs would get cold, so cold.

The Shelby Iron Works will resume operation in a month or six weeks. The large store house has been repaired and thoroughly cleaned for the reception of a large stock of general merchandise.

Lon Cater has secured employment with the Anniston pipe works, having gone there last Wednesday, his household effects and family following him on Saturday. May success attend him for he is deserving of the best.

It is truthfully claimed that the best way to judge a town is by the enterprise shown by its business men through the columns of the local paper. That being the case one would certainly conclude, after a glance at The Chronicle, that Columbiana ought to be buried.

John W. Moore, county agent of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Association, has a card in this issue to which attention is directed. By his method the farmers have a safe insurance at a trifling cost, and we feel sure he will meet with splendid success in this county. Read his card.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the disease for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Something new, even in the matter of "standing off" the preacher, has been discovered, and in Kansas. When the new dominie called on Farmer Tom Wilson, of Rock Creek, Jefferson county, a week or so since for a donation toward his salary, Mr. Wilson said he had no money, but would give two rows of potatoes, each twenty rods long. "If the Lord wants you to get $20 from me," said the farmer, "He will water the potatoes well, and I will be mighty glad to have you get it; if He doesn't water them, I'm afraid you'll not get much."

Each His Own Weather Prophet.

Every man who owns a bicycle is now his own weather prophet. He holds in his hand the long-sought solution of the problem how to make rain.

If his wheel gets muddy and he lets it stay so, clear weather will be assured. If he attemps to clean off the mud a shower will be the result within twelve hours. If he cleans and polishes the machine so that it shines like new, a terrific thunder shower will fall as soon as he attemps to go for a ride.

A large number of wheelmen have found this to be a fact, and as you cannot ride a wheel during wet weather, the fact that so many muddy wheel are seen proves that they are left dirty so as to avert a rain-storm.—Louisville Post.

THE GIRLS' INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

MR. EDITOR—Please state in your valuable paper the intention of the Industrial School for Girls, and what it proposes to teach? How much does the state pay? Who can send? How long are the terms? ENQUIRER.

We will answer Enquirer's questions in the order given. First—What is the intention of the Industrial School for Girls, and what does it propose to teach?

The object is to establish and maintain a (see code, section 6) first-class industrial school for the education of white girls in the State of Alabama in industrial and scientific branches, at which said girls may acquire a thorough normal education, together with a knowledge of kindergarten instruction and music; also a knowledge of telegraphy, stenography, photography and phonography, type-writing, printing, book-keeping, indoor carpentry, electrical construction, clay-modeling, architectural and mechanical drawing, sewing, dress-making, millinery, cooking, laundry, house, sign and fresco painting, home nursing, plumbing, and such other practical industries as, from time to time, to them may be suggested by experience or tend to promote the general object of said girls' industrial school, to-wit: fitting and preparing such girls for the practical industries of the age.

2d—How much does the state pay, and who can send?

(See code, section 11). As soon as said institution is prepared to receive pupils or students in three or more of the industrial studies hereinbefore enumerated, the said trustees shall apportion to each county its quota of scholars on the basis of the educable white girls between the ages of fourteen and twenty-one, in the state and several counties, and one pupil from each congressional district, whose tuition and board shall be absolutely free and this number shall be increased from time to time as in the judgment of the trustees the finances of said institution shall warrant. Said free scholarships shall be awarded at the annual meeting of the girls' industrial school upon the recommendation of the trustee from the congressional district from which said pupil is appointed, and the several superintendents of education in the counties shall advertise it in some newspaper published in said county, and after the expiration of two weeks from said advertisement, shall, by and with the approval of the county commissioners or court of county revenues, commission such number of white girls to said institution as such county is entitled to. The presentation of such certificate, over the signature of the probate judge of said county, shall entitle the person so commissioned to admission into said school, with all its privileges for the course of study selected; Provided, that the appointing board shall give the preference to the applicants least able to educate themselves if they have the requisite qualifications; Provided, however, that nothing in the provisions of this act shall be held to prevent any white girl in this state from attending said school upon the payment of her board and tuition.

3d—How long are the terms?

The are is no limit prescribed, but it is reasonable to suppose that the ordinary scholastic term of nine months will be adopted.

OBITUARY.

Hon. Henry Wilson

Has left the deeds which he has done,
Has left the glories he has won.

The angel reaper has visited the sacred precincts of a happy home; triumphed over the glories of manhood, the towerings of a gifted mind, and, borne hence as his trophy one of the grandeurs of earth.

Mr. Wilson was indeed a noble man, a deep thinker and an eloquent expounder of the law. He recognized the responsibility of duty, and the imperative need of the hour was ever appreciated by him. He knew the world its many trials, its bitter combats, defeats and victories, but he lived, in the memorable words of Lincoln, "with malice towards none, and charity for all." In his sympathy he was as impulsive and tender as a woman. He was friend, counselor and benefactor of the widow and orphan. In hours of trial and grief he and his lovely wife were ever ready with words of comfort, sympathy and advice.

May she be comforted and look forward to the day when this grief will be turned to joy; this separation to one long uniting in the great beyond.

He has gone where the laurels of earth are not fame;
But with the heroes of heaven to proclaim.

St. Louis, Mo. M.

Mrs. Priscilla Robertson.

On Sunday at 1 o'clock p. m. June 23, 1895, the spirit of Mrs. Priscilla Robertson departed from its mortal abode to dwell forever in the city whose builder and maker is God. She was born in North Carolina. Her father Leonard Bullock moved to the city of Montgomery this state when she was quite young where she was raised and married to Edward McGowan her first husband. From there they moved to Shelby county, where her husband died about 1836; leaving her with four small boys, two of whom soon followed their father; the other two having been raised are now our worthy citizens Jim and George W. McGowan. Her second marriage was to H. B. Robertson who died in 1855 leaving her the second time a widow. Two daughters were born to them, who still remain in the land of the dying. The oldest Mrs. Martha Penington with whom her mother lived until death; and Mrs. Guss Ballard, of Talladega county. Mrs. Robertson was a consistent member of the M. E. church south, since early childhood. She was a true christian, a devout mother, a kind neighbor and full of charity for the poor; which is one of the strong traits of true christianity. Her health had been failing for the past 2 or 3 years very rapidly and she had been heard to say on different occasions that she wished the Lord was ready for her. On her last birthday (Jan. 24th) she had all of her children to dine with her and told them that it was the last one for her on this earth but she wanted them all to meet in heaven to be separated no more. During her last illness she was heard to say, there is no use in giving me medicine, it will do no good. She had a happy home here, but owing to her age, 82 years and 5 months, she was anxious to be with her Saviour. Her funeral was preached by her pastor at the church to a large congregation who followed the remains to the cemetery where we laid them to rest. Loving children and relatives, weep not, your loss is heavens gain.

OUT-DOOR SPORTS.

I rejoice in the popularization of out-door sports. I hail the croquet grounds, and the fisherman's rod, and the sportsman's gun. In our cities life is so unhealthy and unnatural that when the census-taker represents a city as having 400,000 inhabitants, there are only 200,000, since it takes about two men to amount to only one man, so depleting and unnerving and exhausting is this metropolitan life. We want more fresh air, more sunlight, more of the abandon of field sports. I cry out for it in behalf of the Church of God, as well as in behalf of secular interests. I wish that every winter our ponds, and our rivers, and our Capitoline grounds might be all aquake with the heel and the shout of the swift skater. I wish that when the warm weather comes, the graceful oar might dip the stream, and the eventide be resonant with boatman's song, the bright prow splitting the crystalline billow. We shall have the smooth and grassy lawn, and we will call out people of all occupations and professions and ask them to join in the ball-player's sport. You will come back from these out-door exercises and recreations with strength in your arm, and color in your cheek, and a flash in your eye, and courage in your heart. In this great battle that is opening against the kingdom of darkness we want not only a consecrated soul, but a strong arm and stout lungs and mighty muscles. I bless God that there are so many recreations that have not on them any taint of iniquity; recreations in which we may engage for the strengthening of the body, for the clearing of the intellect, for the illumination of the soul.—T. DeWitt Talmage.

The Misses Mollie Glenn, Catharine Owens, Waldo Christian and Ozella Harrell, mounted in the hack and were driven to the lone forest, where the oxlip and the nodding violets grow; where the mocking bird was perched within the leafy vale, mimicking the songs of its surrounding neighbors; where the thrush, with his six notes, chanted sweetly and plaintively to his mate which was nestling her young near by; thence to the plum nursery where they filled their baskets with the luscious fruit; thence home, feeling exceedingly recreated and happy. Their coachman was a gentleman over sixty summers, whom they recommend as a safe driver.

Sketches of the History of Shelby County.

BY REV. E. B. TEAGUE.

No. 12.

I must dispatch Cahawba valley in a single number. This will be sufficient, I suppose, when it is stated that it differs little in general characteristics from Coosa valley; and therefore, much that has been said of the one is equally applicable to the other.

As before stated, it consists of a long, narrow vale of some twenty-five miles in length within the county, broader at the lower end on the Bibb county line, averaging two and a half to three miles in width. It is a red lime valley, originally very fertile. Still so, in the main, having attracted first attention, and having been at once thickly settled, 1816 to 1820. This population naturally suggested the first location of the court house, afterward removed by the vote of the more extensive territory of Coosa valley. The low mountains on either side are, that on the east freestone, that on the west limestone; the former affording abundant sandstone for building purposes; this true, indeed, I believe of both. I may say here, that in crossing the mountains from Cahawba to Jones' valley, I once noticed vast amounts of flag stones of every thickness, in squares from a foot to several feet in size. These, I have heard, are being utilized in Birmingham. I know, from a mere glance, they are of admirable character. Of the vast coal deposits, particularly of the lower borders of the valley, I need not speak, having only a general personal knowledge of them in common with everybody else, having had no response from Mr. Aldrich, from whom I requested a reliable account. The lower end of the valley presents large exposures of lime rock, manufactured extensively into the finest grade of lime, particularly around Siluria, the lime rock covering the surface being the only exception to general agriculture adaptation.

To distinguish a little, the Montevallo section, drained by Shoal creek, affording for many miles up and down the finest water power, long utilized to considerable extent, was once amazingly fertile to the very tops of the hills. The level portions, quite extensive over an area of five or six miles in diameter, are still so; and the "clay," so-called, exposed by washing, needs only a little intermixture of vegetable matter to produce again like the virgin soil. The hill sides, soil divested of vegetable matter, will one day be terraced, re-supplied with vegetable mould and restored to original productiveness. One thing the matter with our people is, they have too much land; consequently permit much of it to go to waste, whereas recuperation would be cheaper than cutting away more forest. What I have said as to fine "clay" being really soil, is proved by the test on the lot front of Mrs. Lyman's residence in Montevallo.

Above the Montevallo district the whole length of the valley is singularly fertile, the average fertility of Cahawba valley surpassing that of Coosa, even of the Harpersville section. In both valleys the level red lands are proving more durable than the prairies of the "black belt." Even the "white flats," as they used to be called, often marring fine plats of red land, fit only for oats and rice on account of a superabundance of lime, mixed with a little clay and sand, become very fertile, rich "basins."

Of course, Cahawba valley, and adjoining hills, is fitted to produce all the crops I have mentioned in these papers, only more abundantly. Its healthfulness has always been proverbial. There is not a more favored spot on the globe.

Now the sole motive of writing these sketches has been the interest I feel in a people among whose ancestry I spent my boyhood and among whom I am spending my later years. Though in other parts forty years of mid-life, I can truly say of my old county:

My heart untraveled ever turned to thee,

A pretty wide acquaintance with other portions of the South at least, has fully impressed me with the conviction that there is no better country. If the facts to which I have called attention serve in any way to impress others as myself, I shall be amply rewarded. So, pour prendre conge.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y. on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Madam Boisvert.

I am a mid-wife and have been giving McElree's Wine of Cardui and Black Draught tea to my lady patients, both during pregnancy and after birth as a tonic, and have found the treatment will do more than is claimed for it. Two years ago I was so troubled with female weakness myself, that I could not work at all. I heard McElree's Wine of Cardui recommended, and got six bottles of it, and a mammoth package of Thedford's Black-Draught. I began the treatment as directed, and in two weeks I had improved so much I could do my work, and have never been troubled with it since.

Tells Stories and Gives the News From Rocky Creek.

They Talk About Hot Weather and Hard Times—"But Who in the Thunder Is Disputin of It?"—A Mighty Confusionment.

(Copyright 1895.)

"I have took notice all my life that along about this time of year we most in generally have some sort of weather," said Uncle Dan'l Rutherford to the crowd over at the Cross Roads one day. And the good old man was plum right about that. It is more than probable to be cold in the winter and chilly in the spring and hot in the summer and cool in the fall. But at any rates, along about this time of year we most in generally have some sort of weather.

Hot Weather and Hard Times.

About all the mainest news that you can hear down in this strip of country nowadays is hot weather and hard times. Everybody you meet up with has got somethin to say in regards to the hot weather and the hard times. If I strike up with one of the neighbors in town or along the big road he may give the crops and religion a lick or two in passin, but the mainest things, you understand, is the monstrous hot weacher and the orful hard times. It makes me plum weak and weary in the legs, and it puts me in mind of a story I have heard Aunt Nancy Newton tell, about the time when Jake Ballentine got struck by lightnin and killed.

That was years and years ago down in the Panther Creek settlement. One day Jake was plowin down in his new ground. A thunder storm come up and he run under a big tree to keep out of the rain. About that time a streak of blue lightnin struck the tree, and when the dust settled and the smoke blowed away, you understand, Jake Ballentine had went the way of all human flesh.

The news spread fast and furious through the settlement and the neighbors come pilin in one by one to see the sad sight.

Now it likewise also come to pass that old man Hiram Lucas was about the first man on the ground. He was on his return back from town and "tanked up," you understrnd, to about six bits in the dollar. He stood there over the shattered remains of Jake Ballentine and saw the neighbors come and go.

One man would come up with a sad face and a solemcholy voice and say:

"Poor Jake, he's dead."

Then another one would come along and gaze down at the dead body and then bresh away a tear and say:

"Poor Jake, he's dead."

And another one would come up and heave a long, deep sigh and shake his head and remark:

"Poor Jake, he's dead."

Well, things went on about that way for an hour or so till finally at last old man Hiram got sick and tired listenin to the same thing over and over and over. By-and-by another man come up cryin and sighin and remarked that poor Jake was dead, and that was jest one more than the old man could stand.

"Of course Jake is dead," says old man Hiram. "Any blame fool would know that. He died a most tremendius orful death, and he is dead, dead, dead. But who in the thunder is disputin of it?"

So that's what makes me tell you what I do about the hot weather and the hard times. We are more than probable to have hard times about this time of year, and we most in generally have some hot weather along in the summer. But who in the thunder is disputin of it?

Most Terriblest Confusionment.

They had the gonebyest time and the most terriblest confusionment you ever heard tell of over at the Cross Roads one day last week, whereas the Rocky Creek Academy is now split and busted from Dan unto Habersham, as it were.

It is all past and over with now. The devilment is done, and I don't mind givin up the general facts in the case as they have leaked out and come to pass. Some two weeks ago it seems as if a gang of the school boys got together one Saturday night and went out on a little wayside frolic. They had plenty of music along with them, and by some unhappy hook or mercrook they run into a wildcat still somewheres over in the hill country. Consequentiallly, you understand, there was one boy in the gang that got more than his share of the spojls and didn't show up no more till late Sunday evenin. And that boy's name was Billy George Randle, which up to that time he was way yonder the most brightest boy in school and stood way up head in all his classes.

But Professor Castleberry, the general boss of the school, is a monstrous nice man and the most allfiredest temperance epistle you ever heard tell of. He don't so much as use tobacco and he wouldn't even drink a cup of coffee for the headache. The other boys didn't give Billy George away, but whensomever there is any devilment in the air the Professor can smell a cold trail two miles off, and so finally at last the facts in the case leaked out and come to light. Then the Professor put right in and called a meetin of the school board to take up the case. And right along there, you understand, is where the Professor dropped the jug and spilt his molasses. When the board come together he lit in and brought up the case agin Billy George right there before the whole entire school and the Trustees to boot. He pitched in he did and made one of these blood and thunder, sky-scrapin temperance speeches and wanted the Board to take Billy George by the nap of his neck and the seat of his breeches, as it were, and fire him bodaciously out of the school.

Somethin Was Bound to Drap.

When at last the Professor got out of breath and run down and stopped, a tremendious big silence fell on the general crowd. Then presently Luke Staggers, the youngest son of Jeems W. Staggers and the biggest boy in school, rose up from amongst the boys and lowed he would love to say a few brief words to the Board in regards to the case and on behalf of his friend and fellow servant, Billy George Randle. And the Board told him he could go ahead and have his say.

It was years and years ago when I first scraped up acquaintance with the Staggerses, you understand, but I know the stock they come from, and I know the mettle and the breedin of the stock. So when Luke untied them long legs of his that day, and stood up there amongst the boys his face was as white as a sheet, but there was thunder in his voice and lightnin in his eye, and I knowed good and well that a storm was risin and somethin was bound to drap.

"Mister President and gentlemen of the Board," says Luke slow and easy like at first but warmin up as he went on, "wrong is always wrong and right is forever right. It aint none of my business to whitewash Billy George Randle. I am sorry and he is sorry and we are all sorry that he let his foot slip and fell. It was wrong—everybody knows it was wrong—and we don't even try to make out like it was right. But to a man up a tree it don't look right for the Professor to haul that boy up here before the board and before the whole entire school and raise this mighty rumpus on account of one little slippance. I want even in the crowd that Saturday night, not because I am sproutin any wings to speak of, but because I didn't git the news in time. I don't drink whisky for common and neither does Billy George, and it mought of been me as well as him. I would love to ask the Professor if he ever was a boy onest upon a time, and then I would love for him to stand up and tell you if he has always walked upright and perfect in the ten commandments."

The Professor didn't stand up, which I reckon it must of been a good time of year for him to keep his seat and say nothin, whilst Luke went on:

"What's the use of this great public stir and confusionment except to give Billy George the heartache as well as the headache? It don't help the Professor and it don't help the school, but it makes that poor boy fell like he would love to swap himself off for a yaller dog and then shoot the dog. I am not tryin to make wrong look right, but the most brighestest boy in this school is Billy George Randle, and in spite of the past, and with all of his faults, he is brave and white and true. If a man was to fall overboard out in the ocean would the old ship throw him a rope, or would she sail on and leave him there to drown? God Almighty has put into Billy George Randle plenty of materials for the makin of a man. This school needs him, Rocky Creek needs him, and the world will need him in her business. You can make a mountain out of the molehill and crush him, if you will. You can heap coals of fire on his head and send him forth to face a storm of public disgrace. You can do that if you want to. Maybe that mought please the Professor. But for the comin manhood of Rocky Creek, I stand here flatfooted and erect and tell you, face to face, when you do that these boys will follow me, and by the livin and dead we will go home, and you can take your measly old schoolhouse and go to the orful torments with it."

By this time, you understand, Luke Staggers had put the pot to bilin, and the general excitement was so thick in the air till a little more and you could of hit it with a stick. One member of the Board, Deacon Joiner, sided with the Professer, but the Board stood four to one for keepin Billy George in school where he belonged. Whereas the Professor got his back up and quit and the Deacon pulled out from the Board and went off home in a high huff. Whereas the whole entire school had to bust up and take out and quit for the summer.

We will now consequentially have to hire a new Professor to open up the school next fall. But in the main time, you understand, Rocky Creek is standin by her boys. It was wrong—it was mighty wrong—for the boys to go out that Saturday night and back themselves into a wildcat still. But at the same time we can't make angels out of healthy boys, and the world is lookin to Billy George Randle for the makin of a man by-and-by.

The Free Silver Question.

Here lately I have heard a whole passle of talk with regards to the great question of free silver. Now as for me, I don't try to make out like I know anything about it, and from all I can see and hear I have come to the conclusion that the common run of people know as much about it as I do, and we all know just as much about it as Andy Lucas and Blev Scroggins know about the Lord's Prayer. Blev and Andy got into a little private rucus on that pint one day.

"You don't even know the Lord's Prayer, Blev," says Andy.

"Who, me?" says Blev. "Of course I know it. I learnt it at my mother's knee when I was nothin but a kid."

"Bet you a dollar you can't say it," says Andy.

"I'll take that bet and win on a certainty," says Blev and they put up the money.

"Now go ahead, Blev, and let me hear you say it," says Andy.

Blev he then started off with that beautiful little trundle bed racket:

"Now I lay me down to sleep
"I pray thee Lord my soul to keep
"If I should die before I wake"——

"Hold on right there, Blev," says Andy, "I give it up. The money is yours and you win it fair, but by gatins I had no idea you knowed it."

PRINCE OF COACHMEN.

Notable Events in the Career of Albert Hawkins.

Presidents Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland and Harrison Were Driven by Him to Their Inaugural Ceremonies.

[Special Washington Letter.]

Albert Hawkins was once a conspicuous character in this city, but his glory has become a reminiscence. Nevertheless, among the colored people he is a hero, to whose statements they listen with rapt attention. Probably no man of his race, except Frederick Douglass, personally knew so many presidents and public men as Albert Hawkins. He was the white house coachman for many years, but his services were dispensed with early in the Harrison administration. He was given employment as messenger in the interior department, and there he proved to be as faithful in that capacity as he had been in his more important position.

Everybody used to know Albert Hawkins. He was particularly proud and conspicuously self-conscious on inauguration days. When the bands were playing and the troops were marching from the white house to the capitol for the inauguration of a president, and back again up Pennsylvania avenue in grand review, Albert Hawkins sat upon his box and handled the reins, directing the four handsome horses which drew the barouche in which the president and the ex-president were seated. The thousands of men, women and children who filled all available space and made the welkin ring with their cheers saw not only the two great men as they passed by, but they also saw the big black man who sat so high and looked so proud. Albert knew this, but his eyes never turned to the right nor to the left. He watched his horses, and made them feel the fact that a careful and skillful driver was directing their movements and constantly holding them in check.

As time passed by Albert Hawkins became accustomed to pomp, parade and panoply of war, and the number of his friends increased. Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison—all of them were driven by him in proud procession to the capitol and to the white house. He was also the driver for these presidents during their terms of office; and many a state secret he overheard while driving a president and some statesman friend over the hills and heights surrounding this city. But never a word came from his lips concerning those things which were involuntarily intrusted to him in confidence. One evening after the death of Mr. Blaine, however, in conversation with a long-time friend, he said: "Mr. Garfield is gone, Mr. Conkling is gone, and now Mr. Blaine is gone. I drove President Garfield and Secretary Blaine to the soldiers' home one Sunday afternoon when the whole story of the New York collectorship was talked over. When I drew rein at the white house that evening I knew that Mr. Robertson was to be the collector at New York; but I never said anything. It was none of my business. It is none of my business now, either. I will not tell you what was said, but the conversation was earnest and somewhat exciting. You know that Mr. Conkling resigned from the senate soon afterwards. Then came an awful row, big men were at the white house early and late. Senators were sending mounted messengers, answers were being returned, everybody was crazy except Mr. Garfield. Congress adjourned, and then Mr. Garfield was shot at the depot. His poor wife suffered as he suffered. I often drove the carriage for her and Miss Mollie when they were out for an hour or two for fresh air. There were many tears shed in my presence. Well, then came Mr. Blaine's time to run for the presidency. I suppose everybody knows how he was defeated. But the real cause of Mr. Blaine's defeat dated from that Sunday afternoon drive, for that was when the awful row commenced."

For four years Albert was quietly at work in the interior department, but when Mrs. Cleveland came to Washington in February, 1893, the old man called to pay his respects. He informed Mrs. Cleveland that he was no longer the white house coachman, and was lifted to the seventh heaven of delight when that gracious and beautiful lady said: "But you shall drive on inauguration day, Albert, if you would like to." And so it happened that upon Mr. Cleveland's second inauguration Albert Hawkins held the ribbons for the last time. He is growing old, and does not feel strong enough to fill the responsible position. No accident ever happened to any president nor to any member of the executive family while he was coachman, and he thinks that younger, stronger hands than his should now draw rein in that important position.

During the early days of his service Albert was accustomed to driving four horses for the presidential coach, but latterly our presidents have been less ostentatious, and two horses have been regarded as sufficient. It was not considered bad taste for President Grant to ride behind four horses and he constantly did so, and in those days it was the customary way for the president to go about, but President Hayes didn't like it and so the custom lapsed for four years and was only fitfully revived by President Arthur. That the latter preferred to drive that way was evident, for in summer he frequently took an airing behind the four high-stepping bays which he owned; for Mr. Arthur was as pronounced a lover of horses as Gen. Grant, and he frequently visited the white house stables.

Albert was always there, and the horses knew him well. He was very kind to them, giving them apples, lumps of sugar and bits of candy, which they relished and whinnied for whenever their driver's black face appeared in the doorway. President Arthur's bays would follow their black master all around the stable grounds, and even up and down Seventeenth street clear to the fish ponds near the monument. The old man always had a love for horses and the correlative faculty of making his dumb servants love him. He always taught them their individuality by impressing their names upon their brains; so that, when driving four horses, if any one of them needed an admonition the mention of his name by the driver on the box would almost mesmerize the animal. They all knew his voice, and he was so gentle with them that they responded to his appeals or commands with alacrity.

"Horses are more intelligent than their drivers in many cases," said Albert, recently. "They understand their business better, too. Why, I never walk down the avenue a single day without losing my temper, because there is always some hard-hearted fellow with reins in one hand and whip in the other beating or jerking the mouth of some faithful, intelligent horse who is doing his best, but trying in vain to respond to the will or whim of the brute behind him who is torturing the animal without cause. I do not think that any driver should be allowed to drink liquor. Many a horse and many a wife have suffered from the unreasonable meanness of a man with whisky in his blood. It makes brutes of men. I have seen so much of it in drivers, and that has made me notice it in men who treat their families no better than they treat their horses. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is a good society. There was a man named Bergh in New York started it. I saw him once in Washington, and congratulated him on the good work that he was doing.

"No, I was never nervous when driving for the presidents," said Albert, "after I had been serving Gen. Grant for a little while. They are like all other men, except that great men are always more considerate than ordinary men. I have known subordinate government officials to talk to their drivers as masters used to talk to slaves. But no president or cabinet officer ever spoke unkindly to me. They are all kind, high-minded men. Yes, I was nervous when I commenced to serve Gen. Grant, but I soon found that he was just like other men, only better and kinder. I never felt so proud as the day I was driving President Hayes and Mr. Garfield from the white house to the capitol. You see the 'governor's guards' came here as a special escort for Mr. Garfield. They were from Columbus, O., and were all fine looking men on horseback, with big yellow plumes in their helmets. They surrounded the barouche, and they were awful proud, because Mr. Hayes and Mr. Garfield were both from Ohio, and Mr. Hayes had been governor of that state before he was president. It was a sort of a big Ohio day and the 'governor's guards' were the big men of the occasion. They rode handsome horses, and everybody cheered as we went down the broad avenue. There was a snowstorm in the morning, but the sun came out, melted the snow, and the street was smooth and glittering as glass. I sat up on the box, proud as any of them. I was in my prime, and I was the greatest driver on earth. I knew that everybody who saw the 'governor's guards' also saw me sitting up higher and grander than any of them, and I was awful proud. Of course I never said so then, but I can say so now. It was the greatest inauguration I ever saw, except the second time Mr. Cleveland came into the presidency. That was the greatest day and the stormiest day I ever saw for any inauguration."

The McLeans Ahead.

The following is an amusing instance of the tenacity with which the Highlanders hold to the honors and antiquity of their kindred. A dispute arose between Campbell and McLean upon the never-ending subject. McLean would not allow that the Campbells had any right to rank with the McLeans in antiquity, who, he insisted, were in existence as a clan from the beginning of the world. Campbell has a little more Biblical lore than his antagonist, and asked him if the Clan McLean lived before the flood. "Flood! What flood?" said McLean.

"The flood that you know drowned all the world but Noah and his family and his flocks," said Campbell.

"Pooh! you and your flood," said McLean; "my clan was before the flood."

"I have not read in my Bible," observed Campbell, "of the name of McLean going into Noah's ark."

"Noah's ark," retorted McLean, in contempt; "who ever heard of a McLean that had not a boat of his own?"—Household Words.

TO USE THE KNIFE

And Submit to a Painful Operation—This the Doctors Advised as the Only Hope, the Case Being a Critical One—The Happy Termination of a Deep-Rooted Prejudice.

Mr. Lincoln Nelson, of Hartville, Mo., had an interesting experience with the doctors recently, and was on the verge of a painful surgical operation. He writes: "I hereby add my unqualified endorsement of your excellent remedy, S. S. S. For six years I have been a sufferer from a scrofulous affection of the glands of my neck, and all efforts of physicians in Washington, D. C., Springfield, Ill., and St. Louis failed to reduce the enlargement. After six months' constant treatment here my physician urged me to submit to a removal of the gland. At this critical moment a friend recommended S. S. S., and laying aside a deep-rooted prejudice against all patent medicines, I began its use. Before I had used one bottle the enlargement began to disappear, and now it is entirely gone, and I am almost cured. I am not through with my second bottle yet. Had I only used your S. S. S. years ago, I could have escaped years of misery and saved over $150. If this endorsement will serve you in any way, use it."

This experience is like that of all who suffer with deep-seated blood troubles. The doctors can do no good, and even their resorts to the knife prove either fruitless or fatal. S. S. S. is the only real blood remedy. It gets at the root of the disease, and forces it out permanently.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

CURRENT COMMENT.

More than 100 fires in New York and Brooklyn testified to the patriotism of the people on the Fourth.

Prof. Lugger, state entomologist of Minnesota, has made a report on the grasshopper killing in Chicago county with the hopperdosers. Over 400 of these machines were at work and gathered in 8,000 bushels of grasshoppers daily.

The United States labor commissioner, Carroll D. Wright, interprets the existing conditions in the industrial world as meaning "not only that a new era of prosperity is at hand, but that capital and labor are understanding each other better."

The records of the Pennsylvania hospital of the insane, dating from 1841, show that of the 10,000 patients treated 4,500 were cured and 2,705 were improved. In the light of these figures insanity is far from being the hopeless disease it was once considered.

It is estimated that the United States has, since the government was established, spent the gigantic sum of $1,250,000,000 upon the Indians, directly and indirectly. The Indian wars have numbered more than forty, and have cost the lives of 19,000 white men, women and children, and 30,000 Indians.

As a result of the big strike last summer, 122 claims, aggregating $1,175,756, have been filed against the city of Chicago. They are made by railroads and other corporations, who assert their property was destroyed by rioters during the strike. The smallest claim filed, $26, is in behalf of the Pullman Palace Car Co.

Sod was cut on the 2d at Calumet, Mich., for No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack mine. It will be large enough for eight compartments and will extend vertically almost 1 mile into the bowels of the earth before striking copper lead. It will require four years working day and night with powerful dynamite to reach the vein.

The visible supply of hogs in the United States is being considerably reduced by the packers and exporters. The Cincinnati Price Current reported 120,000 more hogs packed since March 1 than during the corresponding period of 1894. Exports of bacon and pork were reported to have increased in the same time over 11,000,000 pounds.

In an extended report on the subject of the occurrence and production of tin throughout the world, C. M. Rolker, a special agent of the United States geological survey, discussed the tin situation in the United States. He says: "No tin is being produced in the United States, and the tin occurrences of this country are so far only of geological or mineralogical interest."

The Iron Trade Review, of Cleveland, O., says: "With all wage scales settled, the iron trade enters upon the second half of the year with prospects of the heaviest summer output in years. Structural mills, plate and bar mills, east and west, are well supplied with orders and rail mills have a tonnage before them that is in decided contrast to their beggarly orders a year ago."

Gen. Green C. Smith, who died recently in Washington, came within half a vote of being president of the United States. He and Andrew Johnson were candidates for Lincoln's vice president and Johnson received half a vote more than Gen. Smith. When President Lincoln was assassinated Vice President Johnson ascended to the chair and Gen. Smith then realized what he missed by that half vote.

The effect of the Chicago drainage canal on lake levels is still under discussion. One of the leading engineers in charge of the work assured the secretary of war that the reduction of the lake level when the canal is taking its maximum of 10,000 cubic feet of water a second will never reach 6 inches, and that the average reduction throughout the year will not exceed 3½ inches. So far as definite data have been submitted, it appears that the lakes will feed the canal without a change of any consequence in their levels.

A warrant for 1 cent in favor of President Cleveland was forwarded recently from the United States treasury to Gray Gables, Mass. This sum was found to be due him as salary upon an adjustment of his account for the fiscal year. The president's salary is $50,000 a year, paid monthly, and the monthly warrant is for $4,166.66⅔ each month. It was found that one-third of a cent for the three months had been overlooked in drawing the warrants, and the cent sent was the result of the correct adding up of the account.

A color organ has been invented, by means of which, as certain notes are struck, the melody is reproduced in a succession of color tones and combinations on a screen at the same instant they are heard by the ear. At a recent test in London Chopin's preludes were played, and the screen showed a succession of rhythmical waves of color, passing so rapidly that it was hard for the eye to take them all in. The instrument is the first in the world to show a definite connection between sound and color.

THE EXPOSITION A GO

There Are no Deficiencies in its Finances and Prospects.

MANY NEW AND ATTRACTIVE CARDS.

The Necessary Funds are Subscribed at Home—Buffalo Bills Shows to be Out Done by the Mexican Bull Fights—It's a Go.

Atlanta, July 6.—At a meeting of the directors of the Cotton States and International exposition yesterday, Mr. S. M. Inman, chairman of the finance committee, announced that more bonds were to be placed before the opening of the gates. In about fifteen minutes all of the remaining bonds were placed and the expenses to the opening of the gates fully covered, thus absolutely securing the financial statues of the exposition. The finance committee is receiving congratulations on its superb management. The bonds were taken entirely by members of the directory and three-fourths of them were taken by members of the finance committee and the officers of the expositian, conversant with the details of the business. Three hundred thousand dollars in bonds have thus already been placed for cash.

The management of the exposition have received from Mr. A. Macchi, commissioner general to Europe, a proposition from Messrs Herbert Saunders company, of London, offering to build on the lake a fac simile of the trans Atlantic steamship St. Louis. The ship would be of exactly the same size of the St. Louis and will be elegantly fitted out. The interior will be used as a restaurant and the vessel will be reached by gangways. This is a duplicate of an exhibit now being given at the Antwerp exposition.

Hon. Henry G. Kettige, the secretary of the Massachusetts commission to the Cotton States and International exposition, is in Atlanta conferring with the exposition management in reference to the Massachusetts display. He went out to Piedmont park yesterday to select a site for the Massachusetts building.

While for several days it has been understood that there would be a bull fight in the Mexican Village at the Cotton States and International exposition positive information has been wanting until now. A letter from the consessionaire just received gives the following description which indicates that this feature will rival the Wild West show as a drawing card. The arena will be arranged in the regular way and some of the bull fighters in Mexico, with a supply of trained horsess and of the finest bulls will be brought to Atlanta. It will be an exact reproduction of the famous bull fight of Spain, with one exception. The bull's horns will be padded, so that he can do no damage. The horse will likewise be protected by embossed leather shields, so that the whole fight can be carried out without the slightest cruelty or more bloodshed than is seen at a wild west show.

DAGOES ON THE WAR PATH.

They Make Great Threats in Rockport. Extra Deputies Sworn in.

Rockport, Ind., July 6.—The failure of the contractors of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Rockport railroad to pay the 150 Italian laborers the money due them according to promise has caused them to become violent and the town is practically in their hands. They are infurated and crazed with liquor and have placed combustibles on the bridge leading to the town and in several public places, and also threaten to burn the town. The women and children are terror stricken. All the business houses and public places are closed and the men and boys have to a man been sworn in as deputy sheriffs. Under the sheriff and marshal they are guarding the bridge and other places threatened with destruction. A bloody battle is imminent and is only kept back by the pleadings of Catholic priests.

Who, The Lucky Man?

Washington, July 6.—Within a day or so the president will appoint a successor to the late Robert W. Patterton, register of the land office at Enid, Oklahoma, who was recently killed by the marshal in an attempt to prevent a street fight between Mr. Patterson and a local editor. A name has been submitted by the secretary of the interior to the president, but is kept secret. Mr. Patterson was from Georgia and it is likely that his successor will be from the same state.

WATCHING THE FINANCES.

It is Predicted the Expenditures Will Far Exceed Receipts for a While.

Washington, July 6.—The treasury figures for the next week or so will show a large excess of expenditures over receipts and treasury experts figure that for the month the balance on the wrong side of the ledger will aggregate from 12 to 13 million. The excess at the beginning of this month which will show in the daily statement tomorrow is caused by the fact that most of the large payments are made during the first few days. For instance, interest checks for $7,500,000 issued durthe last days of June, very few of which comparatively have yet been presented for payment have to be met and these will be presented within the next few days. Most of the quarters pension money, which will reach $13,000,000 is usually paid out during the first week or ten days of the month. These two items alone will aggregate more than $20,000,000 and it will not be surprising if by the 15th or 20th, of the month the treasury statement should show expenditures to exceed receipts by $17,000,000 or $18,000,000. This excess deficit will probably be cut down during the last part of July to 12 or 13 million dollars.

WHAT WILL CUBA'S MAYOR DO?

Now All the Saratoga Bar Rooms are Closed as Tight as in South Carolina.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 6.—Every gambling house in this village closed yesterday. The result was brought about by Village President Sturgis, who appeared before the police commissioners and said:

"I absolutely command and demand of you as president of the village, to close every gambling place in Saratoga without reserve, and if you fail to obey I shall cite you with the board of trustees and ask for you resignations."

The first place to close was the old Morrissey club. Mr. Canfield appeared at police headquarters and stated that he would close for good and that they need not take the trouble to send any officer down for the purpose. Ex-president of the village, Caleb W. Mitchell, quietly followed suit. The situation is the main topic of conversation about town.

Mrs, Phibbs has since given one of the children to him to raise. Recently the latter, who married again, determined to get possession of the other child, a boy of 12 years. On June 22nd Murray's brother went to Knoxville and forced the boy to return home with him to his father. In consequence both Murray and his brother were arrested and the boy returned to his grandmother on habeas corpus proceedings.

His health is now in such a fair way to restoration that he will resume his diplomatic functions in the City of Mexico if there is no retrogression. General Ransom was at the state department today.

WHAT ARE THE COSTS

To Be Patriotic on the Occasion of the Birth-day of the Nation.

A LIST OF THE CASUALTIES REPORTED.

La Salle Winds Up With a Long List of Killed and Wounded—Other Places Follow with Less Serious Results.

La Salle, Ill., July 6.—A successful celebration here on the fourth had a sad ending, and one man lies dead and two others are seriously injured as the result of an accident during the fire works display. A bomb rocket sent up, but after going a short distance, it fell and exploded, setting fire to a large quantity of fire works, which exploded with terrific force. There were 6,000 people within a block of the place at the time and a terrible panic followed. Horses ran away and and the crowd stampeded, crushing women and children under foot. One hundred persons were more or less seriously injured. William Tapt, of Tampico, Ill., was struck by a rocket on the head and was so seriously injured that the physicians say he cannot live. Dan Cahill had his legs shattered by exploding fire works and was trampled on by the crowd, suffering injuries which may prove fatal. Harry Kenny, a waif, who says his parents lives in California, was horribly burned about the face, head and arms. His injuries are serious. Harry Joy, of Winona, had his arm broken. A number of women and children were injured. The adjoining buildings, which caught fire were saved by the department.

WORSE THAN PURITANISM.

Burned His Wife for a Witch, While Curious Spectators Looked Idly On.

Dublin, July 6.—Michael Cleary living near the town of Clonmet was convicted today of manslaughter in having burned his wife, Bridget Cleary, to death last March. Cleary believed his wife was bewitched and upon the advice of Dennis Ganey, the "family doctor" and in the presence of her father and a number of other relatives, held her over a fire and afterwards stripped her and poured paraffine over the body and set fise to it. The woman was burned to death without the slightest effort on the part of the spectators to extinguish the flames which were consuming her. Cleary claimed that it was not his wife, but a witch that was burned.

Cleary was sentenced to 20 years' imprisonment. His accomplices were also convicted. Patrick Kennedy was condemned to five, and John Dunne to 3 years imprisonment; William and James Kennedy to eighteen months each, and Patrick Bolen and Michael Kennedy to six months each.

HE DID'T GET MARRIED.

Yet He Got Tired of Life and Took the Morphine Route.

Tallahassee, Fla., July 6.—About five years ago Elliot Todd came here from St. Louis and engaged in dairy farming. He had a place eleven miles from town. Yesterday morning he was found by a servant in his bed in an insensible condition, with a sixty-grain morphine bottle by his side with half the contents gone and it is supposed that he must have taken about thirty grains. He died in a little while.

Todd was a single man, aged about forty years. He was not financially embarrassed and his friends are at a loss to account for his rash act. Negroes on the place say that he acted strangely on Thursday. He had prepared for death, it is said, by writing detailed instructions as to his business affairs. The body has been embalmed for shipment to St. Louis.

Righteous Indignation.

Lake City, Fla., July 6.—Rev. Robert Bennett, the young negro preacher who was taken from the pulpit and lynched yesterday morning, was buried near the scene of the tragedy this evening. There was an immense crowd of negroes present and they were very bitter against the lynchers and white citizens. It is feared there will be trouble. The impression is growing that the charge of assault on Miss Padgett was not true and that Bennett was lynched for other reasons.

Lord Roseberry Speaks.

London, July 5.—Speaking at Albert Hall, yesterday evening, Ex-Prime Minister Roseberry said that the late government had lived a noble life and died a noble death. It left behind it a mighty surplus. Business was reviving, commerce was prosperous, and the people were contentdd. The new government would incur a serious responsibility if it reversed the late government's policy in regard to Armenia. Lord Roseberry again denounced the house of lords.

He Let Them Overdraw.

Montreal, Que., July 6.—J. S. Bousquett's resignation as chief cashier of the Banque du Peuple was accepted at a meeting of the directors yesterday. There were some very sensational rumors this afternoon regarding overdrafts of outside concerns in which Mr. Bosquett is interested. It is said the bank had no trouble in meeting its clearings yesterday without outside assistance.

Broken From the Outside.

Macon, Ga., July 6.—A gang of tramps made an attack on the city jail last night and liberated five of their companions who had been arrested the evening before. The jail was unguarded at the time. Iron crow bars and picks were used to force the doors and locks.

Raised Wages Ten Per Cent.

Auburn, N. Y., July 6.—The announcement was made yesterday that C. W. Tuttle & Co., had voluntarially raised the wages of the employes in the rolling mill ten per cent, the advance to begin July 1st.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK CHEERING.

Less Distress in Commercial Circles and the Outlook for Fall Trade Bright.

New York, July 6.—R. G. Dun & Company, in their weekly review of trade today says:

There were 6,657 commercial failures in the first half of 1895, against 7,039 in the first half of 1894, and 6,401 in the first half of 1893. These commercial failures involved liabilities of $88,839,944, this year, against $101,739,306 last year, and $168,861,411 in 1893.

The details show a decrease in every class of failures in the second, compared with the first half of 1895, both in the number and magnitude, the defaulting liabilities averaging $34 against 40 for every firm in business and $3,04 against $4.03 for every $1.00 solvent payments.

The mid-summer reports from all commercial centres are of especial interest, covering the question on which the future business depends. They indicate distinctly better crop prospects than other official or commercial accounts, a marked increase in retail distribution of products, an active demand for goods, and a general enlargement of the working force, with some advance in the wages of more than half a million hands. At the same time they show that the rapid advance in prices has somewhat checked buying of a few classes of products. In every part of the country the outlook for fall trade is considered bright.

Nothing disturbs the money market, the government begins the new fiscal year with more than the required gold reserve, and the disbursement of nearly $80,000,000 by operations in interest and dividends will stimulate business in many branches.

The advance in iron continues and the Thomas company has raised anthracite No. 1, another $1 per ton. Comparison of prices for various iron products shows an advance ranging from 72.2 per cent. since February for wire nails to 7.1 per cent. for anthracite pig and in all kinds averaging 22 per cent. The demand and rise have come so suddenly that even while the first order for shipment of steel billets to Europe given some time ago, when prices were low, is being announced, the prices here has advanced $17, in April, to $22.25, or about 31 per cent.

GAS DID THE WORK.

A Crazy Father Kills Himself and Family By Asphyxiation.

Chicago, July 6.—Frederick Hellman, a mason contractor, 56 years old, last night murdered his wife and four children by asphyxiation and died with them. The victims were: Ida Hellman, 34 years old; Fritz Hellman, 12 years old; Ida Hellman, 11 years old; Willie Hellman, 8 years old; Hedwig Hellman, 4 years old.

The place of the tragedy was at the Hellman cottage, 601 Cornelia street. The house is small but it was their own, and Hellman had had the gas put in the bed room, in which all slept, for that purpose.

There is only one explanation, and that is, that Hellman was crazy. He is said to have been fairly well provided with worldly goods and to have had no family dissensions. He was naturally of a morose disposition, but no one thought he would commit suicide or murder. He left a note for his brother in which he gives instructions regarding the disposition of his property. He says that he will not be living when the note is received, but says in it nothing of the premeditated death of the rest of the family.

THE KENTUCKY POPULISTS.

Nominate a State Ticket, But Refuse to Endorse Woman Suffrage.

Louisville, Ky., July 6.—The Kentucky populists are in session here and the first thing done was the report of the committee on resolutions which presented the Omaha platform. There were many amendments but as adopted it endorsed the Omaha platform and declared for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at 16 to 1. A delegation of ladies appeared before the convention and urged the convention to adopt a plank in its platform endorsing woman's suffrage but it was voted down.

At 12:30 o'clock the convention proceeded with the nominations. Hon. T. S. Pettit, of Owensboro, was nominated by acclamation for Governor, J. G. Blair, of Nicholas, for lietenant governor and R. Gardner, of Hardin, for treasurer, all by acclamation. For auditor, C. H. Deane, and for secretary of state, Ben C. Keys; for superintendent of public instruction, H. H. Farmer; for commissioner of agriculture, W. L. Scott, for United States senator, C. S. Ball.

BASEBALLISTS AT AUCTION.

It is Said That Chattanooga is Out and That Macon or Mobile Will Be in.

Atlanta, July 6.—A special to the Constitution from Chattanooga says Messrs Drewry and Reif surrendered the franchise of the baseball club to President Nicklin yesterday. They put up the money for salaries until July 15th. A special from Macon says that President E. E. Winters, of the consolidated Street Car company there, is considering the purchase of the franchise. It is considered certain that either Macon or Mobile will take the club.

Hon. Josiah Patterson's Speech.

Atlanta, July 6.—There is some discussion here as to whether ex-Congressman Bryan, or Hon. Josiah Patterson, congressman from Tennessee, had the largest crowd to hear them. It will be remembered that Mr. Bryan took the Free Silver side, and Mr. Patterson's speech on the night of the Fourth was somewhat in the nature of a reply to it. Each side claims their man created the most enthusiasm.

A Boiler Explosion Plays Destruction.

Panama, July 6.—A boiler in the electric light plant at Carthagena exploded on Monday morning at 1 o'clock. A number of prisoners who were confined in the jail near the works were killed. The shock threw down two buildings in the neighborhood. So far it is known that sixteen persons were killed. Many others are supposed to be entombed in the ruins of the plant.

WILL IT BE BUILT?

It is Now Stated That the Money is Ready for the Pacific Cable.

THE GREAT NECESSITY OF THE AGE.

It Will Be Over Six Thousand Miles in Length, and Cost Over Seven Million of Dollars—How and Where It Will Be Extended.

San Francisco, Cal., July 6.—For years a mid-ocean cable has been the acknowledged necessity for this country as well as the countries of the east. The telegraph tolls have been enormous to get the news and business messages in consequence of the want of it. Across the Atlentic there are two or more cables already, but so far the west and Pacific countries have been denied that convenience in consequence of the length and expense. It now appears, however, only a matter of time when the geat Pacific cable will be laid. The statement was made yesterday by Vice-President Hugh Craig, or the chrmber of commerce, that after a careful investigation of the subject, he is convinced that British capitalists will build the Pacific cable and that the difficulty of getting a mid-ocean station has been overcome.

The proposed route is from Auckland, New Zealand to Norfolk Island in the South Pacific, 415 miles: Norfolk Island to Fiji, 1,002 miles; Fiji to Fanning Island 1,715 miles and there to Vancover 2,242 miles. The total length will be 6,585 miles, almost three times as long as the shortest transatlantic cable. The estimated cost is $7,585,000. It is proposed to have a number of cables connecting with the main one in the Southern hemisphere, the principal connection to be between Aukland and Sidney in the South Sea Islands.

It is now hoped a new era of prosperity will bring this much needed extra wonder of the world.

TWO DEATHS REPORTED.

An Accident at a Paint Mill, and Slashed to Death With a Razor.

Gadsden, Ala., July 6.—John Williams was crushed to death at the paint mill of this place yesterday. He was working in the crushing department and by a piece of carelessness was caught in the machinery and whirled around the shafting so often that when the engine was stopped he was mashed almost to a jelly.

The death of Bi Berry, at the hands of John Kyle, also took place, he being cut with a razor. Kyle was beating a woman when Berry interfered and a general fight followed. Berry ran up street followed by Kyle, who overtook him and slashed him with a razor, causing his death in half an hour.

TERRIBLE IF TRUE.

A Man Steals Money and Buys a Watch and Diamonds and is Lynched.

Jackson, Miss., July 6.—The conductor on a Queen & Crescent freight train which passed here at noon reports that Theo Puckett, a negro was lynched at Pelahatchie, a station 25 miles east of here last night. Puckett had robbed a farmer of about $1500 the night previous and came to Jackson where he purchased a gold watch and chain and two fine diamonds, exhibiting a large roll of money. The police here "got on to him" but on the advice of the mayor let him go there being no evidence to hold him. Puckett returned to Pelahatchie with the above result.

Moore Pleads Guilty.

New York, July 6.—Albert S. Moore, the secretary and treasurer of the East River Silk company was arraigned in part I, of the court of general sessions yesterday morning and plead guilty to eight indictments charging forgery, in the first degree, and one charging forgery in the third degree. The indictments were found on Tuesday last and were secured on Moore's forgeries of the names of Charles Rugge, Robert W. Inman, and John Menke, aggregating $51,000, which paper got the bank of America and the United States National bank to accept. Moore will be sentenced on Tuesday next by Judge Fitzgerald.

There is some damaging evidence against the men.

Committed for Kidnapping.

London, July 6.—Ernest Crane, Henry Crane and James Hook were yesterday fully committed for trial on the charge of having kidnapped Mrs. Gordon, wife of the late Hon. Sackville Gordon, a few weeks ago. The abduction of the woman, it is claimed, was done at the instance of an American named Clamp, with whom Mrs. Gordon had lived, in order to obtain the bonds, money, jewelry, etc., which she was possessed of.

The Steamer Lady Lee Sunk.

THE CUBAN SIDE OF IT.

The Chances for Cuban Success Grows Brighter Day by Day.

Jacksonville, Fla., July 6.—A cablegram to the Times Union from Key West, Fla., says:

Private advices received in this city from Havana state that the chances for Cuban success grow brighter every day.

Martinez Campos, at the head of thirty-six hundred men, is marching towards Puerto Principe. Provisions are scarce in that district and the condition of the poorer classes is terrible.

It is reported in Havana that the son of Martinez Campos was captured by the insurgents at the battle of Grand Piedro and is dangerously sick with fever. Martinez Campos is also reported sick.

The insurgents under Miro raided a newspaper office in a town near Holquin and carried off the entire outfit. It is stated they will publish a paper in the field.

Colonel Sandoval, who was in command of the troops at the battle in which Marti was killed, has been captured by Jose Maceo.

Lieutenant Laborde, stationed at Sangeronimo, with eighty men, surrendered to General Gomez. They were sent to Puerto Principe.

Lieutenant Becerro, with twenty-five men, at Mulato, surrendered to the insurgents and delivered up 4,000 rounds of ammunition and twenty-five rifles.

It is reported that the Spanish government has offered large rewards for the capture of Gomez and Maceo, dead or alive.

The Spanish official organ, La Union Constitutional, published a notice of reward of $5,000 for the recovery of the ring worn by Marti before his death.

A telegram published in Havana, from the Spanish minister at Washington, states that all the United States warships, and revenue cutters in Florida waters will be subject to orders from the Spanish consuls at this city.

Manzanilo, Cuba, July 6.—Private advices received here report the occurrence of two severe battles at Palmas Altas between a force of eighty volunteers and four hundred mounted insurgents under the rebel leader Amador Guerra. The volunteers lost seventeen killed and nineteen wounded. The insurgents lost sixty killed, including Guerra and a large number wounded.

A POETESS BY INSPIRATION.

Death at Athens, Ga., of Miss Sue Mitchell.

Athens, Ga., July 6,—There died here yesterday a woman who seemed to possess marvelous and peculiar power as a poet. She was Miss Sue Mitchell, a lady past middle life, daughter of the late Prof. Mitchell, who was an eccentric Englishman. Of late years the daughter has had what she called "spells," when some power made her write. During these times she wrote weird and strong poetry, which, however, did not come from her head as she explained, but was as if somebody else was using her as a medium through which to convey thoughts. Miss Mitchell was also writing a history of the war from the standpoint of a southern woman.

She took off her shoe and placed a note addressed to her husband in one stocking and touched the trigger of a gun with the other foot. Just before she was married, a few years ago, she was shot and wounded by a jealous lover.

Capt. Paul Webb Met His Death.

San Francisco, Cal., July 6.—A special to a morning paper from Couer de Alene, Idaho, says that Captain Paul Webb, the swimmer lost his life near there yesterday in an attempt to ride down a three hundred foot chute into Lake Coeur d'Alene in his barrel. The barrel left the chute and struck the ground. His spinal column was broken.

Sensational Elopment.

Raleigh, N. C., July 6.—Dr. J. F. Battle, of this county, aged thirty years, has created a sensation by eloping with and marrying the thirteen-year-old daughter of C. J. Bright. The marriage license was obtained by a friend, who, it is said, made an incorrect statement as to the girls age.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, JULY 11, 1895.

THE calamnity howler has one argument left him. There has been no increase in the wages of sin.

"A TALE of woe" is pure delight to croakers and to those whose political delusions vanish as mist before the rising sun of a general prosperity.

LAST Sunday, 4:30 p. m. at Gray Gables, there was born to President and Mrs. Cleveland, a girl. This makes three girls and no boys to grace the president's household.

THE Pullman Palace Car Company has advanced the wages of 4,000 employes 10 per cent. When Pullman advances wages all doubts of returning good times should be removed.

NEARLY every town in the state is trying to get some enterprise but Hartselle.—Alabama Enquirer.

When the undertaker gets your town nicely laid away send him down here. Columbiana just needs burying, she's already dead.

GREAT is Alabama. We are again getting on our feet and before the beginning of another year our furnaces will be in operation, the mills will be humming and the farmer will have gathered and stored away one of the largest crops in the history of the state, Let us all be joyful and thankful.

GOVERNOR OATS has written a timely and earnest letter to the railroad commission asking their efforts in securing a lower and more uniform freight rate for the products of our farmers. Alabama never had a governor who was more keenly alive to the interests of the farmers than Gov. Oats, and the farmers know it.

ON a single railroad system in Georgia, it is reported there are 2,088,000 peach trees already bearing, and the whole state is generally developing into a magnificent peach orchard. Some single orchards number over 100,000 trees, while almost all the farmers are setting out orchards in the hope of developing the industry still further.

THE Coosa River News says: "The only method to give this country a better system of education will be an aggressive policy of precaution against allowing the little bullet-headed, buffoon-brained itinerant and local bums to 'teach' as they do all over North Alabama." An aggressive policy of precaution is good. In other words, make haste slowly. But then the above is rather hard on the teachers of North Alabama.

THE deficiency under the last year of the McKinley law, was $70,000,000, while under the first year of the Wilson law it was only $43,250,000, or $26,750,000 less. That is pretty good for a starter in the line of letting out the facts. Then it is further in evidence that the customs receipts under the first year of the Wilson law were $153,000,000, while under the preceding and last year of the McKinley law they were $132,000,000, showing a gain under the Wilson law of $21,000,000. This fiscal year there will be a better showing, with the possibility that government receipts and expenditures may balance each other.

EXPENSES have been extensively pruned in the agricultural department as Secretary Morton's report shows that the regular expenditures for the year aggregated about $1,800,000, while wonderful to relate, the appropriations for the same period reached in round numbers $2,506,915, leaving unexpended and to be carried back into the treasury about $700,000, while last year $627,115 was paid back. Besides many other reforms the usual general seed distribution will not take place this year, as the law only requires the furnishing of "rare" seed for scientific purposes. This item alone will stop a big leak and save a large amount to the government.

A TERRIBLE STORM,

Carrying Death and Destruction in Its Path, Passes Over the Country.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., July 10.—Thursday last telegraphic reports began to arrive in this city of rains at western points. These reports grew in number Friday and covered a large territory, indicating that the entire eastern water shed of the Rocky mountains, from the Nebraska and Iowa lines to Texas, was swept by a storm.

Friday night the severest blow came. Reports of loss of life and destruction of property came with every telegram, and the downpour, which was at first regarded as a blessing, grew into a wave of devastation. Fields that promised the most bountiful yield in many years are today swept bare of vegetation. In several instances the seas of rains were abetted in their work of destruction by tornadoes. It is too early yet to sum up the loss, but the total must be appalling, and those to whom the angry elements spared life have little left to sustain it. The stories of storms are so similar that a statistical summary is all there is left to tell.

The storm's focus embraced an area of 200 square miles, with the southwestern corner of Missouri as the center. The greatest loss of life is reported from Winona, Mo., where fifteen corpses have been found, with as many more missing. At Baxter Springs, in Southwestern Kansas, five were killed and eleven seriously injured by a cyclone, that accompanied the storm. Three were drowned at Columbus and two at Ottawa, Kas.

At Van Buren, Ark., a woman and her child were drowned.

A family of five were camped on the banks of Fish Creek, in the Indian Territory. Saturday nothing of them or their belongings was found, except a part of their wagon on a pile of driftwood.

At Thomasville, Mo., where the rain was four inches in depth eighteen lives were lost.

The above summaries give only a fraction of loss in property. The greatest burden falls upon the farmers, as the season is too far spent to plant new crops, and suffering must surely follow in the storm's wake. Details of individual sufferings and experiences recall the horrors of the Johnstown disaster.

THE STORM IN GEORGIA.

ATLANTA, GA., July 10.—Two persons were killed by a cyclone in Putnam county, and probably twenty were seriously injured. The list of fatalities may run up to ten.

A special to the Constitution from Eaton says that a conductor on the Middle Georgia and Atlantic railroad reports that at Willard Station everything in the storm's path was blown down.

Henry Adams, white, and Bob Hardy, colored, were killed.

Jim Collier, colored escaped himself but two of his children were pinned under the wreck of their house. The children were mangled and can hardly survive.

In Morgan county the Robertson plantation was swept clean of buildings and fences. The Robertson family hid in the cellar and no one was hurt, although the house was moved from its foundations.

F. R. Logan had a thrilling experience. He escaped from the house and partly lashed himself to some shrubbery to avoid being blown away. Luckily, the members of his family were visiting a neighbor, whose home was beyond the path of the storm.

At Bradstone's the wind swept away all his barns and outhouses, leaving his dwelling intact. His family took refuge in a storm pit. Strange to say several mules were left standing where the stables had been, untouched.

The worst feature of the storm seems to have been the destruction of Lally Pennick's house while he and his wife were in it. His crop is a complete wreck. He and his wife are doing well, as their injuries are not so serious as was first thought.

At Albert Collier's place, two of his children had their limbs broken by the falling of the timbers of the dwelling house.

Persons who saw the storm cloud say it was a terrible sight. A mass of black clouds was seen to whirl in the air, alternately rising and falling.

ON LOOKOUT MOUNTAIN.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., July 8.—Lookout Mountain was this afternoon the scene of one of the heaviest rainfalls ever seen in this city. About 4 o'clock a storm burst upon the eastern slope, struck the mountain with such force that an avalance of dirt was loosened and came bounding down the mountain side into the village of St. Elmo, beneath. The tracks of the two mountain railroads were blocked up by the drift, earth and shrubbery. The long line on Lookout Mountain was hidden many feet deep by the rocks falling across the track. The people of St. Elmo were terrorized by the slide.

IN OKLAHOMA.

GUTHRIE, O. T., July 8.—A terrific hail storm and water spout occurred east of here yesterday, doing great damage to crops, washing away bridges, breaking hundred of windows and wrecking several houses. In many places the hail was as large as hen's eggs and injured live stock.

AT CHICAGO.

The storm at Chicago capsized the pleasure boats out on the lake and many persons were drowned. Thousands of dollars worth of property in the business portion of the city were destroyed.

At many other places in Illinois the damage to property was great and the injury to growing crops was most destructive.

At Waukesha, Wis., a summer resort near Chicago, over a score of people were killed by the storm.

HUMAN DEVELOPMENT.

Quite a difference between development and evolution.

Development is the unfolding or maturity of germinal qualities inherent in some species.

Evolution, the unfolding, merging of one species into another, called generation, the first of which only possessed any germinal quality. This is a dangerous topic and has led to atheism, yet it puzzles my mind to discover any difference in a creative energy that could speak into being a species of animal or insects, even if true, that would unfold in process of time, into the unique animal and mental structure—man; and one that could create by direct power this last grand species of beings.

Development has to do with the growth and completion of man after he has a being.

Pope, in his essay on man, says:

"Expatiate free o'er all this scene of man;
A mighty maze! but not without a plan;"

Persons attend college, graduate and receive their degrees, not so much to learn as to know how to learn. Having finished a college course, presumably with trained and quickened mind and partially developed brain, should begin life with the investigation of that subject, which must be understood, as a basal stone on which every other proper knowledge rests—yourselves.

"Know then thyself, presume not God to scan,
The proper study of mankind is man."

Human nature is represented as

"A wild where weeds and flowers promiscuous shoot,
Or garden tempting with forbidden fruit."

Just as the young seedling tree has all the elements of fragrant flowers and perfect fruitage, yet must be weeded, fertilized, pruned and cultivated to bring anything to maturity; so must we combat obstructions, correct irregularities and foster all possibilities, until the social, domestic, moral and civil atmosphere shall be perfumed with the fragrance of our sympathy and love, the world regaled with the splendor of our achievements and radiated with the knowledge we exhale.

Nothing was created perfect. Even preachers, lecturers, inventors—all improve on the original. True: "God saw everything he had made, and, behold, it was very good;" yet, who could pronounce that perfect, which was so vulnerable to the assults of satan? The elements of perfection, doubtless may have been there, but they were rudimentary. Indeed, whether perfection could have been obtained, or attained unto, without a Christ, can be decided by Paul's language to the Phillippians:

"Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect: but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which I am apprehended of Christ Jesus," etc.

The same author, to Romans, 8th chapter: "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. Because the creature itself also shall be delivered from bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." To whatever contact with evil man must have been subjected, in order to reap the rich harvest of perfection in Christ, I have neither the purpose nor desire to question the supreme wisdom and unmeasured love of our maker, but am enraptured with the thought:

"Where sin abounded grace did much more abound." And that Deity has made it a rich gift to human agency with the divine means to solve to completion this grand problem of human existence.

Endowments are elements, and hence germinal. There are conditions of air, seed and soil essential to the evolution of the plant. There are also conditions of social environments, endowments and domestic training for the evolution of natural qualities into a more matured state of being, called the preparatory department of life. Herein consists parental authority and responsibility, and the teacher's and professor's opportunity. How much depends upon the proper attention to this department of human progress, must be learned from the criminal dockets of the courts.

Distinctive personality merges largely into the advanced department of education, for with many young persons a failure to realize the naturalness, and necessity of progress, and, hence, to seize the golden, yet rapidly passing opportunity, have been failures in the world. In college, young men and ladies, you establish habits, develop powers of comprehension, create confidence, and excite expectations, if awake to your advantages, that will facilitate progress in after life.

Henceforward, students of the graduating class, you are no longer expected to be fractional currency, but a full unit, or dollar, of the best coin, always at par and at a premium, if any disparity should exist. It is with you whether like gold you will command the admiration and patronage of all men, because of your intrinsic value, or like inflated paper currency, you can only plead the paternity of your Alma Mater, and retire to oblivion in times of crisis and disaster.

It will be well to consider human origin, though with humility and sacred awe we should study the origin of one "fearfully and wonderfully made." Even if we may investigate Darwin's, Huxley's or Tyndal's theory in reference to human origin, are we not forced to the conclusion that some underived, self-existent being formed the original? Shall we believe our ancestor was Adam, direct from God, or an atom? If we regard ourselves creatures of some designing, wise and omnipotent will, we avoid materialism, making us only a magnificent animal; and, because endowed with superior mind and conscience we feel our kinship to God, and may be inspired to the pursuit of a life which will prove us spiritual, undying, unbound and capable of a destiny eternal and sublime. One's belief as to his origin and destiny is the basal rock of perfect character. Every stern, self-projected human reality is the outcome of a former ideal. A certain excellent author says, "The Christ ideal dominating the Anglo-Saxon race has made its civilization." How far the present growing Anti-Christ ideal may check this boasted civilization will depend largely upon the coming generation of college-trained young men and women, who by character, life and pen, must save our country from threatened, impending, social, political and financial ruin. Whence came I? Whither go I? The solution of these two questions must determine you what you must be and what you must do.

You must be aspiring men. There is a vacuum in the human soul that naught else than a divine resident can fill; an innate desire in man that naught but "The desire of nations," the prototype of perfect humanity can gratify: a hungering and thirsting for more nutritious food than earth can give; and there are sighs for the words or lessons of divine wisdom, for "they are spirit and they are life"); that can be met only by a knowledge of God; and an exploring capacity not earth-bound. Young men you must desire or expect to be something—something now! something here! something hereafter. Men scorn the idea of annihilation. You may wrap a man in unconscious slumber, and the mind then is sometimes feasted with ecstatic visions in a moment that would require the pencil of a painter and the pen of a ready writer a lifetime to express.

You should seek to be pure and truth loving. Purity may excite envy and hence call forth criticism, but he that has it owns a fortune. Alas, how many wreck on the reef of reputation! It is worthless because it is held or lost by a capricious public sentiment. The spirit of truth and purity carries a self-consciousness with it that no public sentiment can shake or destroy. Paul and Silas in jail were masters of the situation. These unite you to the constituency of heaven.

Though by your exalted views and life you manifest to men their shame and excite their hatred and persecution, you are sure of vindication at the proper time. "If we would judge ourselves then should we not be judged." Though often defeated and disappointed in your schemes and purposes here, you'll be docketed for victory in eternity. It will exist in undimmed glory and perennial verdure, when empires crumble and thrones decay.

"Fame is what you have taken,
Character is what you give;
When to truth you waken,
Then you begin to live."

"If thine eyes be single, then is thy whole body full of light," vice versa. The enjoyment of your existence is inseparably connected with a pure life and practice of truth. Take, for illustration, a telescope and view a distant object of supreme beauty; a correct or incorrect conception of it will depend upon the perfection of the lens. It is the medium, the eye through which the scene is beheld. If there be specs or blemishes, the vision will be marred. Thus if the spirit and practice of one be pure and truthful, to him the song of the lark would be almost as the song of the angels; the green carpeted earth would be to him as pastures of Divine love; and the star-spangled firmament at night would be but the manifestation of the Divine handiwork."

"To the pure all things are pure."
"Life is what we make it."

Young says: "'Tis impious in a good man to be sad."

To such beings the great "book of books" is a mirror reflects in a thousand glories. Every page is luminous, and every line so suggestive that between them the soul sees relatives and glories of church events that could not be written or read if written.

Men should live for other's good; character gives us power over others. A stream never rises higher than its source. Would you lift mortals to usefulness, stamina and renown? Then blot out the excrescencies of your life if possible. An aqueduct is less valuable for every obstruction to an easy flow of the fluid. If men are not what they teach others to be, never can they raise them, however desirable, whither they would. Men sometimes become superior to themselves and by an assumption of what they do notpossess, succeed in communicating to others that which themselves never enjoyed. Boothe could excite the profoundest emotion by repeating the Lord's prayer. Yet, I think there must have been a collapsing reaction when the spell of magnetism was broken.

Men of mental strength with fertile imagination, poetic effluence, fervid eloquence and overdrawn figures awaken impulses, but not to a well rounded, ceaseless and profitable life. One who lives the doctrine he professes and tries to teach, is capable of an afflatus far transcending the inspirations of genus or the magic of the sublimest rhetoric. The drapery of his speech may be less attractive, but there is an originality, reality and courage of conviction, convincing, melting and welding. If to this life you superadd the advantages of education and genius too, the one properly appreciated and the other well directed. The man may then give expression to "thoughts that breathe and words that burn," and an unction is his that proves not only his origin but mission to be Divine; he will possess a heroism that naught but kinship to God could inspire, and a superiority to every earthly contingency that will prove his heritage and destiny eternal and grand.

After all, men can impress only themselves upon others. Others are moved by such a life. A life becomes the impersonations of principles. Show me a man whose life accords with his ethics; who believes what he professes and believing does; and I'll show you a man who leads.

Nearly two thousand years have rolled away since the philosophy of heaven was promulgated and illustrated by the Nazarine leader; and, because unaccepted the challenge He threw out to the world: "Which of you convinceth me of sin?" Humanity feels the power of His precepts and the magic of His life. Of course more largely may this be said of Christ than any other man; but is it not true largely of Mohammed, and of Paul who said: "To me to live is Christ to die is gain." "Though dead he yet speaketh." And his doctrines are believed and cherished because he believed and lived them. A practical life of virtue is more powerful upon the world because more intelligible.

Be yourselves, that is; be natural. One may walk with dignity, speak with the intonations of an angel or profess a Howard's philanthropy, if unassimilated, and thus discovered to be anothers property, he loses all his force. I knew a preacher once, who ruined another minister almost, by imitating him. Again: by this I mean have a mind of your own. Receive, consider, conclude for yourselves. I do not mean you should disdain advice or superior counsel, but accept nothing until your own distinctive personality can embrace it.

A sycophantic, fawning, cowardly crouching before another will dry up every possible spring of progress.

If, as already said, you be pure and true, when silence is not golden, give expression to yourself. I was attracted to a lawyer once by this motto above his mantle: "Dare to be true."

What do? Be studious and patient. The normal mind will win by close and continuous application where the most brilliant genius would be a disgraceful failure.

I came near selecting "the perils of genius" for my subject tonight, but I did not know but that there might be but few geniuses here and I might miss my mark. While genius is an endowment and hence a germ of proudest achievements if not restrained and well directed, 'twill prove a snare to man. It has been conceded that it springs from a diseased condition of the brain, and under intense nervous excitement, with unnatural ken, can create new worlds in fancy, and brings suited to such realms or under the inspiration of the Muse, catch like Milton, unearthly views of the "Eden regained," and hear the music of the heavenly harpers.

Again: He may become a crank and will, unless his cherished dreams be realized; and finally a lunatic, unless this peculiar passion be held in check, and others brought up to a point of attainment, commensurate with the leading gift.

Application then will supply the place of genius, because again genius is delighted with its quick discernment and easy grasp of lettered problems, and is satisfied with itself, and makes no further progress. I told a young man once, application would win, and with him it did; he was no genius.

You are now launching out upon a sea. The way to keep from sinking is to be active. Do something. Never wait for something to turn up. If the harvest delays, patient endurance is the crowning virtue of a perfected manhood. Moses in the wilderness of Sinia, and Paul of Arabia, were going through a school discipline and humiliation and test, that made them the admiration of the world.

Study the science of government: study political economy: study the perils of your land. See what it needs, address yourselves to the relief of her necessities. Choose those stations and professions of life wherein and whereby you may best serve your race.

Go, reflect in your every movement the glory of your worthy Alma Mater. As you have been taught in the recitation room, from the pulpit and the rostrum, to be men of honor, carry your diplomas to the world, and clothed with the insignia of nobility, prove they have been worthily bestowed. As you have met and mingled with us, her former sons, and refreshed your spirits with the consciousness of her former glory, determine by your kind remembrance of her and faithful efforts for her future prosperity, that following generations also shall drink freely from her breast of knowledge: and bye and bye, when the author and preserver of Howard College comes, may we, all of her sons have been so joined to Him by faith and hope and love, that we may meet, not in an alumni banquet, as on tomorrow night, but a matriculation feast to be sweetened by the presence of the long hidden teacher, Christ.

Young men, Howard College is more alive tonight than she has ever been. There is a rift in the cloud, and ere long one cloudless and eternal sun shall shine on her cloud-kissing spires.

Two Lives Saved.

Mrs. Phoebe Thomas, of Junction City, Ill., was told by her doctors she had consumption and that there was no hope for her, but two bottles Dr. King's New Discovery completely cured her and she says it saved her life. Mr. Thos Eggers, 139 Florida St., San Francisco, suffered from a dreadful cold, approaching consumption, tried without result everything else then bought one bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and in two weeks was cured. He is naturally thankful. It is such results, of which these are samples, that prove the wonderful efficacy of ths medicine in coughs and colds. Free trial bottles at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. There is a loaf of bread in the agricultural department at Washington made from the roasted leaves of a plant allied to the century plant. Another kind of bread is from dough of juniper berries.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-wonths-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

To the Pyramids by trolly may soon be a possible trip. The Egyptian government has just granted a concession for an electric railroad in Cairo, and the Pyramids are only eight miles away.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y. on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

"I can cordially indorse Ayer's Hair Vigor, as one of the best preparations for the hair. When I began using Ayer's Hair Vigor, all the front part of my head—about half of it—was bald. The use of only two bottles restored a natural growth, which still continues as in my youth. I tried several other dressings, but they all failed. Ayer's Hair Vigor is the best."—Mrs. J. C. Montevallo is to be the location of the new Industrial School for Girls. That town made a splendid fight for the school, and deserves well the victory it has won. The location is a delightful one. Montevallo is about ten miles from geographical center of the state. It's surroundings are pleasant and its inhabitants among the most cultured and hospitable people in the state. The bid by which Montevallo won the prize was twenty acres in the center of the town, a handsome and suitable brick school building, with five professors' residences around it, about 300 acres of valuable coal land near by, and $4,000 in cash, the whole estimated by the board to be worth $42,000.—Alabama Enquirer.

The humorous editor of The Augusta (Ga.) Evening Herald is responsible for the following: "I was 'down on the farm' the other day. The corn had committed suicide within its silks, but it was taken unaware, because its ear didn't hear it 'shoot;' the bulls had razed the cotton higher en er kite, green peas were in the soup; cucumbers were thrown to the cows—hence the cow-cumber; sweet potatoes had given 'em the slip; Irish potatoes had gone to bank; tomatoes had to catch up with the peas; peaches were all a-fuzz; the apple had a mash; beans had seasoned-out; watermelons had gone to sea—the meloncolic days were drowned; popcorn had changed to caps; wheat had 'beard' the flour; oats were in the straight that leads to parts as yet unseen; okra had flown with the peas, and the cows had gone to milk."

The Chronicle was in error by saying that the company's store was being cleaned for merchandise. A merchant of Shelby has an official statement from the president, Capt. T. G. Bush, that the store would never be used again for mercantile purposes, but would probably be used for a wool or cotton factory.

The most enjoyable entertainment of the season was an ice cream festival at "The Dannamora" last Thursday night. The entertainment was gotten up in honor of Misses Lanning, Phillips, Sanders, Pond and other visitors, and the departure of Miss Ozella Harrell for Meridian, Miss. THE TWO PICTURES.

BY MISS OZELLA HARRELL.

Two pictures hung on a dingy wall
Of a grand old Florentine hall.

One of a child of beauty rare,
With a cherub face and golden hair.

The lovely look of whose radient eyes
Filled the soul with thought of paradise.

The other face was a visage vile,
Marked with the lines of lust and guile.

A loathsome being, whose features fell
Brought to the soul weird thoughts of hell.

Side by side, in their frames of gold,
Dusty and dingy, cracked and old,
This is the solemn tale they told;

A youthful painter found one day
In the streets of Rome, a child at play.

And moved by the beauty that it bore—
The heavenly look that its features wore.

On a canvas radient and grand
He painted its face with a master hand.

Year after year on his wall it hung
'Twas ever joyful and always young.

Driving away all thoughts of gloom,
While the painter toiled in his dingy room.

Like an angel of light it met his gaze
Bringing him dreams of his boyhood days.
Filling his soul with a sense of praise.

His raven ringlets grew thin and gray,
His young ambition all passed away.

Yet he looked for years in many a place
To find a contrast to that sweet face.

Through haunts of vice in the night he stayed
To find some ruin that crime had made.

At last in a prison cell he caught
A glimpse of the hideous fiend he sought.

On a canvas weird and wild, but grand,
He painted the face with a master hand.

His task was done; 'twas a work sublime
An angel of joy and a fiend of crime
A lesson of life from the wreck of time.

O, crime! With ruin thy road is strown
The brightest beauty the world has known.

Thy power has wasted till in the mind
No trace of its presence is left behind.

The loathsome wretch in the dungeon low,
With a face of a fiend and a look of woe.

Ruined by revels of crime and sin
A pitiful wretch of what might have been.

Hated and shunned, and without a home,
Was the child that played in the streets of Rome.

Is called the Midsummer number, and contains a large variety of interesting matter suitable for the Season. Ladies who have deferred completing their Summer wardrobes will be particularly pleased with this number, for the styles were never more dainty and appropriate. A special article is devoted to Dressing for Stout Ladies, and another to bathing and swimming, with illustrations of the Latest Fashions in Bathing Costumes. Mrs. Roger A. Pryor's article on The Etiquette of Letter-Writing bears the stamp of authority, and will be helpful to every one who reads it: and the paper on Art Needlework in the Employments Series will direct the attention of many women to this occupation as a means of livelihood. The Ontario Ladies' College is interestingly described by An Ex-Graduate, the popular Kindergarten Series is continued by Mrs. Sara Miller Kirby, and Harriet Keith Fobes contributes an artistic paper in the series on Burnt Work. There is a very practical article on Cleaning and Renovating Laces, Feathers and Gloves, and a variety of useful information is given in the monthly talk Around the Tea Table. The housekeeper will find some new recipes in Seasonable Cookery, and much that will help to make housework easier in Things the Housewife Should Know. There is also an excellent article on the Newest Books, and others on Floral Work for August and The Relations of Mother and Son. New designs are illustrated and described in Knitting, Tatting, Lace Making, etc.

Keep the Water Pure.

If a pitcher of ice water is set in a room inhabited, in a few hours it will have absorbed the prespiration gasses of the room, the air of which will have become purer but the water unfit for use. This depends on the fact that water has the faculty of condensing and thereby absorbing nearly all the gases. Hence water kept uncovered in a room a while is always unfit for use, and should be often removed, whether it has become warm or not. Impure water is as injurious to health as impure air, and every person should provide the means of obtained fresh pure water for all domestic uses. An hour's intelligent examination of the water supply at a proposed country home would in a large majority of cases prevent the risk of fevers and diphtheria. Take in your dressing case an ounce phial of saturated solution of permanganate of potash. Mix six or eight drops into a tumbler of the drinking water that is supplied. If it turns brown in an hour, the water is, broadly speaking, unfit to drink; if not, it is not especially harmful. If a country hotel sewage system is confined to cesspools, within a hundred feet of the house, and near the water supply, take the next train. These matters should force themselves on one's personal attention.

A FREE TRIP TO ATLANTA.

The Cotton States Exposition should be visited by every resident of Alabama. Knowing, however, that there are many people, especially in the rural districts, who can ill afford the heavy outlay necessary in order to attend this exhibition, The Advertiser has devised a plan whereby all who are willing to devote a little spare time to calling their neighbor's attention to the excellence of the Semi-Weekly Advertiser as a newspaper, can visit this display of Southern industries and resources.

Every person in the State of Alabama who will send us 100 yearly subscribers to the Semi-Weekly Advertiser at $1 each, before October 1st, 1895, will be presented with a ticket from his or her railway station to Atlanta and return, and in addition will be given $25 in cash for the purpose of defraying his or her expenses while there.

It will not be necessary to send the entire 100 subscribers at once, but names can be forwarded from time to time as they are secured, the sender stating that they are for our Cotton States Exposition Excursion prize. An acurate account will be kept with each competitor, and the announcement of the successful ones will be made as soon after October 1st as is practicable.

There is no good reason why several hundred people should not thus be able to visit the Atlanta Exposition at our expense, as The Semi-Weekly Advertiser is unquestionably the best newspaper of its class in America, and the low subscription price places it within the reach of people of very limited means. It is an Alabama paper for Alabama people and that field defies competition.

SOLDIERS AS WITS.

They Often Made Things Lively in Camp.

Changed the Tide of War—A Confederate Who Would Crow Like a Rooster—An Unlucky Effort to Secure a Supply of Ardent.

Much has been written about the bravery and daring of the Confederate soldier, and yet history will never do full justice to his genius. He will stand confessed as the greatest soldier of the past, but even this will not do him the credit he deserves. There were other features in the character of the Confederate soldier fully as remarkable as his courage. In every company I ever knew, there were one or more men or boys who everlastingly had some surprise for you. They were the comedians who furnished life and fun for all the balance of the crowd. These fellows invariably made good soldiers, and by their pranks and jokes made the other men forget their troubles and the dangers, too. They were meat and bread when we were hungry, and they gave us new life on the march when we were worn out. Proper notice has never been accorded these fellows, but every old soldier will recall when he reads this the name of the men of his company who furnished the fun, and who always had some poor fellow on the rack. There was a member of the Hamer Rifles from Yazoo City, which company belonged to the Eighteenth Mississippi Infantry, that could crow just as well as a rooster, and bark like a dog. I have known him to quicken the step of the whole brigade and put them all to laughing and talking. Just before day, on occasions when we had been marching all night, he would crow like a young game cock, and then you would hear him imitate a big old Shanghai. This would wake up the dog, and he would begin.

At the battle of Baker's creek, when Gen. Grant was investing Vicksburg, at which time our cause seemed very gloomy, numbers of our gallant officers and men having been killed in the day's fight, an occasion which distinguished the Confederate soldier because all the highest elements of manhood were necessary to hold him in line. The enemy was pressing our rear guard very strongly with a large force, the shells and bullets were flying thick, tearing up the ground, topping trees and doing mad work generally. Adams' Cavalry Brigade was resisting the advance as well as they could. Men and horses were being killed, and it required nerve and everything else to make a man stay at his post. There was a deathly silence on the part of the men. No one knew what the next moment would do for him. To increase the intensity a fellow riding a good horse went dashing to the rear. He had lost his nerve. As he flew by he hollered out: "I can't hold my horse." Munford Bacon, of Madison county, Miss., a friend of mine, who was a member of Adams' brigade, saw the man and heard his explanation for leaving the line. Munford raised up in his stirrups, and yelled out: "Boys, I will give $1,000 for one of them horses you can't hold." This created a laugh and a yell, which made the enemy halt long enough to allow our troops to get into better position, and what might have been a disaster was prevented by Munford's wit.

After the Army of Northern Virginia had fallen back from the Peninsula to Richmond in the spring of 1862, and had camped on the south side of the Chickahominy, a few men from each company were allowed to go into the city for a day only. I was at that time a member of Company C, Eighteenth Mississippi Regiment. One of the comedians in the company was Ben F. Muse, of Canton, Miss. Ben always had a joke on somebody, and was not happy unless he had the laugh on one of us. But we had the laugh on Ben once, as I will tell you. When his time came to go into town he said to the boys: "You know I am a hornsnolger, and if you want anything from Richmond, come up with your canteens and your money." Several of the boys who had not tasted the ardent for many moons gave Ben their canteens and the needful, and off he went. I remember how he looked as he bid us good-bye. He was a fine specimen of manhood, handsome as he could be, with magnificent development. He had never been accustomed to hardships, and until he went into the army never wanted for anything. But on this occasion his clothes consisted of a pair of old ragged pants, a greasy old flannel shirt and one "galluss." But Ben's heart was as cheery as a mocking bird on a spring morning, as he capered off with seven or eight canteens around his neck. He had no thought of trouble, but he spent the time thinking about the fun he would have when he reached town.

Several of our men who had been wounded, and some who had been sick, but were well enough to sit around, had congregated at the Mississippi supply depot, where clothes and blankets were sent from home to be distributed among the Mississippi troops. Dr. W. W. Devine was in charge, and, by the way, the doctor was a kinsman of old Uncle "Tom Devine," of our city. But Tom was too old for service even then. Well, Ben Muse reached the Mississippi depot and found a number of friends, among them Uriah Eulah, David Rowland, Ed Hargon and others. Ben had but a short time to tarry, and at once proceeded to tell the boys he wanted to fill the canteens the first thing he did. Eulah was a warm friend of Ben Muse's. So were the others, but Eulah thought the opportunity was favorable to have some fun, and after consulting with the others said to Ben: "We can show you where you can get these filled." It will be remembered by the old soldiers that Gen. Winder was the commandant of Richmond post, and his office was a pretty marble front building, and they will also remember that Gen. Winder was a very stern and uncompromising man Eulah said: "Now, Ben, you come with us, and we will show you the place." Dave Rowland had lost a leg, so the three went down the street very slowly until they reached a point oposite Gen. Winder's headquarters. "Now," said Eulah, "you go in that marble store, and you will see two or three soldiers sitting around in the front room. Tell them you want to see the General on private business, and they will let you pass into the next room, where you will find several men in citizens' clothes, writing. Tell them also that you want to see the General on an important matter, and they will pass you into a third room, where you will see an old man with bald head, wearing glasses, and also has on citizens' clothes. Walk up to the old man, tap him on the shoulder and point to your canteens. Tell him you want them filled, and don't forget to say you've got the spondulix. The old man will jump up and rear and swear at you, but when he does you just pat him on his bald head and say: 'Oh, yes; I knew you would do this, but I'm one of the boys. I don't talk. You can count on me.'"

Well, Ben went over, while Eulah and Dan Rowland waited on the other side. In about three minutes Ben rushed into the street, his canteens rattling against each other, making a great noise as he ran down the street. The guards were after him, but Ben was too fleet, and he reached the "Rockets" ahead of all pursuers. Gen. Winder rushed to the sidewalk and ordered the guards to shoot him. When Ben patted the old man on the head he knocked his glasses off, and this was the only thing that saved him. Ben reached camp about daylight, but he brought nothing back but the canteens and an empty stomach.

Eulah and Dave Rowland and Ed Hargon have long since crossed the silent river, but Ben Muse is now a prominent citizen of Madison county, Miss. His home and his purse are always open to the old soldier in distress.—James Dinkins in Memphis Scimitar.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

—Sidney always attributed his love of poetry and his skill in verse to the training of his mother. It was her practice to read him passages from the best poets.

—The duke of Wellington said that the first thing he learned from his mother was the Lord's Prayer. Late in life he said: "It is the most sublime of compositions."

—Mrs. Phil Sheridan is said to be one of the prettiest of the numerous young widows in Washington. She was married when only nineteen, and she is still of slender and youthful appearance. Mrs. Sheridan has four children, the eldest of whom, his father's namesake, is a fine boy of fourteen.

—Jose de Heredia, the Cuban poet, has just been formally received into the French academy. He should have eulogized his predecessor, Charles de Mazade, but as the latter had written a life of Lamartine, he branched off into a glorification of the great poet. Francois Coppee delivered the address of welcome.

—The empress of Austria may be "queer," but she retains sufficient feminine vanity to spend two hours over her toilet each day, her beautiful hair having special care bestowed on it. After a lunch of strong broth and some light meat she starts off on a five-hour walk, wearing a short black dress just reaching the ankle and carrying a dark parasol and a dark fan.

—Alphonse Daudet has been greatly impressed by the size of things in London. Everything, particularly the Tower bridge, seemed colossal to him, and in comparison Paris appeared like a delicate and artistic jewel. He went to England with a detestation of the English race, but now finds himself "in spite of the horrible cookery of big joints and the tea, which he could never bring himself to like, completely broken in."

—M. Lobin de Lalaive, a venerable but robust French gentleman, says of his longevity: "I have always shunned strong drink and reveled in sea bathing. I used to be an even more intrepid swimmer than Lord Byron, and I never had to call a doctor in until I was eighty-nine. As regards tobacco, I have consumed a veritable mountain of cigars. My two greatest passions have been reading and poetry, and I still write verses at the age of ninety-eight."

—Capt. Gardner, who died at Northallerton, England, recently, was a veteran of Balaklava. In the famous charge of the Light brigade, Capt. Gardner got as far as the mouth of the Russian cannon when a ball struck the chest of his horse and threw the rider into the air. When he recovered he found himself across a Russian cannon. He scrambled down and ran for a mile and three-quarters through a storm of shot and shell before he reached his comrades.

—Mrs. Amelia Barr, who is probably the most prolific woman writer of the first rank in America at present, lives for the greater part of the year at her beautiful home near Peekskill. She has one daughter at home, who relieves her of all household cares, and another living in Boston, who is married to Kirk Munroe, whom all small boys know and adore. It is rumored that Mrs. Barr is going to write a novel about Cambridge. If she gives to it the local color that is the charm of "The Bow of Orange Ribbon" she will add another gem to American literature.

HUMOROUS.

—"Oh, children! You are so noisy to-day. Can't you be a little stiller and better?" "Now, grandma, you must be a little considerate and not scold us. You see, if it wan't for us you wouldn't be a grandma at all."—Texas Siftings.

—She—"Er—George!" He—"W-well, Laura?" She—"I—I think we understand each other, George; but—but is it my place or yours to put the question, and ought I to speak to your mamma about it, or ought you to go and ask papa?"—Chicago Tribune.

—"Do you find that noved-writing pays?" asked an unsophisticated friend of a modern novelist. "Pays?" he replied. "I should say it did. Let me tell you how I work it. I write a story of mystery and sell it to some syndicate. Then the newspapers that publish it offer prizes to the reader who will guess first how the plot is coming out. And that doubles my profits." "How does it?" "My wife sends in guesses and takes the prizes."—Buffalo Express.

—The Bird Could Talk.—A well-known New Yorker, who stutters dreadfully, and who has an inordinate fondness for practical jokes, was walking along South street in company with a friend, when they encountered a sailor who was carrying a saucy-looking parrot in a cage. "W-watch me," said the joker. "I w-will have some f-fun w-with this man." So, stopping the sailor, he inquired. "M-m-my g-good m-man, c-c-can that parrot talk?" "Well," said the sailor, "if he couldn't talk any better than you, I'd wring his bloomin' neck."

"FISHIN AND FOOLIN."

A Day With The Boys On The Creek—Laid Up For Repairs—A Plain Family Talk—"It Aint Sweet No More"—Fools Amongst Smart Men.

(Copyright 1895.)

Naturally, of course, a man has got more sense than a boy would have, but a boy is more than probable to have better teeth and a heap the moest fun. I can recollect the time away back there in the golden days of my boyhood—which it raley seems to me like that was only yesterday—when I could pitch out on a hot summer day and go down on the creek a fishin and swimmin and foolin around, and have the regular fisherman's luck, and eat dinner enough for three different people, and fling in 21 apples and 37 peaches and my hat full of plums for good measure, and never miss a meal of victuals or lose a lick of sleep.

A Fishin And A Foolin.

But it is way yonder different with your humble servant now. I still feel as young and fresh and healthy and and hongry and happy as a yearlin boy, you understand, but I can't go as fast nor come as quick, nor travel as many gaits, nor cover as much ground in one day as I use to could.

May be you mought wonder how in the thunderations I come to find it out so suddent like, and in orderment to be plum natural and honest I am bound to own up and tell you that I have been fool enough here lately to try it on.

Bright and early one mornin last week Will Tom Pickens and little Bunk Weatherford come by my house in a wagon and give it out to me that they was goin off down on Big Wolf Creek on a fishin frolic, and nothin would do but I must pack up and go with them. I was dead crazy to go from the jump, you understand, but for the sake of peace at home and general appearments I pulled on the bit considerable and finally at last told the boys bein as it was them I reckon I would have to go.

So we lit out, we did, and on the way down to the creek we made a run on Deacon Joiner's orchard, and by this time you understand, that one-horse wagon was loaded to the guards with fishin poles and kitchen physic, and fruit and nicknacks and—other farm producements.

The weather it was particlar hot, but we made the trip in the cool of the mornin, and durin the day down there on the creek we had more fun—of one sort and another—than you could shake a stick at. We didn't do any fishin to hurt, you understand, but there was a fryin pan along with us and by dinner time we had caught fish enough to make the gravy smell monstrous good. And in the main time I had managed to work up a tremendius big appetite. I felt, right then, like I mought eat a stewed roastin ear patch and a baked mule for dinner.

After dinner we went on fishin and foolin till way long in the shank of the evenin, and then took the back trail and lit out for home. We had the greatest plenty of fun and some luck, which I think the bulliest luck of all was that we didn't see no snakes that day, you understand. But when I got home that night I went to bed, and I stayed right there, off and on, for threo days and nights hand runnin.

A Plain Family Talk.

One day whilst I was laid up for repairs—flat of my back and as helpless and harmless as a baby—Mother lit in, she did, and give me a plain family talk. She had been monstrous good and kind in fixin up the salts and snake root and other compilements to pull me through and save my life, and I couldn't find it in my heart to sass her back. And what was more, I jest naturally lowed it mought be a blame good time of year for me to say nothin.

"If anything I reckon it hurts me a little the worst, Rufus, for you to come home and go to bed and curl up and git sick," says she in openin up the confabulation. "But you can't blame nobody with the wherefore and whencenass of all this trouble and confusionment but your own fat fool self. It's exactly what I lowed when you driv off down the road with Will Tom Pickens and little Bunk Weatherford. To see you runnin around over the whole entire country, makin stump speeches and writin for the newspapers, anybody would think that you ought to have sense like quality folks, but sometimes it does look to me like you have got the most slimmest and pecurious way of showin it of any man I have ever yet saw.

"When I see you all doubled up there with one of them sneakin pains it hurts me; Rufus, but I wouldn't be a good, true wife if I didn't tell you the naked, unwashed truth in regards to yourself. I have already before now told you and told you—more times than I have got fingers and toes—that your young magnolious days are over with and past. You may feel young and try to look young and make out like you are young, but you aint. And for some years I have took particular notice that every time you take one of them colty spells and go gallopin off and carryin on like a youngster, then you come home and go to bed. If it aint one thing it is somethin else—the mully grubs, or the rheumatiz, or the summer complaints. It won't do, Rufus, it won't begin to sorter half way do for a man that has lived as much as you have.

"Why in the name of creation don't you keep company along with your own gang—men that you was born and bred and brung up with? As for that, I reckon Will Tom Pickens and little Bunk Weatherford aint got no more baby teeth to shed, but still at the same time they haven't lived more than half as long—and not one-third as much—as you have. It makes me plum weak and weary, Rufus, to hear you talkin and goin on about the sights "we boys" have seen, and the fun "us boys" have had. And the other day when I saw you sailin off down the big road with the other boys, as you were wont to say, I knowed good and well that the next thing in order was for me to go and git the salts and snake root ready.

"I reckon no doubts a strong and healthy appetite is a mighty good thing for a man to have. I have heard people talk about losin their appetites, and from what you say, and from the general appearments, it looks to me like somebody must of lost two or three appetites down there on the creek, and you come along and found 'em. It may be mought not be so bad if you would but only stick to plain eatin, but you are too old in the harness now to stand sich a terrible mixtry and so many fancy trimmins. You think more of your bread basket, Rufus, and then turn around and treat it worse than any man that ever lived in the whole discovered world perhaps.

"There is one thing in particular that I would love to put you in mind of, Rufus, and soon as ever you git up and about you can take out your little note book and set it down. Nature don't do no slip-shod business on a credit. She never did and she never will, and whensomever you go and break into her laws pay day is comin and you must settle for your fun in spot cash."

It Aint Sweet Now.

Now in regards to Mother, she was right that day. She most in generally is right. It comes plum natural with her to be right, and perfectly all right.

But then as to me—well, as yet I am only fair to middlin, you understand. I am a right smart like Joe Nick Stringer was that time when he got into a sugar barrel. When Joe Nick was nothin but a yearlin boy he had a tremendius big sweet tooth for sugar. In regard to sugar he was about like a fool drinkin good whisky—he didn't know when to take out and quit.

Whereas and consequentially onest upon a time old man Stringer took Joe Nick to town, and took him to a grocery store and showed him to the storekeeper.

"There is a boy that has never got enough sugar since he was borned into the world," says the old man, "and I want him to git one good bait before he dies. Turn him loose in a sugar barrel and let him eat till he gits enough, then weigh up what is left and charge the backage to me."

So the storekeeper he took Joe Nick into the back room, knocked the head out of a sugar barrel and told him to wade in. Late along in the shank of the evenin the storekeeper went into the back room after somethin, and there was Joe Nick, you understand, still packin away the sugar.

"Well, my little man," says the storekeeper, "aint you got enough sugar yet?"

"No sir," says Joe Nick, "I couldn't say for certain that I have got enough, but by the Hokus-pokus I have done got down to where it aint sweet."

Now I don't make out like I have got enough of fishin and foolin around down on Big Wolf Creek, you understand, but by gracious at any rates I have done got to the pass where it aint sweet no more.

Which was Which and Who was Who?

About the most strangest thing in this wide and wicked world to me is to find so many natural born fools amongst smart men. Now in regards to sense, Elder Newton and Bob Nettles stand way up yonder in the settlement, but they got into a terrible big disputation one day last week as to which side of a railroad train—the inside or the outside—is the highest when she runs around a curve. I don't know which was which nor who was who, but anyhow Bob stuck to it that one side was the highest, whilst Elder Newton maintains that the other side was the highest. So there they had it—up and down and over and under—till finally at last they worked up a little side bet of three dollars and six bits as to which was which and who was who.

Last Saturday they saddled up their horses and lit out and rode fifteen miles up the country to find the railroad and see a train go round the curve in orderment to settle the bet. They found the railroad and a curve and then hunkered down there and waited for a train to run. That is all I know exceptin that Bob he win the bet and the Elder says there aint no kick comin his way.

But me and Andy Lucas are now thinkin right serious about takin out papers of compellment to send Bob and the Elder off to the crazy Siloam.

WASHINGTON NEWS

Secretary Herbert Calls for Bids for Six More Boats.

THE COLUMBIA'S OCEAN TRIAL TRIP.

Report of the Riots in China—The Montgomery on Her Way to the New York Squadron—Comment From the Nation's Capital.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Celso Cæsar Moreno, who was yesterday indicted for criminal libel in publishing an article reflecting on Baron Fava, the Italian ambassador was arrested yesterday and brought before Judge Cole, in the criminal court. Moreno pleaded not guilty and gave $1,000 bail for his appearance at the October term of court.

The state department has received from Minister to China Denby particulars of the anti-Christian riots at Chingtu. No foreigners except a Catholic bishop were injured, and he not seriously. The minister adds: "The breaking out of a riot in such a city thoroughly indicates that the effect of the recent war has not been felt in the interior ot China."

The United States steamship Montgomery sailed from Colon for Key West yesterday with the Nicaraguan commission on board. The commission has finished its work. The Montgomery is wanted to join Admiral Bunce's squadron to begin August 1. The department was expected to bring the commission to Mobile, but the vessel is ordered via Key West. The commission will be put ashore at Key West that it may come directly by train to Washington. But if the health authorities object to their landing, which is believed to be probable, they will go by sea to New York.

The announcement that the cruiser Columbia had been placed in dry dock at Southampton to have her bottom cleaned and made ready for her race across the ocean for warship record was confirmed by Secretary of the Navy Herbert, yesterday, who, it appears, had given Captain Sumner permission some days ago to incur this expense. This will materially change the conditions under which the Columbia will make the race, placing her in better conditions as far as a clean hull is concerned than most of the trans-Atlantic passenger steamers when their records were made and remove one of the possible excuses should she make a poor showing. It only remains now to increase the force of firemen on the vessel to make her equal in all respects to the other vessels of the same coal capacity running between New York and European ports. Naval officers predict that the Columbia will sight Sandy Hook light in about 7 days after she leaves Southampton and that it would be unfair to expect any greater performance from her for such a long run.

Secretary Herbert has called for proposals for the construction of six light-draught composite gunboats which congress authorized at a cost not exceeding $230,000 each exclusive of armament. Four of these vessels are to be equipped with considerable sail power in addition to steam, the other two having masts for military purposes only. The great innovation involved in these vessels as far as the American navy is concerned, lies in the fact that while their frames and general construction will be of steel, their hulls are to be sheathened with wood and copper. The essential reasons for this method of construction and for the selection of the types are that the vessels will be largely independent of docking facilities and economical in the use of fuel.

The docking expenses, whether at home or abroad, and the cost of fuel are two very serious outlays that these vessels are counted upon to minimize, while their activity, range of action and general efficiency are greatly increased.

The character of the service for which these gunboats are particularly designed requires that they be exposed to musketry fire and the housing of the major part of the battery by an unbroken deck, besides adding materially to the stiffness and strength of the vessels, gives admirable protection to the gun crews in action. The necessarily exposed position of the bow and the stern guns is justfied only by their arc of fire and possible usefulness in a running action; while for the river service, for which these boats are particularly fitted, the disposition of the gun deck battery is all that could be desired.

The vessels with sail power have single screws, the steam propelled boat have twin screws and differing in many ways.

The armaments being identical in both types, will consist of six 4-inch, four 6-pounder and two 1-pounder guns all rapid fire.

BASEBALL IN A ROW.

Visiting and Local Negroes Go to Shooting Each Other.

GREENWOOD, S. C., July 13.—A large negro excursion was in town yesterday from Clinton and there was a match game of ball. At the end of the second inning a riot was inauguarated and pandemonium prevailed. There was a perfect fusillade of pistol shots in the dense crowd of negroes. A Clinton tough and a Greenwood outlaw started the riot. Silas Roden of Clinton was shot in the leg and badly wounded in the head. Dan Hester, a bystander, was shot through the thigh. Albert Gilbert, our outlaw, was not hurt, but will not escape the town council.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 13.—Judge E. M. Randall, one of the oldest and most dististinguished members of the Florida bar, died last night. Does a Gang of Outlaws Rob and Murder in Florida.

LAKE CITY, Fla., July 13.—A band of mounted robbers galloped into this place about 2 a. m., dynamited and robbed the safe in A. M. Chandler's store, looted ticket office at the depot, shot at night watchman, wounded a negro and then rode out of town with their plunder, firing of their pistols. This gang in four weeks has raided the town of Jasper, Live Oak, White Springs, Huntington, Hawthorn and Lake city, securing booty valued at several thousand dollars. They always use dynamite to open safes and raid mercantile establishments, which do a banking business. It is said the gang has a rendezvous in the Okeefinokee swamp and that local confederates inform them when to strike. Report is current that the robbers lynched the negro preacher, Bennett, recently because he had discovered the identity of some of them. The officers of Hamilton, Columbia, and Suwance counties are aroused and will try to kill or capture the gang.

C., July 13.—Persons arriving today from Montgomery county say that a seventeen year old white lad named Tucker, murdered a negro convict he had in charge, while the latter was handcuffed, by shooting him twice with a rifle, and then buried his body in the sand, burying the rifle beside the body. The boy says the negro ran and he shot at him but the negro got away.

The official report of the North Carolina increase in railroad mileage during the past 12 months shows it to have been forty-two miles. Another road twenty-two miles long between Hendersonville and Brevard will be completed in twenty days.

A braddice was built across the slope to smother out the fire, but a venturesome miner went near it with a naked light. There was a leak in the braddice, and the gas becoming ignited fired an accumulation of black damp which exploded breaking down the braddice and killing one man, and wounding ten others. The fire, it is understood is burning yet, having caught ten days ago. Convicts are worked in No. 1.

GOLD IN THE SENATE

Is What the Silver Men Say is the Existing Fight.

SOME PROBABLE SENATORIAL CHANGES

Is Oates After the Place of Senator Pugh? What Part Will Secretary Hoke Smith Play in Georgia?—Current Chat on the Situation.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—It is rumored here that Governor Oates, of Alabama, who is now in Washington, expects to succeed Mr. Pugh in the United States Senate. His friends believe that he will succeed in this ambition, and the anti-silver men are anxious that he should. Oates started his fight for the governorship of Alabama for the purpose of checking the populistic tendencies of his party in the state, and during the campaign he drifted over to the "sound" money side, with which he had not before been identified. He stands now as an administration democrat, and is relied upon to hold the state in line. Pugh is one of the most pronounced silver advocates and anti-Cleveland men. His term expires with that of Cameron and Blackburn—in '97—so that he will serve through this congress; but the anti-silver men are looking that far ahead—and farther. They recognize that the senate is the great stronghold of silver, stronger in the next congress than in the last, and that they must look a long way ahead in order to meet the situation.

The work that is already being done in this direction indicates a number of changes. Blackburn's knockout in Kentucky, if followed by defeat for re-election, as indicated, will reduce the silver forces by the loss of one leader to start with. If Oates' hopes are well founded another will fall by the wayside. The fight on Cameron in Pennsylvania points to another should the anti-Quay people win the fight now in progress over the control of the state organization.

The Georgia Senatorship.

Secretary Smith is expected by the sound money democrats to succeed Gordon from Georgia. The man whom he will probably have to defeat in order to do this is ex-Speaker Crisp, one of the ablest of the free silver men of the south; who has twice refused the senatorship, but who the silver men expect to succeed Gordon. Hansbrough, of North Dakoto, who otherwise would meet with no opposition, is having a hard fight made on him because of his position in favor of silver.

The same is the case with Mitchell of Oregon. In fact, the fight is being made all along the line to dislodge silver men from the senate which will come into existence with the next administration. Where there is no hope of electing an anti-silver man the purpose is to at least bring about a change so as to get rid of men whom experience has shown to be the most dangerous opponents to sound money. The case of Dubois is an instance of this. There is no hope of any but a silver man coming from Idaho, but a hard fight is being made to let it be some other than the young man who put up such a stiff fight against the repeal of the Sherman law. If he could be defeated it would relieve the sound money element in the senate of one of the most active and dangerous advertisers. There would be a fight on Teller, on the same principle, only there is no situation in Colorado, as there is in Idaho, to give encouragement.

TO VISIT ATLANTA.

The National Educational Association Will Do So in October.

DENVER, Col., July 13.—The thirty-fourth annual convention of the National Educational association is in session here and the attendance is estimated at 25,000.

The following officers were elected: H. S. Tarbell, Providence, R. I., president; Earl Barnes, Menlo Park, Cal., vice-president; Bettie A. Dutton, Cleveland, secretary and treasurer; Charles D. Carmo, Salarthmore, Pa.; D. A. Keihl, Minneapolis; J. R. Preston, Jackson, Miss., and J. M. Green, Trenton, N. J. executive committee.

The association accepted an invitation to visit the Cotton States and International exposition, in Atlanta, during the month of October, where they will attend the educational congress that is to be held at the exposition during the last week in October.

The educational congress will be in session for a week and will attract educators from every section of the country.

An Illinois Central Wreck.

PONCHATULA, La., July 13.—Illinois Central passenger train which left New Orleans yesterday, was wrecked two miles north of here. Jack Purdy, the engineer, was killed, and the fireman, George Hammond, and baggage-man, Dick Hogan, were badly hurt. Beyond this no others were injured. The wreck was caused by some one malaciously tampering with the switch. The wounded were attended by physicians of this place. Four negro tramps have been arrested.

Laundry Burned at Augusta

AUGTSTA, Ga., July 13.—Yesterday fire broke out in the three story brick building on Eighth street, occupied by the Augusta steam laundry. When discovered the fire had secured a strong headway and by the time the department had arrived the second and third floors were in a mass of flames. Two hours and a half the department fought the fire and succeeded in confining it in the laundry building. Total loss about $23,000, fully covered by insurance.

The Perjury Case.

NEW ORLANS, La., July 13.—The application for a new trial filed some time ago by the attorney for Mr. Henry Bier, the well known broker who was convicted of perjury, in the street railway franchises was overruled yesterday in the criminal court by Judge Moise.

A COAL COMMISSIONER.

Alabama Coal Dealers Organize to Regulate Prices.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 13.—The coal mine operators in Alabama have about perfected the formation of a big coal selling pool which has been in process of organization for some time. It is designed much like the southern pig iron pool recently formed by the Tennessee Coal and Iron railroad company and several other large producers. The coal pool includes, it is said, all the coal mining companies of any importance in Alabama. The purpose of it will be to control and maintain prices with some degree of uniformity, thus preventing the cutting of rates. It is understood that a commissioner will be appointed to look after rates and prices just as a commissioner of an association of railroads. His headquarters will be in this city. It is said that the pool will maintain stiffer prices on domestic coal in order to compete successfully with outsiders in the sale of export coal.

It is said that an effort which the local retail dealers made to form a combine and raise retail prices in this city failed because of the refusal of the dealers to enter.

NOT JUSTICE, BUT MERCY.

The Unfortunate Then Tries to End the the Court's Sentence.

CINCINNATI, O., July 13.—"I ask not for justice, I beg for mercy," was the pleading of Bessie Johnson in the police court yesterday. She had been arrested time and time again for drunkenness. Judge Gregg had warned her that on her next appearance he would place the habitual criminal act against her. She was found Wednesday night in a beastly state of intoxication. In police court the records of various arrests and sentences were read.

"You asked me to do that the last time," replied His Honor, "and I did. Three years and costs."

Turning quickly she cried; "I'll not serve it; I'll kill myself."

Reaching the top of the stone steps leading down to the station she threw herself head first forward. The woman comes of an aristocratic Georgia family, studied music under the best master in Europe and at one time was a bright star in the musical world. She is at the hospital and will recover.

IN A PYTHIAN LODGE.

E. C. Etter Shoots a Rival Saloonist, at Rockwood.

ROCKWOOD, Tenn., July 13.—Yesterday E. C. Etter, proprietor of the "Old Kentuck" saloon, shot Arch Lee, proprietor of the "Cob-Web" saloon. The shooting occurred in the Knights of Pythias lodge room, just as the lodge was being called to order, and was done before any one knew what was going to take place. Only one shot from a 41-calibre Colt's revolver was fired, taking effect in the left thigh and ranging downward.

The exact nature of the wound is not known, but it is thought the thigh bone is broken, and that it is otherwise a very serious wound.

The Sun's Cotton Review.

NEW YORK, July 13.—Cotton fell 7 to 8 points and closed barely steady at about the lowest prices with sales of 127,000 bales. New Orleans declined 5 to 7 points. Liverpool was unchanged on the spot, with sales of 7,000 bales. Futures advanced half a point and closed quiet. At the ports the receipts were 382 against 464 this day last week and 680 last year: total for the week 5,853, against 3,503 last week and 5,031 last year. Spot cotton here was weak but without quotable change.

THE LIQUOR LAWS

Bring Fresh and Continued Troubles in South Carolina

THE EFFECTS OF A NEW STATUTE.

It is Enforced on One Party, Which Brings on a Test at Arms—Great Excitement Prevails Over It in the Palmetto State.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 13.—A few days ago the state authorities began to apply to ex-liquor dealers a section of the state dispensary law which provides that a circuit judge can enjoin any man from selling liquor and in case he violates it, permitting him to be jerked up for contempt of court; that the judge can then, on almost any kind of a showing, declare him guilty and sentence him to the penitentiary, doing away with the constitutional right of a trial by jury which is guaranteed to every man.

In accordance with this policy, William Sheppard, an ex-liquor dealer, was jerked up here yesterday before Circuit Judge Townsend. His attorney made a brilliant fight for the preservation of the constitutional right. Yesterday afternoon about 5 o'clock the judge rendered his opinion, overruling the objections of Sheppard's attorney, adjudging Sheppard guilty of contempt and sentencing him to eight months imprisonment in the state penitentiary and to pay a fine of $200. Before the sun had set pistols were cracking at a rapid rate on one of the principal streets of the city—Gervias street—and Sheppard was being carried to the state prison like a murderer with blood streaming from his garments, there being wounds in his legs and neck. The warrant for arrest and commitment was placed in the hands of Liquor Constable Speed for service. He got his force of men out and they finally surrounded Sheppard's place of business. No one was in there but Sheppard. Some fifteen or twenty shots were fired altogether. Civilian and city police witnesses say that Constable Jenkins started the fusillade, firing in the store upon Sheppard three times before another report was heard. The constables say that they called on Sheppard to surrender, that he refused to do so, whipped out two pistols and began to fire at Constable Speed. Speed's hand and neck were grazed by bullets. Constable Jenkins, who was using two pistols also, had his neck grazed by a bullet. Chief of Police Daly, who was close at hand, had difficuly in getting Jenkins to stop firing, he says. Constable Holloway fired four or five shots into the store too. The bullets are imbedded in a partition in the store near which Sheppard was standing. Chief Daly finally got inside and Sheppard almost shot him before he saw who he was. Sheppard stated to him that he would surrender to him, but to nobody else. He was taken out into the street, placed in a wagon and carried to the state penitentiary where his wounds were dressed.

The constables tell a different story of the battle from any of the other witnesses. Speed said he went inside and called on Sheppard to surrender. Sheppard told him he would not and pulled two pistols, firing at him twice before he could get his own pistols out. Then he says Sheppard dodged behind a screen and kept up his fire. Jenkins and the others fired in from the outside. When Sheppard fell he walked out and as he was going out Sheppard fired at him again. Jenkins tells a story agreeing with Speed in essential particulars. Sheppard's two pistols, when taken from him along with a razor, showed a total of only four empty chambers.

Sheppard is an old liquor dealer here, but the evidence adduced at the hearing yesterday was to the effect that he had given up the business as soon as the injunction was passed upon him.

His brother was arrested also for violating the dispensary law. Considerable excitement was occasioned by the shooting.

Attorney General Barber has applied for a writ of habeas corpus before Chief Justice Fuller in the case of Lafar, one of the constables jailed by Judge Simonton for contempt in violating his liquor injunction order.

JUDGES ARRESTED.

McGann May Lose His Seat in Congress by the Investigation.

CHICAGO, Ill., July 13.—As a result of the McGann-Belknap election contest in the second congressional district, Election Commissioner Keenan swore out warrants yesterday for the arrest of John Ready. Andrew Buchanan, and A. E. Gage, judges of election, last November in the twentieth precinct of the first ward. When the ballots of that precinct were gone over it was found McGann had been credited with 86 more votes than he was entitled to and that Belknap should have received 42 more than were given him on the tally sheets; also that Clark, the peoples candidate for congress, had been cheated out of 18. This will probably cost McGann his seat in congress.

The Orangemen's Parades

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Orangemen paraded everywhere throughout Canada and the northern and western states yesterday without molestation anywhere so far as heard from. The greatest number of paraders, 4,000 is reported from Philadelphia, the home of Grand Master Kennedy. The program was uniformly the same, a street parade in the forenoon, followed by picnics in the suburbs with evening spent in dancing.

Head Split by a Circular Saw.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 13.—George R. List, a carpenter, met a horrible death at the Mount Vernon shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad company yesterday. He was standing near a large circular saw when a pile of lumber toppled over on him, throwing his head against the swiftly revolving saw. In an instant the blade had bisected his brain.

THE CONDITIONS OF TRADE.

What the Commercial Agencies of Dun and Bradstree's Say of Trade.

NEW YORK, July 13.—R. G. Dun & Co. in their weekly review of trade will say today:

A business flood so strong and rapid that the conservatives fear it may do harm, is out of season in July. But the seasons this year lap over and crowd each other. May frosts and frights, it is now evident, kept back much business that would naturally have been finished before midsummer, and the delayed culmination of one season gets in the way of efforts to begin another on time. But the volume of business, however it may be measured, is remarkably large for the month.

Cotton has not changed, though speculation still turns wholly on prospects, regardless of enormous stocks carried over. In Europe the manufacturer lags but here is satisfactory.

The weekly output of pig iron was 171,194 tons, having risen 13,790 tons in June and other furnaces have gone into operation since July 4th. The rapid rise in prices has brought into operation many additional works, and there is still a rush to buy before prices advance further. Influential manufacturers are sending out warnings that the rise may easily do mischief, and prices have in fact advanced nearly six per cent in two weeks but are still 15 per cent lower than in October, 1892. The demand for structural forms is enormous. Bessemer pig has advanced to 14.40 at Pittsburg, and wire hails to $1.55, both higher than in October, 1892; grey forge to $11.25, structural beams to 1.5 and angles to 1.35.

Wool is still advancing with enormous sales. As the sales are about four times the weekly consumptions, it is obvious that the market is essentially speculative.

Cotton goods continue active and strong, with comparitively little difficulty as to labor. The northern mills have taken little over 100,000 bales in the past there months, since cotton was below 7 cents, but with cotton bought cheap for five months ahead, they are able to do good business. It is not the season for activity in boots and shoes, and orders have fallen off. Prices of shoes, leather and hides are as stiff as ever.

Foreign trade is not quite encouraging, exports for July showing a large decrease.

The failure for the first four days of July show liabilities of $1,258,500, of which $386,434 were of manufacturing and $702,096 of trading concerns. Failures this week have been 253 in the United States against 217 last year and 33 in Canada against 49 last year.

To which Bradstreets adds:

Among eastern cities there is a change for the better at Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Providence. Manufacturers of woolens and jewelry report a better demand while all forms of iron and steel are in active request, these features resulting in stimulation of business in other lines. With a few exceptions general trade is quiet, and summer dullness prevails throughout the south. The exception is with request to iron mills which are running full time. This is conspicuous at Chattanooga, and is beginning to be so at Birmingham. At Atlanta, sales of hardware are larger, but those of dry goods, shoes and groceries are smaller. New Orleans reports only a fair volume of business, less than was expected.

Bank clearings throughout the country this week present the largest total since the period of panic in 1893. $1,146,009,000, 30 per cent larger than in the second week of July, 1894, and 14 per cent larger than in the second week of July, 1893.

June railway earnings show continued improvement in the largest gain for any month in two years.

The notable falling off in June is that in earnings of the Southern roads, caused by the coal miners' strike on the Norfolk and Western Railroad.

There were 256 failures in business in the United States this week, as compared with 197 last week, 229 in the second week of July, 1894, and 398 in the like week in 1893.

Current News For the Week Throughout the State.

TO PREVENT HIS BEING LYNCHED.

The Mississippi Authorities are Required to Get a Requisition for Thomas. Serious Casualty at Decatur. Other State News.

MOBILE, Ala., July 10.—On Tuesday last a negro named Andrew Thomas, it is alleged, criminally assaulted an old lady named Vize, about three miles from Moss Point, Miss., and left her on the roadside more dead than alive. Friday night the negro was arrested, and, although he gave his name as Henry Adams, he was identified by several parties who knew him as Andrew Thomas, the negro who was wanted. The Jackson county authorities were notified, but it was finally rumored in this city that the negro was certain to be lynched the very minute that he set foot on Mississippi soil. On Sunday night Thomas confessed to Chief Burke.

Yesterday the Jackson county officials came to get the prisoner, but in the meantime Chief Burke had become convinced that there was going to be a lynching sure if he turned the prisoner over to the officers from Mississippi, and he therefore announced that he would not turn the prisoner over to them until they came armed with the order of the governor of Mississippi in the shape of a requisition.

Reports from Scranton are to the effect that there were men on horseback along side the railroad to carry the news of the negroes arrival to a mob, which was in waiting to lynch him if he had shown up on the train.

It is thought here that Governor Oates will not recognize the requisition until he is given assurance by the Mississippi authorities that they will protect the negro and not allow him to be lynched. The next step in the case is being awaited here with considerable excitement.

CASUALTY AT DECATUR.

Boy Watching a Funeral Falls From a Tree and is Killed.

NEW DECATUR, Ala., July 8.—Saturday night Dr. C. W. Buchley started to Memphis with Superintendent Ed Lewis, of the Oak Extract company, who was very ill. Medical attention in Memphis, it was thought, would be the only thing to save Mr. Lewis. While en route Mr. Lewis died with heart failure. They brought his body back yesterday. A large delegation of business men met the remains. While the funeral cortege was passing at the corner of Lafayette and Ferry street, Decatur, Frank Reeves, a bright little 9-year-old child, climbed into a tree to see it pass by. Just after the procession had passed, the boy fell from the tree, falling on the back of his head, killing him instantly.

This is peculiarly sad from the fact that the boy's grandfather is lying at the point of death.

The building is to be one of modern style, with all conveniences, and will be built of brick and stone. Work will be begun on it next Monday.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 8.—A special to the Age-Herald, from Gadsden, Ala., says that a gang of fire bugs are at work there. The government's fiscal year, commencing on the 1st of July and expiring on the 30th of June, was established by act of congress in 1842. Prior to that accounts were kept according to the calendar year. The change was ten years in debate before congress assented to it. The reason for the change is that since congress meets in December it is much more convenient to have the government year end several months before that time in order that reports and estimates may be made up in readiness for its consideration.

A test lately made on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad indicates that the substitution of electricity for steam upon the present tracks can be made without difficulty or much expense. Electric locomotives will have to be built and put in place of the present ones. In a run on the Nantasket branch of the road mentioned, 80 miles an hour was made without the least trouble. An electric locomotive was hitched to a load of 175 tons, equal to seven loaded passenger cars, and showed that it could pull 20 cars if necessary. The large roads will now substitute electricity for steam, and we shall be traveling 100 miles an hour before the end of the century.

The official figures of the losses of the Japanese in the recent war with China shows what a one-sided affair it was. Here was a nation of 40,000,000 people putting forth its best efforts against the gigantic power of an empire of over 400,000,000 population and carrying on from start to finish an aggressive conflict, invading the territory of the great power, capturing its fortifications and driving its splendid fleets from the sea, and yet the Japanese officially report a loss of only 623 killed in battle. In addition 172 are reported as having died of their wounds. Those wounded not fatally are placed at 2,891. There were 2,489 deaths in the Japanese armies from cholera and 2,891 from other diseases. This, of course shows rather the weakness and imbecility of China than the prowess of Japan.—Advertiser.

THE WAGE EARNERS.

Their Vital Interest in the Matter of This Country Having Honest Money.

Baltimore Sun.

This is not the first time that the great mass of the producing and working people of this country have been besought to aid in debasing its standard money upon the demagogic plea that their interests were antagonistic to those of the "creditor class." Nor are the free coinage orators saying anything new when they cry out for "a new declaration of independence," and implore the industrious millions who live by their daily toil to rise up against an imaginary "money power" that threatens to "destroy their liberties."

It is now sixty-one years ago since these same windy phrases were as freely used as they are now. Daniel Webster quoted them in one of his speeches in the senate in 1834, and said: "I admolish every industrious laborer to be on his guard against such delusion. I tell him the attempt to play off his passions against his interests, and to prevail on him, in the name of liberty; in the name of patriotism to injure and afflict his country, and, in the name of his own independence, to destroy that very independence and make him a beggar and a slave. Has he a dollar? He is advised to do that which will destroy half its value." The free silverites are advising him to do exactly that today—to make the dollars he has earned and the dollars he has put by in the savings banks, or in the equity of his little home worth 50 cents, instead of 100 cents apiece.

In urging men who till the farms and toil in the factories and workshops to join in chasing the old jack-o-lantern of flat money through the swamp of sixteen-to-oneism, the Stewarts, Bryans and Blackburns are telling them that it is only the bankers on Wall street and the money lenders of the world at large who will be hurt by coining dollars that will cheat everybody who gets one to the extent of 50 cents. As a matter of cold fact, Wall street is not nearly so much interested in preventing the coinage of half-price dollars as are the working people. By the official returns to the treasury the net deposits of all the banks of the city of New York are about forty-eight millions in excess of their loans. Now the deposits represent the debts of the banks and the loans are their credits. It would puzzle the smartest free silverite to show how the national banks of New York as corporations, would suffer by the enactment of a free coinage law that would enable them to pay back the excess of their deposits over their loans in dollars worth about one-half as much as those they are now called upon to pay. How is Wall street—if by that phrase the national banking corporations of New York City are meant to be described—to be injured by scaling down their liabilities 50 per cent?

If the working classes turn their attention to the savings banks returns, and see how their interest stand in relation to them, they will find again that they themselves, not the savings banks as corporations, are the real "creditor class" whom the free-silverites propose to injure and strike down. According to official returns they have deposited in the savings banks of the United States nearly $2,000,000,000. They are clearly a creditor class to that extent. Those two thousand millions of hard-earned dollars, every one of them today is as good as gold, would, if the free silver agitation succeeded, be subject to a 50 per cent. shave. Savings bank directors have simply acted as their trustees, and invested that vast amount of deposits in good securities worth 100 cents on the dollar, if the gold standard is maintained. But if the Stewarts and Bryans are to have their way the debtors who have borrowed these savings banks' deposits on mortgage will be allowed to repay their losses in 50-cent dollars. If that ever happens, of course the savings bank depositors will only be able to get back their deposits in the same kind of money.

The wage worker is always in the "creditor class." He furnishes his labor all the week on trust, relying upon his employer to discharge the debt due to him on Saturday night in dollars worth 100 cents apiece, and if they are not worth that, how is he going to gain by it? But the wage-worker will have to take the 50-cent silver dollar if the flat of the government is put behind it, and he will soon find that though it is a dollar in name it will not have the purchasing power at the stores of the present good-as-gold dollar. The loudest claim of the free silverites is that the present American dollar based on the gold standard buys too much. All commodities are too cheap, we are told, and free silver coinage will make them dearer. But how in the name of common sense the working man will find it to his advantage to have everything he buys made dearer is something that no free silverite has yet attempted to explain. It is the fact, amply attested by statistics, that while prices of all commodities have gone down, making everything that the wage worker buys cheaper than it was twenty years ago, the average of all wages has risen during the same period. Why should the wage worker want that order of things reversed?

Nobody will be benefitted by substituting cheaper dollars for those now in circulation—dollars that will be worth less and that will buy less—except the silver mine owners, the speculators and the large capitalist class that would be able to take advantage of inflated and fluctuating prices and debased coinage to launch all manner of wildcat enterprises that would eventually burst, leaving them richer, but impoverishing the community as a whole. And again Daniel Webster speaks to the heart of the whole question and says: "The very man of all others who has the deepest interest in a sound money currency, and who suffers most by mischievous legislation in money matters is the man who earns his daily bread by his daily toil. His property is in its hands. His reliance, his fund, his productive freehold, his all, is his labor, whether he works on his own small capital or another's his living is still earned by his industry; and when the money of the country becomes depreciated and debased, whether it be adulterated coin, or paper without credit, that industry is robbed of its reward. He then labors for a country whose laws cheat him out of his bread." The flat 50-cent dollar that the free silverites clamor for would do exactly that—cheat the laboring man out of his bread.

THE WORKINGS OF THE TARIFF.

The New York World continues to gather the figures showing the increases in wages and in numbers of workmen affected by them. The list for today includes all the cotton factories in Fall River, employing some 10,000 hands, who receive 12½ per cent. advance, and about fifty other companies all through the New England and Middle states, many of which offer a 15 per cent. advance. Hardly any of them offer less than 10 per cent., and the total number of hands affected must be considerably over 50,000. It is worth noting that almost all the concerns paying these increased wages belong to the class most highly protected under the old tariff, and that in many cases their proprietors were loud in their protestations that the Wilson bill meant ruin to their industries and starvation to their workmen. Some of the more moderate were willing to admit, in confidential conversation, that they might struggle along, but only by reducing wages to the "European level." But wages seem to be fast getting back to the McKinley level, and, if the present pace continues, they will soon attain a greater height. Such a phenomenon would be entirely inexplicable from the protectionists' point of view, but it is exactly what the free traders predicted. The same thing happened in England, and for many reasons our manufacturers will be much easier to convert than the English landed interest. It will be interesting to see how long the explanation of our present prosperity now offered by the protectionists, that it is due to anticipations of a restored tariff, will continue to be urged. This explanation is worn pretty thin already and cannot stand much more of a strain; but we confess we cannot imagine what substitute can be devised. It is reported that that arrant freetrader, Mr. David A. Wells, has recently combined with several gentlemen, some of them protectionists, to start a new cotton factory of very great size. It is hardly credible that Mr. Wells has gone into this enterprise upon the mere chance that the McKinley tariff will be restored; but the confidence of his associates may have induced him to make the investment and take the chances.

MY HAPPY CHILDHOOD'S HOME.

While musing o'er the happy past
One evening when alone,
I thought again of boyhood days,
Of mother, friends and home.

Again I hear the merry shout
Of playmates full of glee.
Again we to the orchard run
And climb an apple tree.

Or on the bosom of the lake
We launch our little boat,
And watch the ripples 'round us break
As on we gayly float.

Again we chase the butterfly
Across the verdant lawn
Or plow the sand beside the brook
That flows in quiet on.

Could not I find again that place
And happy be as then?
Could not I find that care free spot,
My childhood's happy home again!

Is not the spring of water pure
Still flowing by the lane?
Where oft in boyish sport we made
Mill wheels, and pumps of cane.

Are not the apple trees there still
That bore those apples sweet?
Could not I shake the tree and see
Them fall around my feet?

Returning from the weary ways
Where oft my footsteps roam,
Could not I find a solace still
Within my childhood's home.

No; though I find the place once more
And o'er the meadows roam
There still would be a missing link—
It could not be my home.

The playmates that I loved so well
Are scattered far and wide
While some have sailed o'er Jordan's stream
And reached the other side.

My father, too, would not be there,
I could not find my mother,
And I might look about the place
But could not find my brother;

For they have crossed the mighty stream
Obscured in clouds and foam
Then can I call the old house still
My childhood's happy home.

His Buried Arm Hurt Him.

Peter King, a lumberman of Grass Valley, recently met with a terrible accident whereby he lost one of his arms in a planing machine. The severed limb was buried in such a manner that when subsequently disinterred it was found that the hand and wrist were twisted. The strange feature of the affair is the fact that King suffered considerable pain until the buried member was dug up and straightened, when the cramped and strained feeling entirely vanished.—Grass Valley (Cal.) Tidiogs.

You can never tell how much of a man's heart belongs to Christ by knowing the size of his head.

INGERSOLL ON ALCOHOL

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, addressing a jury in a case which involved the manufacture of alcohol, made the following terrible arraignment of the demon:

"I am aware that there is a prejudice against any man who manufactures liquor. I believe that from the time it issues from the coiled and poisonous worm in the distillery until it empties into the jaws of death, dishonor and crime, it demoralizes everybody that touches it, from its source to where it ends. I do not believe anybody can contemplate the object without being prejudiced against the liquor crime. All we have to do gentlemen, is think of the wrecks on either bank of the stream of death, of the suicides, of the insanity, of the ignorance, of the destitution, of the little children tugging at the faded and withered breast of weeping and desparing mothers, of wives asking for bread, of the men of genius it has wrecked, the men struggling with imaginary serpents, produced by this devilish thing; and when you think of the jails, of the alms houses, of the asylums, of the prisons, of the scaffolds upon either bank, I do not wonder that every thoughtful man is prejudiced against this damned stuff called alcohol. Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength, old age in its weakness. It breaks the father's heart, bereaves the doting mother, extinguishes natural affection, erases conjugal love, blots out filial attachments, blights parental hopes, brings down mourning ages in sorrow to the grave. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness not health; death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans; fathers fiends; and all of them paupers and beggars. It feeds rheumatism, invites cholera, imports pestilence and embraces consumption. It covers the land with idleness, misery, crime. It fills your jails, supplies your alm houses, and demands your asylums. It engenders controversies, fosters quarrels and cherishes riots.

It crowds your penitentiaries, and furnishes victims for your scaffolds.

It is the life blood of the gambler, the element of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman, and support of the midnight incendiary.

It countenances the liar, respects the thief, esteems the blasphemer.

It violates obligation, reverences fraud and honors infamy. It defames benevolence, hates love, scorns virtue, and slanders innocence. It incites the father to butcher his helpless offspring, helps the husband to massacre his wife and the child to grind the paricidal axe. It burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God, despises heaven. It suborns witnesses, nurses perjury, defiles the jury box and stains judicial ermine. It degrades the citizen, debases the legislature, dishonors the statesman and disarms the patriot. It brings shame not honor; fear, not safety; despair, not hope; misery, not happiness; and with the malevolence of a fiend it calmly surveys its frightful desolation and unsatiated havoc. It poisons felicity, kills peace, ruins morals, and wipes out rational honor, then curses the world and laughs at its ruin. It does all that and more.

It murders the soul. It is the sum of all villians, the father of all crimes, the devil's best friend and God's worst enemy."

THE SONG.

There is ever a song, somewhere, my dear,
There is ever a something sings alway;
There's the song of the lark when the skies are clear,
And the song of the thrush when the skies are gray.
The sunshine showers across the grain
And the bluebird trills in the orchard tree;
And in and out when the eaves drip rain,
The swallows are twitting ceaselessly.

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear,
Be the skies above or dark or fair;
There is ever a song that our hearts may hear—
There is ever a song somewhere, my dear—
There is ever a song somewhere!

There is ever a song somewhere my dear,
In the midnight black or the midday blue;
The robin pipes when the sun is here,
And the cricket chirrups the whole night thro';
The buds may blow and the fruit may grow,
And the autumn leaves drop crisp and sere;
But whether the sun, or the rain, or the snow,
There is a song somewhere, my dear.

There is ever a song somewhere, my dear,
Be the skies above or dark or fair;
There is ever a song that our hearts may hear—
There is ever a song somewhere, my dear—
There is ever a song somewhere.

Honey-Bee Industry.

We often speak of the wonderful and admirable industry of the honey-bee without thinking of the amount of labor which that industry really represents. Careful experiments have shown that a red clover blossom contains on an average less than one-eighth of a grain of sugar. There being seven thousand grains in a pound, the bee that makes a pound of honey must obtain its material from no less than fifty-six thousand clover-heads. But this is not the whole story. In order to get the nectar the bee is compeled to insert its proboscis separately into each floret or flower-tube, composing the head of clover, and there are about sixty florets in every head. The insect must therefore, perform this operation sixty times fifty-six thousand or three million three hundred and sixty thousand times, in order to obtain a pound of nectar!—Youth's Companion.

The strawberry is known all over the world, and was used as an article of food by the ancients.

If the whole world should know the truth about God the millennium would be here tomorrow.

A STRANGE CASE.

A Man Who Seems to Have Two Available Brains.

The case of Hugh Parry, reported in the Quarterly Journal of the Neurological Society, is highly instructive. Mr. Parry is a Welshman, with a brain like the the rest of us. That is, it is divided into two hemispheres, very much alike. But the peculiarity of Mr. Barry's brain is, that instead of working together, the hemispheres work in shifts and relieve each other.

When the right side of the brain is on duty Mr. Parry can talk nothing but Welsh, and that only in a feeble way. He will neither drink nor smoke nor talk politics, nor do any of the numerous things that he takes pleasure in doing when the left hemisphere is in operation. When this occurs Mr. Parry talks English fluently, smokes, is anxious to make money, and—only in the interest of science reconciles us to making the statement—is not at all particular about the methods he emplays in getting it.

The neurologists seem to think the case absolutely unique. They mistake. It is very common. With Mr. Parry the symptoms are a trifle exaggerated, perhaps. In politics the right hemisphere is never allowed to get entire control. But it does control quite frequently, even through the presidential candidate who was the Welsh Parry before the election becomes the other Parry the minute he is in office. Or, if the case is that of an Easy Boss, he is the English Parry all the week and the Welsh Parry only while he is sitting in the pew on Sunday.

Phychology and neurology are great sciences. They help us to understand the case of Dr. Jekel and Mr. Hyde. If discoveries continue to be made in them it may finally become possible to understand more about politics and several other things than is now suspected.—New York World.

A FREE TRIP TO ATLANTA.

The Cotton States Exposition should be visited by every resident of Alabama. Knowing, however, that there are many people, especially in the rural districts, who can ill afford the heavy outlay necessary in order to attend this exhibition, The Advertiser has devised a plan whereby all who are willing to devote a little spare time to calling their neighbor's attention to the excellence of the Semi-Weekly Advertiser as a newspaper, can visit this display of Southern industries and resources.

Every person in the State of Alabama who will send us 100 yearly subscribers to the Semi-Weekly Advertiser at $1 each, before October 1st, 1895, will be presented with a ticket from his or her railway station to Atlanta and return, and in addition will be given $25 in cash for the purpose of defraying his or her expenses while there.

It will not be necessary to send the entire 100 subscribers at once, but names can be forwarded from time to time as they are secured, the sender stating that they are for our Cotton States Exposition Excursion prize. An acurate account will be kept with each competitor, and the announcement of the successful ones will be made as soon after October 1st as is practicable.

There is no good reason why several hundred people should not thus be able to visit the Atlanta Exposition at our expense, as The Semi-Weekly Advertiser is unquestionably the best newspaper of its class in America, and the low subscription price places it within the reach of people of very limited means. It is an Alabama paper for Alabama people and that field defies competition.

Alabama Chautauqua and Alabama Educational Association, Talladega Ala., July 2—28, 1895.

For this occasion the Southern Railway will sell tickets July 1 to July 20th good for return passage on or before August 1st, 1895, at rate of one flirst class limited fare for the round trip, from all points in Alabama.

A splendid program has been arranged. No expense has been spared. Do not spoil trip by failure to procure your ticket over the Southern Railway.

Information will be cheerfully furnished on application, by any agent, or by

The State Commander writes us from Lincoln, Neb., as follows: "After trying other medicines for what seemed to be a very obstinate cough in our two children we tried Dr. King's New Discovery and at the end of two days the cough entirely left them. We will not be without it hereafter, as our experience proves that it cures where all other remedies fail."—Signed F. W. Stevens, State Com. Why not give this great medicine a trial, as it is guaranteed and trial bottles are free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

The horned toad of California is almost as invisible as the sand in which it exists.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-wonths-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

McMillan gave an intertainment at their home on East College street on Friday evening last, in honor of their brother and sister, Miss Annie McMillan and Mr. George Mason, who have recently returned home from school. The guests were invited and were few in number on account of want of room for more. They were composed mostly of the young gentlemen and ladies of the city who have been absent for the past year attending college. Refreshments were served at repeated intervals during the evening. The music furnished by Misses Myrtle Swain and Tommie Alexander was exquisite. The time sped pleasantly and was enjoyed by all.

We have had some of our townsmen to tell us, upon being approached to become subscribers to our paper, that the paper is all right but we don't have enough local news. We endeavor to find out everything that is going on, and record all the happenings, but we do not feel called upon to pull off our coat, roll up our sleeves and proceed to make things happen. If our citizens are inclined to complain of a scarity of local news let them create some, if it is nothing more than a dog fight, and we will gladly make a record of it. We will also ask our townsmen that whenever they have a friend visiting them or know of anything that would be of interest to the community to jot it down and hand it into the office, which we will very greatly appreciate. —Courtland enterprise.

We are very often asked how we stand on the money question. We will endeavor to define our position: Any kind of money is good enough for us, so it will buy the necessities of life and pay debts. We own neither a gold or silver mine, so can't see where we are to profit by either extreme. We have nothing with which to get money except our paper, and will take the subscription price of that either in gold, silver or paper. If you do not believe it shake a dollar at us and see. We expect to be called a straddler on this question, but if the ones that are so quick to cry out "straddler" would put more time and attention to their own business and do less talking about the ratio of 16 to 1 and "gold-bugism" they would make more money than the government will give them, if either the free and unlimited coinage of silver goes into effect or the coinage laws remain as they now are. It is our opinion that those who are doing the most talking have the least money. Here is our motto: Less talk, more work, and any kind of money we can get—honestly.

The late rains has swolen Waxahatchie creek which causes the public to wish that Mr. Comer would soon build the new bridge.

Our social friend, Chas. E. McLane, has gone to Saginaw to take charge of the commissary at that place. We regret of one accord his absence.

Old Uncle Robert Seale, the oldest man in Beat 8, is in a hopeless condition.

Somebody tell School Boy that Tim is all right and is staying at home trying to fall on some plan to pocket some of that money we hear so much talk about.

It seems that our Texas friend only knew of one soldier of the revolution that ever lived in Shelby county. The grandfather of W. C. Wilder, who lives near here, was wounded in the war of the revolution, and died and was buried in Cahaba valley.

We can not remember a more suitable year to make a crop than this, and the prospect for a crop was never any better than at present. The potato crop will be a little short, owing to their rotting in the bed. The oat crop was a little short, but we have an abundance of all kinds of fruit.

We would like to have Dr. Teague give a full history of Alex Steel, who is still living, while lost and rambling over our mountains and swamps for fourteen days among the Indians, wolves and other wild animals that often met him face to face, when only 9 years old.

Harpersville Echoes.

Prof. S. J. Strock, of East Lake, came over last week to spend a few days.

The Hon. Samuel Henderson, of Roanoke, Ala., is visiting his mother's family, near here.

The bridge at Morgan's old mill has mill has been torn down and a new one is being built.

On account of being sick Rev. Mr. Corley did not fill his appointment at the Methodist church last Sunday.

Two Mr. Greene's and a Mr. Beck, of East Lake, and a Miss Montieth, of Atlanta, are visiting Major W. W. Wallace's family.

A young lady is stopping at the home of Mr. Lewis Cross, and Lewis is just as happy as a pig in winter time on a sunshiny day.

A few of the "chosen" picnicked at the Methodist church spring last Thursday, and report having a good time and plenty of grub.

Now, Mr. Editor, what made you go and tell about the doctor going to build that house. We fully intended for you to keep that a secret.

The Harpersville Supreme Court was in session last Saturday, and some of the boys say that it took the judge, six men, Tucker, and a boy to hold it down.

Tom Davis commenced teaching school in the Jones settlement, and the school is to be known as The Jones University of Beat 10. Tuition is below cost and board can be obtained veay cheap.

The heaviest rain of the season fell here Sunday evening and crops are greatly damaged. In low lands the water is still over corn and cotton. Land was washed very bad and young truck was washed up by the roots.

Great Scotts! what a fuss some of the democratic papers are making over the money question. It seem that they have forgotten everything else. The old silver dollar with the eagle on it looks as good as ever, then the shiny gold piece looks just as pretty, and as we never have had too much of either we don't know which is the best.

"JAKE."

Wilsonville Waifs.

Of all the visitors beneath the skies
The melon visitor is an agreeable surprise.

Mr. Arnold has got back from his weeks visit in Calhoun.

Jim Page was affiliating with friends here a few hours Saturday.

Rev. W. A. Montgomery is in attendance upon the Chautauqua this week.

Will Sommerville and family, of Birmingham, are here visiting his father's family, near town.

Our home talent, assisted by a visiting young lady, will give the people a rich treat in the way of a concert in the near future.

Butch was in error last week in giving the time and place of one or two visitors, however they were unintentional errors of the head and not the heart.

Pat McGowen is off for a visit to Talladega and Jacksonville for change and rest he says, but we presume that the hotels will get all his change and the waiters the rest.

Rev. J. M. McCord came over Saturday to fill his appointment on Sunday, but soon after his arrival he received a message which called him away, consequently there was no services in town Sunday.

Miss Lula Densler arrived home Saturday from a month's visit to friends and relatives in South Alabama. Miss Lula reports a very pleasant visit, for how could it be otherwise among those hospitable South Alabamians.

Childersburg played our boys here Friday in a match game of ball, and owing to the late start they did not play but seven innings, as Childersburg had to withdraw in time to leave on passenger train. Childersburg made a good start and they cheered frantically for awhile, but presently our boys put a quietus on them and seemed to take a new lease on the game, although Childersburg beat them by a score 26 to 30.

Messrs. Clardy and Sons, of Talladega, were here Friday to bid and plan on the brick structure soon to be erected by Mr. Pope, and by the dimensions it will be no little building, and will have all the modern conveniences as a store house: in short, it will be the pride of our little village. The report is also current that Mr. Weldon will build a brick store. Then the next thing in order will be to change the name of our town, when a boom will be "a sure thing."

BUTCH.

LETTER FROM INDIAN TERRITORY.

ARDMORE, I. T., July 6, 1895.

"Time changes all things." Only four months have elapsed since I left dear old Shelby Co., and in this short time God in his infinite power has seen fit to call from this, I hope to a better and brighter world quite a number of her best and most noble citizens. Among these departed ones the Hon. Henry Wilson, one of Shelby county's brightest stars, a man any political party, people or county should be proud of. I can but think his death was a stroke to not only his own relations, his town, the good people of Shelby Co., but to the democratic party of that section it was a blow it will struggle to overcome. And the people of Wilsonville too must mourn the loss of some of her most noble christian citizens. Some of her land marks are gone. Some of the churches will miss these faces, for they were always there to add to the services their most earnest and prayerful attention, and to the community at large they were always ready no matter how dark the night or how cold the day to administer unto the wants of the sick or needy. One among this number I allude to was always ready, waiting and willing to do anything, go anywhere or to make any sort of sacrifice for the pleasure of we young people. While I have drifted far away you who remain will miss her.

When picnic days come round and a good time and dinner is expected. Ah! then her home like table will not be spread, her kind and cordial invitation to all to share her hospitalities, will be thought of and missed by many.

It is a solemn thought to me that in my short absence so many faces I once knew and loved I can never see again.

While these I have aluded to were only friends to me, who knows but that the next call may be some one that is near and dear to me? Ah! 'tis then these things come home to us. I fear that ere I return things will be changed about the place and the faces will all be strange.

A SHELBY CO., BOY.

The reason given that birds do not fall off their perch is because they cannot open the foot when the leg is bent. Look at a hen walking, and you will see it close its toes as it raises the foot and open them as it touches the ground.

Comfort in Summer.

If people understood how much of the physical suffering incident to protracted seasons of hot weather is due to the food they eat there would be more common sense used in the selection of diet.

It is not at all uncommon to see in any of the city restaurants men plying fans industriously with one hand, while with the other they convey to their mouths roast beef with a greasy, rich gravy, potatoes heavily buttered, or pork and beans. Having filled their stomachs with a heavy charge, they go out into the heated air and wonder why they suffer so intolerably from the heat. If they loaded the furnaces in their houses with fuel and applied fire to it they would not wonder why the house was uncomfortably warm. Yet they will do a similar thing to their bodies and then wonder and suffer and groan.

In hot weather two things ought to be avoided to insure comfort and health—food and drink that are stimulating or are rich in carbon or nitrogen. Any person can subsist on about one-half the food in the summer that is required in the winter, and the summer diet should consist chiefly of vegetables, fruits, milk and farinaceous foods. Fish should take the place of beef. Pork should be wholly discarded. Milk can be used in place of veal. Spring lamb is always wholesome Macaroni, the various preparations of wheat, farina, toast, asparagus, custards, fruits and the scores of similar delicacies, with some light meat, like lamb, tongue, chicken or fish, once a day should constitute the daily food.

A little common sense lies at the bottom of all physical comfort in these torrid days, and comfort is a more important factor in good health than is generally understood.

Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Sam Jones on Men.

Here is a passage from a recent gospel discourse by Sam Jones. "We have more millionaires than men nowadays. God never made but one man and one woman, and they're scarcer now than they was then. Ever see them little, little fellers—fellers that can see through a keyhole with both eyes, and they ain't cross-eyed, nuther? Why, some of them little fellers can have a fly perch on their nose and paw them in one eye and kick them in the other. Little fellers! My, my, my, but there's lots of pieces of people going round. I'd ruther be some kind of a dog myself than no kind of a man. I'd ruther be a good 'possum dog than a no 'count white man."

Editors Not Eligible There.

An editor died and slowly wended his way to hell. The devil saw him and said: "For many years thou hast borne the blame for the errors thy printers made in the paper. Thy printers have deviled the on Saturday eve for wages when thou hadst not a red to thy name. Men have taken thy paper without paying a cent, verily, and curse thee for not issuing a better one. All these things hast thou borne in silence. There will be a continual dunning of delinquent subscribers (for hell is full of them) and discord will be created in our kingdom. Begone! Heaven is your home."—Ex.

A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Ohio Men With Money to Invest in Alabama Land.

Capt. P. Sid Jones, immigration agent of the Louisville and Nashville, returned yesterday afternoon from Ohio, where he has been in conference with the head men of an immigration movement which has a capital of $175,000. Nearly every immigration agent in the United States has been to see these people, but they are favorable to Alabama, and will be down here during August to look at a tract of 20,000 acres of land.

This combination has been formed for some time and those who belong to it will come south. They want to form their own colony and to start up small manufacturing enterprises, besides to engage in farming and fruit cultivation.—Age-Herald.

THEN SHE GREW A BEARD.

Sad Plight of a Rosy-Cheeked Girl Who Wanted to be More Beautiful.

The desire to make her complexion more beautiful has caused a once bright mind to be left shrouded in the darkest gloom and a family unhappy. Ever since the days of Eve woman has been discontented with her personal beauty and has tried in vain to remedy what nature failed to do. Miss Mary Belcher, of Russellville, Ky., was no exception to the rule. Two years ago she was a bright, dark-haired, happy, rosy-cheeked country girl, the idol of her parents and admired by the entire neighborhood in which she lived. She was given everything that her heart could wish and was to all appearances contented with her lot. One day she read an advertisement of a powder that would make the complexion perfect. The more she thought over what it contained the more she felt the need of it. Finally she sent $1 and soon afterwards received a package of powder with the direction to apply to the face in the form of a paste every morning and night. She used it for two weeks as directed.

At the end of that time she was horrified to notice the appearance of a black beard all over her face. It grew rapidly and in a short time she had a heavy hirsute growth. She grew hysterical at times over the thought of the unwelcome beard and wept often over the prospects of her future. Everything has been done to remove the beard from her once pretty face, but all efforts proved futile. About six months ago she began to lose interest in the things around her in a dazed sort of way. Finally her once bright mind gave way under the strain of worry over the unfortunate affair and the young lady is today a mental wreck and a mere shadow of her former self.

Many a man would give a good round sum for the beard that has ruined a life and left a family in sorrow. The beard is dark, heavy, and parts at the chin. The unfortunate young lady is now 22 years of age and lives with her parents at Russellville.

It May Do as Much for You.

Mr. Fred Miller, of Irving, Ill., writes that he had a severe kidney trouble for many years, with severe pains in his back and also that his bladder was affected. Electric Bitters is especially adapted to cure of all kidney and liver troubles and often gives almost instant relief. One trial will prove our statement. Price only 50c for large bottle. A Happy Woman.

At last I am a well and happy woman again; thanks to McElree's Wine of Cardui. I have suffered for four years from womb trouble of the most horrible kind. Twelve years ago I went to the San Antonio Hospital where they performed an operation, but it left me in a worse state than ever. I went to Dr. Kingsley and Dr. D. Y. Young, but they gave me little relief. After spending $125 I was not able to leave my bed, and most of the time suffered pains to equal a thousand deaths. On the tenth of last October my friend Mrs. Stevens advised me to try McElree's Wine of Cardui. The first bottle did me good, and I got more, and today I am a new woman; am able to do all my cooking and house work. I am running a boarding-house and doing all the work myself. I still use the Wine, and always keep it in the house—it saved my life.

At the Grand Rogers Rally on the Fourth."

Plenty of Plain Country Grub Without Any Fancy Trimmins to Speak of--A Running Talk With a Grand Old Man.

(Copyright 1893.)

If you didn't go to the grand Rogers rally over at Roger's Cross Roads on the 4th of July you never can live long enough to find out what you missed. Mighty nigh everybody was there, and we had the gonebyest most pleasantest time you ever heard tell of perhaps. Old man Mal Rogers was ninety-one years old on the 3rd, and the day followin he had the whole entire Rogers generation of people, with all their friends and kinnery, over there to a big dinner and a grand family rally. The Rogerses, you understand, are all powerful plain American people, and old man Mal don't put on no extry trimmins or fancy fixments to speak of, but he had enough good country grub on the grounds that day to feed a campmeetin and some to spare.

There was over two hundred people from the Rogers generation at the grand family rally. Old man Mal had 13 children—8 sons and 5 daughters—63 grand children and 140 great grand children on the grounds at one time.

Ruther Plain, But Proud.

A long dinner table was built under the shade of the trees out in the back yard, and when everything was ready and everybody hongry they brung forth the provisions and piled it up there till there want no room for any more. Then some of the men folks went in the house and picked up old man Mal, chair and all, and toted him out and set him down at the head of the table. That looks right and it was right. Old man Mal has lost the use of one of his legs and he can't see no tremendius big sight, you understand, but at the same time he still stands as the general head of the Rogers delegation.

I didn't wade into the dinner that day as deep as usual, but I hit it a few likes in the high places at any rates and managed so as to climb up around enough kitchen physic for one man. Then after dinner I got off in a shady place to one side and took a family smoke and had a long runnin talk with old man Mal.

„I am a ruther poor man, Rufus, which I rickon you have done took notice of that before now, but I am mighty proud," says the old man, talkin slow and dividin time between me and his pipe. "I am not proud of my clothes and neither my general appearments, you understand, cause I aint got nothin along them lines to be stuck up about. But I am proud of the Rogers name—proud of the generation of people that have gone forth into the world from me—proud of the name I have made amongst my people—and proud of the record I will leave behind me when the shower comes and I have to go in. I maybe mought be mistaken about some things, Rufus, but the good Lord He don't make no mistakes, and if I want worth somethin to my people and my county He wouldn't of blessed me with all these children and these white hairs. As arrows are in the hands of a mighty man, so are the children of the youth, you understand."

Let Nature Work Some.

"I couldn't sleep very much last night, Rufus, owin to a powerful spell of thinkin," the old man kept on presently. "And naturally of course I was thinkin mostly about the past. The things that have come to pass here lately in the last few years, I am more than probable to forget, but the dim and duty past—the golden days of childhood and boyhood—all that stands out before my eyes today as bright as a picture and as clear as a bell.

"It was way back yonder in the thirties—the year before the stars fell, if you recollect—when I left old Caroliny and moved my washin down into this country. There was but only two of us then, and you can throw your eyes around here today and see how and where the good Lord has blessed the Rogers generation in basket and store, and in the natural increase.

"That puts me in mind of somethin I have been thinkin I would tell you for the longest. Nature is the mother of us all, Rufus, and nature will help us all if we but only treat her right and give her a fair chance. Years and years ago I found out that nature is always ready and more than willin if a man will do his part. Nature is about the onlyest thing in this world that will give a man somethin for nothin. But at the same time if you want nature to give you a pull and a lift up the hill you must put her in the harness and watch all your pints. Then when you git the machinery to runnin smooth and easy you can go and take your rest and nature will work some for you whilst you are sleepin the sleep of the just and dreamin plessant dreams. And then you won't have to dig and sweat for everything that comes your way. Many and many a time I have got up soon in the mornin and went down to the lot and found a fine young colt, worth fifty dollars when it hit the grit, which nature had brought to me in durin of the night. And if it want a colt maybe it was a fine calf, or a litter of pigs, or somethin else that stood for meat and bread and money in the long run, you understand. Nature is a mighty stirrin worker, Rufus, she don't make no spurts and she don't go so much by fits and starts, but she makes a long, steady pull, and a pull all the time. If you will remember what I say and take the advice of a man that has run his race and is now standin on the border land, you will put the proper gearins on and turn nature loose and let her work some for you."

Make the Edges Cut.

"In the general business of this world, Rufus, every little will count," old man Mal went on to say. "And if you are in the fight to win you will remember to keep up all the corners and make every edge cut.

"People don't have to be low down pizen mean and stingy, you understand, in orderment to make every lick tell, and a man ought to be savin, Rufus—savin with his time, savin with his strength, savin with his money—savin with everything. Sometimes you can hear tell of a man that has made money fast and got rich in a few years, but it is way yonder different with the common run of people. You see me now with plenty around me—plenty of everything that a man would want in the way of this world's goods. I have been in that fix for a long, long time, as all of the old heads in the settlement will tell you, but I didn't climb up to where I am in a few days—not by a whole lot, Rufus. It took a long, steady pull for more than forty years. And you will please take notice that a man which has come up step by step, travellin a safe and steady gait all the time, will hold his own more better than a man which comes up to the top in a few jumps.

"The dinner which we had here on the grounds today was cooked with a fire which I brung with me from Caroliny way back in the thirties. In them days people didn't have matches and the like of that, and we had to keep the fire burnin. I brung that fire in a big oven all the way from our old Caroliny home and it never has went out from that day to this—day or night, winter or summer. Matches are a heap more cheaper now than ever before. But they use to cost like smoke, and they cost somethin till yet, and so that fire has been a big savin to the Rogers generation. I believe in plenty, Rufus, but I don't believe in wastin. The Rogers people are powerful folks for feedin, as everybody knows, but if I had to draw my rations in town and go there to pay the feed bills, I reckon I would have to starve or either die a natural death. Make every edge cut, Rufus, and keep plenty of kitchen physic at home."

Drive Down Your Pegs.

"I can't stay here and go on givin out the news forever, Rufus, but tell the boys for me, if they are in the fight and in it to win, they will have to pitch in and git married and build some homes and help save the country. Tell them the sooner they go and pick out a pleasant spot and drive down their pegs the better it will be. It don't pay a man to be movin his washin with every change of the season. Let him plant out his vine and fig tree and strike camp for good. This country would now be bloomin and blossomin like a rose if every man had settled when he was young and put in to fix him up a pleasant home. The mainest trouble with the boys today is they want to git everything at one grab. They want to rise up and fly right off before they ever crawl or walk a lick, you understand, and if things don't jest exactly suit 'em here they want to pull up and move over yonder. You can try as much as you please and you can't light down at the first flutter on a spot that will suit you to a nat's heel. But if you will do the best you can, and drive down your pegs and go to work you can come tremendius nigh havin what you want by-and-by. When I come here I had to build a log cabbin and settle in the woods. But by-and-by as time went on I made the clearin and went to work. We lived in the cabbin till I got ahead of the hounds, and it was twenty years before I built the big house. A young man of this day and generation wouldn't be willin to stay in the cabbin till he could build a better home and pay for it. He would want the big white house on the first dash out of the box, and he wouldn't mind puttin two or three mortgages on his land to git it. And right then and there if he don't mind he will fall down with the jug and spill his molasses. Tell the boys to drive down their pegs and pitch in and build some more homes."

One Common Wish.

"There is one wish, Rufus, that sings its way into every man's heart, and that is the wish for a home," says old man Mal in the windin up. "There is one thing in this world which every man ought to have, and that is a home. It is the onlyest place under the sun where a man can be happy. A man without a home may have some sort of fun and pleasure, but that is only the shadow—and you can't find solid happiness anywheres in this world unless you are fixed up so when you git tired and weary from the trials and tribulations of life you can go home and rest.

"The plain American home is the salt of the earth, Rufus—the bed rock and the pillar of the whole entire concern. And whilst I can't stay here and preach forth the truth much longer, it makes me of a heavy heart to see so many young men runnin out with the dry cattle and rovin around over the country without any homes. And some of them that git married and start in to save the country—the next news I hear they are gone to town and livin in a boardin house, which you understand that don't look natural and right to me. I would a golnation sight ruther have a home if it was nothin but a log cabbin way back in the woods and hills. The mainest thing with natural human people is to have a home."

Old man Mal went on talkin to me at about that lick till way long in the shank of the evenin. But as for that I could of stayed right there and listened at him till now. He don't put on no extra frills or fancy trimmins, you understand, but he has got a level head, and whensomever he takes a breakin out at the mouth, he talks sense—great gobs of sense.

And when finally at last it come time for the rally to break up old man Mal told his people good-bye with his blessins, and then held up his hands and give thanks as follows:

"Thank God for rest,
Where none molest,
And none can make afraid,
Where peace sits down
As plenty's guest,
Beneath the homestead shade."

THROAT PARALYSIS.

(From the Courier-Herald, Saginaw, Mich.)

It was publicly talked all over Clare County, Mich., for some time before the Courier-Herald sent a reporter to Dover to fully investigate the Coulter matter. He finally went, and we publish to-day his full report. The Coulters are prominent people, though Mrs. C. in response to the question whether she objected to being interviewed, said: "Certainly not." Her story follows:

"About 14 years ago we decided to take up our abode in Dover and everything went along smoothly for several years, business progressed and being of a saving temperament we accumulated quite an amount. Our family increased as the years rolled by and we now have 5 children living, the oldest 15, youngest 3, but sickness made its way into our household, and doctors' bills flooded upon us, until we have nothing left but our home, and these sweet children. Everything else went to satisfy the claims of physicians.

"About 3 years ago I had a miserable feeling at the back of my ears, my right hand became paralyzed and the paralysis extended to my arm and throat, and would affect my head and eyes, sometimes for days I would lose my sight, my face was deformed, lifeless, as it were, my nose was drawn to one side and I presented a pitiable apperance and never expecting to regain my natural facial expressions. I employed the best physicians that could be procured, expending thousands of dollars for their services but could not obtain relief. At last, they stated my case was beyond the reach of medical skill, and it would be but a short time until the end would come. This certainly was not very encouraging to me, but I never gave up hope. In connection with receiving the attendance of physicians I have tried every medicine known to the apothecary but never received any relief until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People came to my assistance. Before I had taken half of the first box the deformity in my face had left me, and before four boxes had been consumed the paralysis had disappeared entirely and much to my surprise I felt like a new woman. I have not taken any medicine since last spring, just about a year ago and my trouble has not appeared since. I owe my health, my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

"A short time since my little boy John was afflicted with St. Vitus' dance. He could not walk across the room without assistance, in fact he would fall all over himself, but after taking a few boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, St. Vitus' dance entirely left him, and no trace of the affliction is left. These pills are worth their weight in gold. You may say in this connection that I am willing at any time to make affidavit to the truth of these statements, and furthermore I will answer any communication concerning my case, as I consider it nothing more than right and just that I should assist suffering humanity."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

WHEELS AND RIDERS.

MRS. ELIZABETH CADY STANTON says that "women are riding to suffrage on a bicycle."

CHAPERONS who can ride bicycles are in great demand in all of the large cities of the country.

DOCTORS have declared that the heart of Zimmerman, the famous bicycle rider, is fully two inches longer than the average size of hearts.

W. D. BACHELOR, of Cornell college, Iowa, has gone on a trip, with two companions, through Europe, Egypt and Palestine on wheels. They expect to pay expenses by corresponding with papers, the three having a list of forty-seven.

C. F. PARDIGON was the first man seen on a bicycle in Richmond, Va. He visited his old home in Paris about 1871, and brought a very tall wheel back with him. A conservative estimate of wheels in actual use in Richmond would be two thousand.

REV. MR. FAIRBANKS, an American missionary in India, attributes a large part of his success to the use of a bicycle. Not only is he enabled to cover a more extensive territory with it, but the natural curiosity of the natives brings large crowds to see "a horse that needs neither grass nor grain."

IF women bicyclers will have the saddle directly over the pedals and so high that when the pedal is down the foot must be bent to reach it, they will make a much more graceful appearance. This will, of course, make mounting somewhat more difficult, but the objectionable knee action will be less obtrusive.

ODD AND OTHERWISE.

A CIRCUS performance was in progress at Eagle, Wis., when a violent rainstorm deluged the earth. The circus manager thought the tent would be blown down and drove out the audience.

SOME of the Philadelphia organ grinders employ nice little colored girls to accompany them on their street tours, and the children amuse the spectators by giving skirt dances.

THOMAS G. F. DOLBY, of Elgin, Ill., is in business there, and keeps a general store, with the aid of seventeen partners. The style of his firm is "Dolby & Seventeen Sons." He is the father of twenty-one children.

MR. W. I. SMITH, a White Plains (N. Y.) business man, did not take a single holiday for ten years. But the other week he was induced to stop work for one day and enjoy himself at the seashore. He went in bathing and was drowned.

A VETERINARY surgeon in Van Buren, Me., was called a few days ago to find the reason and remedy for an odd hard bunch on a horse's shoulder. He lanced the swelling and found in the center of it a silver dime. The corner grocery clubs are now busy with the question: How did it get there?

THE STAGE.

W. S. GILBERT is coming to New York soon to superintend the production of "His Excellency."

MRS. PATRICK CAMPBELL and Mr. Forbes Robertson will open the Lyceum season in London next September with "Romeo and Juliet."

SARAH BERNHARDT has been fined $2 in a Paris police court for employing two children under 12 after 9 o'clock at night at the Renaissance theater.

LONDON is about to see the earl of Rosslyn on the stage as a professional actor. The first earl of Rosslyn earned the title by being lord high chancellor under William Pitt.

IN LONDON TOWN.

THE flower trade of London is estimated to amount to $25,000 a day.

IN Southwark, London, an old hostelry, "The Crossed Keys," is about to be torn down, which belonged to John Harvard in 1637, before he emigrated to America.

IT is claimed that, owing to the good work done by the Improved Industrial Dwelling company, of London, the death rate of that city has been reduced from forty to only eleven in a thousand.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—It is reported that Cleveland Roman Catholics are considering seriously the adoption of Salvation army methods.

—Mr. Gladstone, who was at Eton with the late Bishop Selwyn, has given a bell to Selwyn college, Cambridge, which was named after the bishop.

—In some of the schools of Germany the pupils acquire a knowledge of the weeds which injure vegetables. The weeds are pictured on wall maps, in natural colors.

—Fifty-four ministers, eighteen from each of three Presbyterian bodies in Scotland, have for some time been engaged in drawing up a scheme for Presbyterian union in Scotland.

—A new religious sect has been started in Missouri. The members elect an "angel," whose business it is to fly to Heaven every little while and find out what God wants the members to do.

—The College Settlements association has recently issued from the Philadelphia Settlement the first number of The College Settlement News, which will appear monthly, and will give an account of all events of interest in the different settlements of the association.

—A check for $2,000 was recently received by L. D. Eldridge, treasurer of Middlebury (Vt.) college, for the establishment of an Emma Willard scholarship. The money is given by the Emma Willard association of New York city, an organization composed of alumnæ of Troy Female seminary, of which Mrs. Russell Sage is president.

—Rev. F. B. Meyer, of London, tells of one whose income is $10,000 per annum, who lives on $1,000 and gives the remaining $9,000 to the cause of foreign missions. Another, whose income is $10,000, who lives on $1,200 and gives away the remainder. A governess who earns $500 gives $250. Another, who has a comfortable competence, remains in business, all the profits of which he gives.

—At a recent meeting in support of the Church Army, a church of England organization somewhat similar to the Salvation Army, the archbishop of Canterbury said that the church had to a great extent lost touch with the working classes. He attributed this in part to the fact that the phraseology used by the educated classes is different from that of the poorer classes, and urged that a number of "working-men, or men belonging to the so-called working classes," be chosen to speak to the masses in their own language.

—At St. Clement Danes, the lawyers' church, near Temple Bar, in London, the old custom of beating the bounds was observed on Ascension day. The parish officials, armed with blue and yellow wands, headed by the beadle and followed by a number of schoolboys carrying bamboo canes, marched to Temple Bar and the other marks of the boundary of the parish. These the boys whacked with their canes, which is an innovation, for in olden times it was the boys who received the whacking in order to impress on their memories where were the parish limits.

—At the gathering of the Congregational Home Missionary society at Saratoga Rev. James Tompkins, of Chicago, declared that 1,500,000 of the population of Illinois are practically without a religion, many of them being literally heathen. He said that the large and complex population of Chicago offered a great call for missionary effort and presented a difficult problem for solution. Notwithstanding the growth of the religious denominations and the vast number of church edifices there is a large body of citizens who never have morality preached to them, much less the principles of religion.

GENIUS, WORK AND DISEASE.

Successful Generals Who Studied Their Battles in Advance.

Genius, say some, is but a capacity for hard work. This is not a whole truth; there must be work in accordance with law. The miner who digs for gold on the seashore will never find it, though he dig ever so laboriously; but if he study gold and the geologic strata in which it lives, he has begun to put himself into harmony with law. Mere work, unless properly directed, is like riding a hobby-horse; there is energy and motion, but no progress.

For years Napoleon was living in miniature the battles he was to fight, analyzing strategetic moves and positions, and training his mind to thus grasp a new situation on the instant. Von Moltke studied the military topography of all Europe, and with marvelous foresight thought out how to win. His victory was no triumph of mere fortune or special inspiration. It was but the logical outcome of his trained mind, and a trained mind ever lights the torch of its own inspiration. Leonardo da Vinci always carried in his girdle his sketch-book, in his walks in Florence, constantly looking for picturesque faces. "In the silence of the night" he would counsel himself, "recall the ideas of the things you have studied. Design in your spirit the contours and outlines of the figures you have seen during the day."

There is a theory held by scientists that genius comes from disease. Disease, insanity, depravity and other failings often do occur as consequences due to over-concentration or misuse of powers, but they do not create genius any more than the vultures of the plains create the carcass upon which they feed. The genius, too, being of finer mental material, is more likely to show a flaw, as Dresden china reveals a mar not noticeable in a red-clay flower-pot. In support of the disease theory, the most insignificant, commonplace ailments of ordinary humanity, when found in genius, are magnified and exaggerated. The weaknesses thus pointed out are, it is worth noting, usually shown in the part of mind or of body where the genius was not exercised.—New Science Review.

A Rebuke That Went Home.

"Sir," said the youth to the Kentucky father, who had dispassionately but firmly kicked him off the front stoop: "Sir, I will not resent this treatment from the father of the fairest creature the sun ever shone on, but I will say to you, sir, that in your assault upon me you broke a bottle in my coat-tail pocket which contained a quart of the finest 8-year-old Bourbon procurable, which I was bringing expressly for you."

Miss Key Resents the Attack of a Philadelphia Cousin.

RIGHTEOUS INDIGNATION DISPLAYED.

George S. Parker, the Author of the "Waterloo" Goes Abroad—Peremptory Demand for a Better-half. Other New York Gossip.

NEW YORK, July 20.—There is righteous indignation displayed by Miss Key and her aged mother at the attack made upon her by young Frank Scott Key, of Philadelphia, who claims that Miss Key is not the granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star Spangled Banner," and that his grandfather never had a son named Francis Scott Key. Mrs. Key, the old lady, who is now eighty-seven years of age and nearly blind, but who is still vigorous in mind, though somewhat weak in body, has denied her cousin's statement in a letter to the Philadelphia newspaper publishing the falsehood, but as yet the letter has not been printed. While young Key, of Philadelphia, denies his poor relatives, his own sisters and brother, who live at Tenallyton, near Washington, do not do so, but are friends of the old lady and her daughter. Miss Key is the lady discharged from the pension office.

The Daily Mercury in Trouble.

Judge McAdam has granted D. W. Armstrong, attorney for Harvey M. La Follette, an injunction restraining William Noble, William Cauldwell and Thomas Ball from disposing of certain stocks and bonds deposited as collateral for the purchase of the "New York Mercury." The bonds and stocks were sold yesterday.

Mr. La Follette purchased the property several months ago for $130,000. He paid $20,000 cash, and advanced $7,000, and deposited securities for $50,000, besides indorsing obligations for further amounts.

Mr. La Follette alleges that the value of the paper was misrepresented, as well as its status and circulation. The suit is based on the ground of fraud. The order is returnable on Monday, at 11:30 o'clock.

Russell Sage's Sight Returns.

Wall street had better be on the alert, for Russell Sage discovered yesterday that he could see perfectly well without his glasses, which he has worn now for more than twenty years. He came to his office yesterday from Cedarhurst without them, read his newspapers on the cars, and went through half the correspondence awaiting him at his office before he discovered that he had left his glasses at home.

"That's the funniest thing that has happened to me for years. I read the whole morning without realizing that I had left my glasses at home in another coat. I never supposed that I could get along without them. I may try giving them up in the future." he said.

John Gessner, "traveling salesman from Denver, now 250 East Thirty-first street," writes a peremptory demand upon the "marriage bureau" at the city hall for a wife. He says that as an American citizen he is entitled to as much consideration as Holt, the Canadian farmer. Another letter in German was received from a Detroit man, Berthold E. W. Haunschild, 59 Cadillac square, who wants the address of the Brooklyn widow who will give $14,000 for a good husband.

LATROBE NOW FOR GOVERNOR.

Result of the Conference Between Mr. Gorman and his Opponents.

BALTIMORE, July 20.—It was reported here yesterday that Senator Gorman and the anti-Gorman leaders of the democratic party in the state at their meeting here Thursday agreed to a compromise by which all the candidates at present in the field for the democratic nomination for the governorship are to be dropped and Mayor Ferdinand C. Latrobe, of this city, will be nominated as a man satisfactory to all elements of the organization. Senator Gorman is reported to have realized at last that the factional fights in the party over the governorship were likely to tear apart the organization, and he is said to have proposed the compromize himself, and that the other side, under the leadership of Congressman John K. Cowen, has accepted it. If this is so, it will result in the disappointment of State Treasurer Jones of Montgomery county, Senator Thomas G. Hayes, ex-Judge Fisher and the other gentlemen who are now out as candidates for the nomination. What these gentlemen will do is not known. Democrats who are well informed as to the situation here assert that a compromise of some sort has been decided upon, but, if they know, they refuse to divulge the particulars.

CARLISLE IS NOT UNEASY.

Says the Boycott Against National Bank Notes Will Not Effect the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The publication of Grand Master Workman Sovereign's boycott against national bank notes naturally attracted a great deal of attention and it was very generally discussed as to its effect, if any, upon the treasury and the circulation of money and the payment of obligations. Secretary Carlisle said that the boycott would not effect the treasury department or its conditions. National bank notes, it was stated, as between individuals were not a legal tender and could be refused if offered by one individual to another and declined without in the least impairing the validity of the debt. The same is true of gold and silver certificates, neither of which are legal tender, but simply the representatives of a gold or silver dollar which is a legal tender between individuals and between the government and individuals. But either national bank notes or the certificates would be redeemed on presentation at the treasury with legal tender. In the case of a national bank note the bank of issue could put it again in circulation or allow it to be retired as it chose.

The building is to be a very handsome affair, and the exhibits to be placed in creditable style. It is proposed to make the exhibit a handsome representation of the American papers, including newspapers, magazines, and trade journals. The committee on concession recommended that the proposition be accepted and the recommendation was unanimously adopted by the executive committee.

A second indictment, charging him with the embezzlement of $18,000 from the same concern was not pressed. He will be sentenced today.

EVANS HAS HIS TURN

Serious Mention of the Southerner For Vice President.

REPORTED COMBINE WITH M'KINLEY.

The Names of Prominent Republicans the Talk of the Politicians of Their Party—The Strength of the Tennessean in the North.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—The names of Mr. Stephen B. Elkins, of West Virginia, Senator Davis, of Minnesota, and Mr. H. Clay Evans, of Tennessee, are subjects of considerable gossip among republican politicians at this time. Mr. Elkins and Mr. Evans are generally credited with entertaining vice-presidential aspirations. Senator Davis, it is thought, has another axe to grind, but will adopt the same methods that the other two use in accomplishing his purpose.

Within the past few weeks a distinct Elkins boom has made its appearance. It poses now as a presidential boom, but all politicians are agreed that this is merely a subterfuge, and that it is the second place on the national ticket upon which Er. Elkins has designs and not the first place. It is the general idea that Mr. Elkins, while very glad to hold the position of United States senator, would prefer sitting at the head of the senate to being merely a member of that august body. They probably think it likely he could have the senatorship any time that he wanted it, if he should decide to relinquish it temporarily.

Plan of the Elkins Boom.

The plan of the Elkins boom for the vice presidency, as understood among politicians of the national capital, is this: That he is to go into the national convention as a candidate for the presidential nomination and with sufficient strength to make it an object to others to trade with him. It would be necessary, of course, for him to control several delegations, capital with which to do business, and it is to obtain this capital that his friends are now said to be laboring. It is claimed that Mr. Elkins can secure the support of the West Virginia, Maryland, Virginia and New Mexico delegations, forming a nucleus around which he might gather other southern and western contingents.

Backed by these delegates, and with an occasional group of Elkins men from some of the southern states, it is claimed that the West Virginian would go into the convention as a formidable man, and well worthy the consideration of candidates desiring first place and needing auxiliary strength to their own following.

An Evans and McKinley Combine.

The other man mentioned in connection with this gossip, Mr. H. Clay Evans, is regarded as probably the most formidable obstacle to Mr. Elkins' ambition to be Vice President, if such really is Mr. Elkins' desire. General credence is given to the report that a cast iron combination will be made between Mr. McKinley and Mr. Evans for mutual aid and support in obtaining, respectively, first and second place on the ticket. Mr. Evans is regarded as probably the leading southern republican of the day in point of political influence. Recent events in Tennessee have strengthened his hold upon the southern republicans, and it is believed by many that he could easily take the leadership of his party south of Mason and Dixon's line.

The general gossip in this connection is that Mr. Evans will control the southern delegations for Mr. McKinley for President and himself for Vice President, while Mr. McKinley will give Mr. Evans some support from the north. If this combination should be faithfully observed by both the supposed parties at issue it is thought it would prove a hard game for the other candidates to beat.

COAL MINERS OUT ON A STRIKE.

Sympathetic Strikers Adding Hourly to the Original Numbers.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.—Nearly 200 coal miners employed in the Crown and Lenz mines on the line of the Louisville, Evansville and St. Louis Railway went on a strike yesterday. The miners are situated ten miles from East St. Louis. The cause of the strike is alleged as the discharge of Manager Taylor, of the Crown mines, of his brother who is a boss miner and a man who occupied a mine room with him. The miners demanded the reinstatement of these men which was refused. The Lenz miners went out in sympathy. The feeling is very bitter.

PRESIDENT CHAPMAN AGAIN.

The Baptist Young People's Convention Elect Officers for the Year.

BALTIMORE, July 20.—At the Baptist Young People's Convention yesterday the nominating committee in a report recommended the re-election of President John H. Chapman. The announcement was received with cheers by the men and waving of handkerchiefs by the ladies. The only change in the list of vice-presidents was the substitution of Philip F. Botzong, of New Jersey, for Frank Harvey Field, of New York. Rev. H. W. Reed, of Waukegan, Ills., succeeds A. M. Brincklee, of Philadelphia, as recording secretary. Frank Moody, of Milwaukee, and Rev. F. L. Wilkins, D. D., of Chicago, were renominated as treasurer and general secretary, respectively. The executive committee was also re-nominated. The nominating committee's report was adopted, thus electing the entire ticket named above.

The program was changed so that the salutation of state flags and minute speeches by representatives of state and provincial unions preceded the historic address of Mr. Carroll, of Texas. With a simple hymn of divine worship, intoned by thousands of voices, the young ladies bearing the banners and the speakers from the state unions, marched through the aisles and on to the speakers' platform where the front rows had been reserved for them. The flags were arranged across the platform, producing a very handsome multicolored effect. As the name of the fifty-two states and provincial unions was called a young lady would hoist a banner high above the others and the chosen male representative would step forward and briefly review the work in his territory for the past year.

The board of managers selected Milwaukee as the location of the '96 convention, while Brooklyn, N. Y., was the successful aspirant for the honor of entertaining the convention of the following year.

A Florida Negro Pursued by a Posse Who Will Lynch Him.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 20.—Near Mossiston, Fla., Enoch Darrel, a negro, attempted a criminal assault on Mrs. Anderson, the wife of a prominent citizen. The negro drew a razor and threatened to cut her throat if she resisted. The lady reached for a revolver in her workbasket but the negro wrenched the revolver from her and knocked her down. He then attempted to accomplish his purpose. The lady, however, had screamed during the struggle and her cries attracted some men who were working near. The negro heard them approaching and fled. A posse pursued him and Darrel was found at a negro camp meeting. The posse started to the scene of the crime with Darrel, but he broke away. The posse pursued, firing at him as he ran. They say they "lost him" in the woods.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Condensed News of Interest Throughout the State.

SOME GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATES.

A Full Crop of Candidates Spring Up. Populists Will Name Sen. Goodwyn. Other Interesting News Through the State.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 16.—It is now said that Frank L. Pettus, of Selma, president of the state senate, and ex-officio lieutenant-governor, has given it out that he will be a candidate for the democratic gobernatorial nomination. If this proves to be a fact, Capt. Joseph F. Johnston's chances are very much diminished. He has been regarded as the candidate of the silver democrats all along. Petus' candidacy would mean the loss of Dallas and other big Middle Alabama counties to Johnston. Congressman Bankhead is also mentioned as a dark horse silver democratic candidate for governor.

On the 25th inst. the executive committee of the people's party of the state will hold a meeting in Birmingham. The call was issued for the meeting some days ago. The meeting of the people's party executive committe virtually opens the campaign in Alabama for next year.

Fusion is whispered between the republicans and populists and Dr. R. A. Moseley, Jr., chairman of the committee, who aspires to run for governor on the republican ticket, will call a meeting of the committee in a few weeks to consider the next campaign. W. F. Albrich, who ran for congressman in the fourth district of Alabama against Gaston Roberts, is slated for United States senator on the republican ticket, to get the place now occupied by Mr. Pugh. The populists will name State Senator Goodwyn for governor.

WAS IT SUICIDE?

Prominent Merchant of Cullman, Alabama Killed by a Train.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 18.—Peter Wenckleback, a prominent merchant of Cullman, and clerk of the town council, was run over and killed by a northbound Louisville & Nashville passenger train near that place yesterday morning. Whether he suicided or was accidentally killed is unknown. He had been quite despondent of late, but seemed in good spirits last night, though he had been drinking.

The accident occurred about half a mile from town, on a crossing. Though warning signals were sounded. Wenckleback remained on the track until it was too late to stop the train. It is said that he had been pulled off the track several times at night by railroad watchmen, which leads to the belief that he was seeking death. It is said he had had a love affair. He was 37 years old.

WAS HE AMBUSHED?

Mysterious Death at Birmingham of Ed. Comer, a Young Carpenter.

BILMINGHAM, Ala., July 19.—Ed. Comer, a young carpenter, died today at police headquarters. He was found yesterday in a vacant lot in the outskirts of the city with a deep gash cut in the back of his head, as if it had been inflicted by a hatchet or some other blunt instument. His reason seemed to have been upset by the blow. He claimed that he fell upon a rock and cut himself, but it is clear he was assaulted. How and by whom is a mystery, and doubtless will remain such. The police are puzzled.

THEY WILL LACK IN STRENGTH.

Republicans Will Not be Able to Reorganize the Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20.—The attitude assumed by the western Senators renders the reorganization of the Senate by the republicans improbable.

If Dupont is admitted as the Senator from Delaware the republicans will still have less than a majority in the Senate. It is regarded as entirely probable that it will be decided that the election in Delaware was legal, or at least that Dupont's credentials are satisfactory. This will make the number of Senators who may properly be termed republicans forty-three.

Forty-five are necessary to a reorganization, and to make up the deficiency the republicans have the "republican populists"—Jones and Stewart of Nevada, Peffer and Marion Butler—to draw on. If two of these would go into the republican caucus the question of reorganization would then be settled. It is believed that Jones may go into this caucus, but if he does he will probably be the only one, the other populists desiring to keep up their third party organization. There might be a combination between the republicans and populists, but it is here that the western republican Senators step in and object.

INDICATIONS ALL FAVORABLE.

Southern Business Continues to Improve, Notwithstanding Summer Dullness.

NEW YORK, July 20. — Bradstreet's today says:

All the previously reported favorable industrial and commercial features continued this week, the endurance of the revival in demand for iron and steel, the further advances in prices of the same, and additional increase of wages of industrial employes, being the most significant. Notwithstanding the season of mid-summer quiet in some lines of general trade, the volume of general business throughout the country is largely in excess of that one year ago.

Merchants at all larger cities are preparing to send out travelers and until they begin to exhibit results no exact estimate of how fall trade will open can be prepared. At this time the outlook is regarded as highly favorable. At Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore, among eastern cities, noteworthy gains in sales of staples are announced.

Reports from southern cities show further improvements, gains this week being more marked than in a like period for months before.

MILLERS' URGENT PROTEST.

Assistant Secretary Doe to Personally Investigate the Case.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—As a result of the protests of the millers along the Fox river, Wisconsin, against the action of the army engineer officers in cutting off their water supply and thereby closing down their mills, Assistant Secretary of War Doe left Washington yesterday for Wisconsin to personally investigate the subject. The government has spent much money on this river with the sole purpose of improving the navigation, for no appropriation could have been made in the river and harbor bill for any other purpose, such, for instance, as furnishing water power for the private milling establishments.

PRESIDENT'S FIRM POSITION.

United States Will Prevent Claims by Spain for Violation of the Neutrality Laws.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Secretary Olney arrived suddenly and unexpectedly in Washington yesterday, and summoned a council of the cabinet officers in town, which lasted for two hours. The conviction has become settled that the conference had reference to Cuban affairs and that it has been decided by the president to take action that will prevent claims by Spain against the United States for violation of the neutrality laws and that Mr. Olney's visit and the cabinet conference was for the purpose of devising ways and means of protecting this government in that regard.

As it was, the Japanese were compelled to retreat to the northwest. The Black Flags, according to the report, are now advancing upon Teckham, fifty miles west of Tokoham, where renewed fighting is imminent.

SOUL AND BODY PART

Porter Stocks, Convict, Sends a Ball Through His Heart.

WAS OF WEALTHY ATLANTA PARENTS.

The Young Man at One Time Prominent in Society and Business—The Sentence Serving in Virtue of a Verdict of Manslaughter.

MINEOLA, Ga., July 20.—Porter Stocks, of Atlanta, shot himself last night. Stocks was a convict in the penitentiary and was leased to a lumber company which has saw mills at Mineola, a few miles from Valdosta.

Stocks was chatting with Dr. Howell, the camp physician, and one of the guests. Dr. Howell's pistol was lying on a table. Stocks handed his watch to the physician, picked up the pistol, walked off a few paces and fired at his own heart. He died early this morning. Stocks was sent to the penitentiary from Atlanta for manslaughter. He was a prominent young man in that city. Four years ago he killed Alf Cassin, his close friend. His defense was that Cassin threatened his life. A petition was to be presented to the Governor in a few days for Stocks pardon. His father who lives in Atlanta and was once wealty, was notified and left at the earliest convenience. The suicide was a surprise to the convicts and camp bosses, as well as to his friends, who have wired in his behalf. He was cheerful and hopeful of a pardon.

NELLIE POST IS MARRIED.

The Atlanta Woman, in Trouble in New York, Wife of a Hotel Proprietor.

NEW YORK, July 20.—Nellie Wright, the pretty young woman who took a dose of laudanum in Green Point, L. I., last Saturday night, was arraigned in the police court in Williamsburg yesterday on a charge of attempted suicide.

During the examination it came to light that her right name is Mrs. James Corkery, that she was married a year ago, and that her husband is the proprietor of a hotel at Rochelle Park, N. J.

After thier marriage the couple lived happily for only a few months. Last April the woman went to Green Point.

Two lawyers, who appeared for the woman, asked for an adjournment, stating that her father would probably come on from the south and request to be allowed to take her home to Atlanta.

TREASURY'S HEAVY LOSSES.

The Export of $1,000,009 in Gold Put the Financiers to Thinking.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Secretary Carlisle, in accordance with his almost invariable rule, declined yesterday to express an opinion as to the effect on the gold reserve, the shipment abroad of $1,000,000 of that coin would have. Shipment will reduce the treasury gold reserve to about $105,000,000. Since July 1st, by withdrawals of gold for redemption purposes, the treasury has lost about $1,509,000. In that line, however, gold gains from mintage have partly offset this loss so that the net loss to the gold reserve is only about $57,000.

ALABAMA GOLD EXCITEMENT.

Gold Fields Being Bought at Tremendous Prices—Chattanooga Interested.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., July 20.—The sum of $50,000 in cash was yesterday deposited in the bank for the purchase of goldfields near Neflin, Ala., reported to be fabulously rich in gold ore. An option of only seventy-five hours was given on the property consisting of 200 acres but the guarantee was raised in that remarkably short time and the deal closed. The new company will be capitalized at $500,000 and stock will be at once placed on sale. A number of Chattanooga's leading business men have caught the fever and are taking stock liberally.

BOND SYNDICATE POSITION.

Statement of its Attitude in the Matter of Gold Shipment.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The bond syndicate's position in the matter of gold shipment is aid to be as follows:

The syndicate is selling bills to all who want them on the basis of 4.90 for demand exchange. It is asking no more and taking no less from anybody. It has been approached by several parties who have said that unless the syndicate sold certificates to them less than 4.90 they would ship gold. To these parties the reply has been that 4.90 was a fair rate and that a lower rate could not be made to one and not to all. Anyone who did not like the rate and thought better results could be obtained by exporting gold, was at liberty to ship gold. The syndicate has not reduced its rate to anyone in order to prevent gold from being shipped and if it is reduced to any one it will be reduced to all.

THE * CHRONICLE.

C. C. DuBOSE, Editor and Proprietor.

COLUMBIANA, JULY 25, 1895.

YELLOW fever is on the increase among the civilians at Havana, Cuba.

BY a collision of Italian steamships in the gulf of Genoa, 148 persons were drowned.

THE advanced sale of seats for the fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons has reached the sum of $40,000.

IT will take the utmost vigilance on the part of the quarantine officers of this country to keep out yellow fever.

"HARD Times" orators are having all the hard times there is in trying to explain away the wave of prosperity now sweeping over the country.

MRS. MARY SPIVEY, of Montgomery, who is charged with poisoning her husband, has been found guilty by the coroner's jury and held to the grand jury.

THE man who is tired of city life and wants to make a good living in the country could do no better than to get a farm and go to raising beef, pork and corn.

AT Zanesville, Ohio, an attempt was made to lynch a base ball umpire. It was claimed that, by his decisions, a club was robbed of two games of ball. The promptness of the police was all that saved him.

THOSE citizens who have remained at home through the "hot spell" have the advantage of those who went North for a change of climate. The change of climate has come to the home people, and the latter are out nothing for traveling expenses.

A DAKOTA man who recently stole a mowing machine worth $75 was sent to the penitentiary for five years. State Treasurer Taylor, who stole $359,000, will receive one year's sentence. If he had stolen $500,000, he probably would not have been prosecuted at all.

THE state of Texas will not be allotted space in any of the buildings at the Cotton States Exposition at Atlanta, although it produced about one-third of all the cotton raised in the United States last year. If Texas makes an exhibit it will have to do it in its own building.

THE Masons of Mississippi have drawn the line against liquor sellers by enacting the general rule that "no Mason, either as principal or agent, employe, or in any other capacity, shall sell intoxicating liquors to be used as a beverage, and the penalty thereof shall be expulsion."

IF ALL that is charged against H. H. Holmes, now in jail in Philadelphia, is proven, he will be without a peer in criminal history in this country. Eight murders are now laid at his door and new ones are coming to the surface almost every day. Just where the end will come is not yet clear.

IN St. Johns' parish, Louisiana, Friday, an Italian by the name of Joe Noska, murdered a family of five people, consisting of father, mother and three children, the youngest an infant only four months old, and two men who came upon him while engaged in his terrible deed. The murderer escaped and has not been arrested as yet.

A DISREPUTABLE club house at London, England, was raided last Thursday night by the police. A United States senator, a congressman, a prominent law official of an eastern state, and an American police official were arrested with the others. The place is a notorious resort, which is opened at 12 o'clock, midnight, and closed at 6 a. m., and is patronized by the disreputable men and women of that section of the city.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT FOSTERS IMMIGRATION.

Montgomery Advertiser.

Industrial development and immigration go hand in hand. As the factories are established, operatives are required to work in them, and they in turn require food for the sustaining of themselves and families. This food will be furnished by our farmers, and as the market for it enlarges, the demand created will require an ever-increasing acreage of land to supply it. This will eventuate in a good home market for farm produce and will necessitate a large increase in the number of our agriculturists to keep it fully supplied. Prices will be fair and the exchange of goods with no heavy expenses for transportation will be mutually profitable.

It is to the interest of every man in Alabama to promote industrial enterprises, as every one established adds to the state in population and wealth, and opens a field for other enterprises that are collateral to it. The feeding of the increased population devolves on the farmers, and as the industrial development gains magnitude, it becomes imperative to add greatly to their numbers in order that necessary food may be grown. In order materially to increase our agricultural population, it is necessary that there should be a good market for all agricultural products, and the only way to create this is to establish factories. Every facility for doing so successfully exists in Alabama, but work must be done to place them before those who are capable if taking advantage of them. We must show our willingness to foster home enterprises to the full extent of our ability and demonstrate by every means in our power our faith in our state and its resources.

In nearly every county in the state there could be established in a modest way by local capital, some industry that could be operated at a profit, and that would serve as an attraction to more elaborate institutions. Small subscriptions from all citizens of the community would build them, and while they would be necessarily small and of limited capital, they would illustrate our confidence in our resources and our willingness to develop them as far as we were able. The Carolinas are now the leading cotton manufacturing states of the South, and their industrial resources in other directions are fast being developed. Home enterprise and home investment in small mills has brought this about. The people showed the courage of their convictions by investing in manufacturing and demonstrated that it was profitable to engage in it in those states. As soon as capitalists and others interested saw this, they commenced either to invest in established plants for the purpose of enlarging them, or erected others.

Alabama has greater attractions and better facilities for manufacturing than either of the Carolinas, and can offer inducements to a much greater variety of industries. If the citizens of the state will go to work and develop her industrial resources as far as they are able, they will attract capital to continue the good work. Agricultural development will keep pace with it and population and wealth will be greatly augmented.

TRYING TO FOOL THE PEOPLE.

Birmingham News.

The free silver leaders seem blinded to the fact that an era of prosperity is upon the country. This is quite natural, because it is this return of prosperity that has sounded the death knell of the free silver advocacy. Low prices and hard times have constituted the chief stock in trade of the silver agitators. Now that prices are higher, wages advancing and idle industries resuming work, their stock in trade is being destroyed. But those of the silver leaders who are blinded by prejudice and passion are still using the same old calamity arguments, which the facts as published in the market reports and the press dispatches of the daily papers, silver organs included, contradict.

For instance, at the silver convention in Griffin, Ga., a gorgeous calamity banner was unfurled. It represented two hands shackled together with handcuffs held by a chain tied to a bug marked "gold bug." In one hand was a bundle of wheat marked "40 cents" and some cotton which we are told brings "5 cents." In the other was a hammer on which are inscribed the words "no work." This sort of argument might have been used during the panic, but it is out of date dow.

The market reports show that while this banner was being waved over the heads of populites and calamity howling democrats in Griffin, Ga., middling cotton in New Orleans was selling for 6 11-16 cents per pound and for 7 cents in New York. It has even been slightly higher within the past few weeks. In St. Louis, wheat was worth from 65 to 67 cents per bushel, though it is not so high now as it was a month ago. Statistics show that more than half a million men in shops, mills and factories who were idle a year ago are now at work and that the wages of over 1,000,000 workers have been increased within the past three months.

These few facts serve to illustrate how the silver extremists are still trying to deceive the people. Their chief hope of success is to keep the people in ignorance. They may fool all of the people some time, and some of the people all the time, but they can't fool all the people all the time.

A man's profundity may keep him from opening on a first interview, and his caution on a second, but I should suspect his emptness if he carried on his reserve to a third.—Colton.

ABOUT THIRD TERMS.

Selma Times.

The declaration of Gov. Oates not to be a candidate to succeed himself as governor of the state gives the democratic party an opportunity to rid itself of the senseless custom of endorsing a man's administration. If a a man makes a good governor there is no need of a so-called endorsement. If the retiring governor desires it a resolution could be adopted by the convention that nominates his successor, saying that his administration had been wise, conservative and patriotic, if such had been the case.

The writer was too young to remember when the custom of giving the governor a second term was first commenced. Being governor for a second term does not add anything to the glory of being governor. Having a second term does give a governor a lease on power and enable him to lay the wires for higher preferment. That is what we want to see stopped. The chief executive would make a much better official if he didn't have higher aspirations.

We do not object, though, to a governor going to the senate after his first term. If he can do that it shows that he has a strong hold on the hearts of the people and was sent there as a recognition of merit.

It would take 252 years for each county in the state to have a governor, if it was given to the counties in alphabetical order, whereas by the one term process it would only take 126 years to pass the bottle around. By the one term idea being put into effect by the democratic state convention we could have twice as many ex-governors walking around through Alabama, the pride of their friends and the glory of the village from which they sprung.

What applies to governor will also fit the other offices of the capitol. There is many a budding genius of a lawyer who would make an excellent attorney general. There are a hundred and fifty clerks in Selma who could fill the office of secretary of state. Any level-headed cross-roads school teacher could be superintendent of education.

This being the case the Times hopes that the state convention will put itself on record against second terms for state offices, and if they can't be kept out of power any other way we would favor an amendment to the constitution making it unlawful for a man to succeed himself at Montgomery.

There is a strong sentiment of this sort in Alabama, and now that the state convention has an opportunity to enforce it without hurting the feelings of the retiring governor, it is to be hoped that they will take advantage of the opportunity to make this the party law.

The Big Corn Crop of 1895.

The last government crop report shows that corn is the King this year. This year's crop covers 82,304,000 acres. The largest acreage of corn heretofore was in 1891, when it amounted to 76,204,000 acres. So we are 6,100,000 acres ahead this year of any crop ever planted. The average yield of 1891 was twenty-seven bushels to the acre, making a total yield of 2,060,154,000 bushels. The government report shows that on July 1st this year the average condition of the corn crop was 99.3, and that of 1891 was only 92.8. This year we are not only far ahead of 1891 in acreage, but also in the condition of the crop. We could lose several points in condition and still yield the largest crop yet.

Iowa has the largest acreage this year in corn, with 8,504,000 acres, and the condition of her crop is reported at 105. Kansas comes second, with 8,426,000 acres and a condition of 104. Nebraska is far ahead of any record it has heretofore made, and will be third in the race, while Missouri and Illinois are close competitors for fourth place. Texas has the largest acreage in her history, with 4,087,000 acres. Nearly every southern state has larger acreage of corn than ever before. Alabama is among them, too, and everywhere the condition of the crop is splendid. Wheat and all other cereals take a back seat this year to give place to King Corn.

Natural Causes of Lying.

Nothing is more common than to find children, with an evidently rudimentary conception of truth, who willfully and often for no reason make exaggerated or false statements, who seem really to deceive themselves as others, who make their relatives miserable by threatened lack of responsibility, which, spreading out in many ways, points to an unhappy or disgraceful life.

This fear is so common that the majority of people, I fancy, have felt it more or less. It is natural to regard truth as the foundation of our whole moral structure, to look upon as the loveliest product of a fine character, that any deviation from it must necessarily be held as most unfortunate. I should be similarly impressed if I did not feel certain that the fear is often wrongly placed, that this habitual telling of falsehood has its origin, not in viciousness or a spontaneous desire to deceive, but rather in causes for which the person is not entirely responsible, which, on the contrary, are the natural results of natural causes.—Popular Science Monthly.

If there is anything on the orb of sin more fidgety than a man with two cigars and no match, it is a boy with unbroken legs in the house on a rainy day.

THE LYNCHING FEVER.

Our Mountain Home.

There is abroad in the land a lawless lynching fever, which threatens the overthrow of the ends of justice. It has not been very long since it was very exceptional to hear or read of this iniquitous and dangerous method of dealing with culprits by those who assumed to administer justice according to their own pleasure. Now it is quite common. Extending from the newer states and territories into the older states it has, by degrees, gained a foothold until it is hard to extirpate. From the one cause for which it was esteemed by many to be allowable, it has come to be visited for every imaginable offense real or supposed. Nor does it pause at the question of sex. It extends to every section and those who seek to justify it excuse themselves on the plea that the courts are too tardy, that jurors are bought, that justice is defeated through endless legal forms and technicalities. It is doubless true, through the law's delays and the methods all too common in some of our courts, that criminals sometimes escape punishment, or are too lightly punished for their evil deeds, but to say therefore that men should administer punishment by further violation of law is an entirely different thing. The caprices of the multitude never were, never will be, a safe criterion to follow, and we are set for punishment of violators of law from this point of view as well as others. This thing of having a high-handed outrage perpetrated in the name of justice and all parties pleading ignorance of the criminals and remaining dumb about them is growing too common. We have a right to demand the enforcement of the laws and if those in authority can not fill their offices, others should be chosen who can. We say these things in general, believing the time has come for great plainness of speech on this question and that public sentiment needs to be aroused as never hitherto about it. If something is not done to break down this growing shame, we look for the day when lynching parties shall invade our court houses and take out and swing up judges and juries who do not give verdicts according to their notions. Stranger things have happened through the establishment of diabolical precedents.

Misuse of the Word "Collapse."

The word "collapse" is badly overworked. If a house falls in, it "collapses;" if a dam bursts and goes down stream, it "collapses;" if a reservoir's walls fall out by reason of pressure from the inside, it "collapsed," and so we go until the reader of average newspaper accounts of incidents must be sorely puzzled. The primary definition of the term is: "To fall together suddenly," as the collapse of a balloon on the sudden letting out of the gas; the sudden tumble of the walls inward of a powder house, when the contents explode and create almost a perfect vacuum in the interior, instantaneously. A secondary definition of collapse is: "Total failure;" but the use of the word, in that sense, to describe most incidents and accidents it is used to describe is not only wrong, but absurd and misleading. If people who write for the public were more ambitious to be understood and less ambitious to use "big words" they would "cut less figure and do more execution," as Horace Greeley said of a certain spread eagle lawyer, whom he advised to bring his vocabulary within the understanding of the ordinary juror. Instead of saying the reservoir or the dam collapsed, why not tell the plain truth in good Saxon by saying "The wall of the reservoir fell out;" "the dam gave way," etc. The word collapse don't tell the truth of the matter. Used in such connection it conveys no definite idea to the mind, educated or uneducated.

Here We Root.

The Baltimore Manufacturers' Record, than which no journal has done more for advancing the material interest of the South, fears that the Atlanta exposition may prove a disadvantage to the South. The apprehension, which is well grounded, is because of the fact that the several southern states, to say nothing of the railroads and the people, have not displayed interest in the great project commensurate with its pretentions and proportions. There is no doubt that the the exposition is going to be a grand up-to-date exhibit, that it will be exceedingly interesting and instructive and lack much of the participation our states and people might easily give to it. But it would be the most stupid ignoring of an excellent opportunity not to vie with western states that are going to help to make our big southern show a success. Alabama can make an exhibit of natural resources that can not be matched by any state in the Union. Let's discard that sleepy old motto, "here we rest," anyhow, and adopt "here we root."

A Photographic Bullet.

A bullet provided with a tiny photographic outfit of its own is the late invention of a German named Herr Neesen. In carrying out this ingenious idea Professor Neesen has provided a bullet which carries a miniature photographic plate. This plate, which is very sensitive, is slipped into a slit in the bullet in such a manner as to receive its light through a pinhole in the conic or forward end of the muslin. In this manner a gyrating line is traced on the plate which is a complete record of the bullet's oscillations from the moment it leaves the muzzle of the gun until the impact with the target.—St. Louis Republic.

THE AMERICAN INDIAN.

No Indian tribe north of Mexico has domesticated any animal but the dog.

The first attempt in this country to reduce the Indian languages to a system was by Smith Barton.

In the course of two or three generations the survivors of the Indian Territory tribes will be among the richest people in this country.

Many of the mounds are of sephulchral character, some containing only a single skeleton, others a large number of bones of men, evidently marking the spot where a battle had been fought.

The various tribes excelled in different manufactures. The Iroquois made the best bark lodges, the Algonquina the best skin tents, the Dakotas the best stone pipes, the Pacific tribes the baskets.

The most harmonious and cultivated Indian language is said to be the Araucanian. Such pains are taken to preserve its purity that even a preacher will be rebuked by his audience for solecisms in his sermons.

Not a few tribes are designated not by the names they gave themselves, but by those bestowed by their enemies, who were better known to the whites. The words Mohawk, Sioux, Eskimo, Assiniboine and many others are nicknames, several being indecent.

Several English writers have endeavored to prove that the Indians are the decendants of the Ten Tribes. Most of the arguments adducted are drawn from customs which the authors in question regarded as peculiar to the Jews, but are, in fact, common to the early stages of the human race.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A FREE TRIP TO ATLANTA.

The Cotton States Exposition should be visited by every resident of Alabama. Knowing, however, that there are many people, especially in the rural districts, who can ill afford the heavy outlay necessary in order to attend this exhibition, The Advertiser has devised a plan whereby all who are willing to devote a little spare time to calling their neighbor's attention to the excellence of the Semi-Weekly Advertiser as a newspaper, can visit this display of Southern industries and resources.

Every person in the State of Alabama who will send us 100 yearly subscribers to the Semi-Weekly Advertiser at $1 each, before October 1st, 1895, will be presented with a ticket from his or her railway station to Atlanta and return, and in addition will be given $25 in cash for the purpose of defraying his or her expenses while there.

It will not be necessary to send the entire 100 subscribers at once, but names can be forwarded from time to time as they are secured, the sender stating that they are for our Cotton States Exposition Excursion prize. An acurate account will be kept with each competitor, and the announcement of the successful ones will be made as soon after October 1st as is practicable.

There is no good reason why several hundred people should not thus be able to visit the Atlanta Exposition at our expense, as The Semi-Weekly Advertiser is unquestionably the best newspaper of its class in America, and the low subscription price places it within the reach of people of very limited means. It is an Alabama paper for Alabama people and that field defies competition.

Story of a Counterfeit $10 Bill.

A gentleman found a $10 counterfeit bill, and not knowing that it was spurious, paid a neighbor a debt of $10 with it; and his neighbor in turn paid another debt of equal amount with the bill; and it continued to circulate and pay debts until it had passed through the hands of the tenth man, who owed the finder $10, and he received it in payment for the amount, and discovering at last that it was counterfeit, destroyed it, and thus debts, amounting to $100 were paid by the worthless note, and nobody was injured by it. This story illustrates the fact that a very small amount of money "per capita" would be sufficient to carry on the business of the country, if that amount could be kept in constant circulation.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimendale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitancy in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church, at Rives' Junction, she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxisms of coughing would last hours with little interruption, and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Parker & Armstrong's drug store. Regular size 50c and $1.00.

Neuralgia

ATTACKS THE EYES

Makes THE LIGHT Unbearable.

PERMANENTLY CURED BY USING

Ayer's Pills

"My husband was subject to severe attacks of neuralgia which caused him great pain and suffering. The pains were principally about his eyes, and he often had to remain in a darkened room, not being able to stand the light. Ayer's Pills being recommended, he tried them, using one before each meal. They very soon afforded relief, followed by permanent cure. I am a strong believer in the efficacy of Ayer's Pills, and would not be without them for ten times their cost."—Mrs. M. E. DEBAT, Liberty, Tex.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

THE STAR SPANGLED DOLLAR.

How dear to our heart is the old silver dollar,
When some kind subscriber presents it to view;
The liberty head without necktie or collar,
And all the strange things that seem so new;
The wide-spreading eagle, the arrows below it,
The stars and the words with the strange things they tell;
The coin of my fathers, we're glad that we know it.
For some time or other, 'twill come in right well—
The spread-eagle dollar, the star-spangled dollar,
The old silver dollar we love so well.

The worm has turned. A lady who wears a shirt waist fumed and scolded for an hour the other day because she lost a collar button, and her husband had to get down on his knees and look for it.

There are plenty of gardens that never have okra growing in them. It is easy to grow, it bears edible pods all the summer, as they are cut off as soon as large enough, and they are delicious in soups, ragouts, etc., and for pickles.

The man who invented the folding bicycle does not know how to ride a wheel and never mounted one in his life. Yet his invention is a success. It will enable bicycles to be carried with ease on journeys and to be hung upon the wall of an ordinary room. The connecting rods of the bicycle frame are hinged or jointed and simply double over upon one another like the parts of a fishing rod.

Joe Spencer had a narrow escape Monday from a fatal accident. He was engaged in tearing down an old out house on his fathers place when a sill fell on his head. Fortunately he was hit on the side of the head and the sill fell on his right shoulder which was badly bruised, but no bones broken. He was knocked senseless for a few moments, but soon came around all right and is now improving rapidly.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune says that he recently found twenty well built towns in Kansas without a single inhabitant. One of them, named Saratoga, has a $30,000 opera house, a $20,000 school house and a substantial brick hotel, which now gives shelter to coyotes, bats and owls. All these deserted towns were built by speculators in boom days, when Kansas was in control of the populists.

W. H. Nelson, who is in the drug business at Kingville, Mo., has so much confidence in Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy that he warrants every bottle and offers to refund the money to any customer who is not satisfied after using it. Mr. Nelson takes no risk in doing this because the remedy is a certain cure for the disease for which it is intended and he knows it. It is for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

A slight interruption of the proceedings in a justice's court at Snyder Springs, Van Zandt county, Texas, last week, was occasioned by the witness on the stand objecting to a leading question and reaching for his gun, which he had omitted to leave in the rack at the door, according to custom. When business was resumed, the case that had been under consideration was adjourned, because in the meantime the defendant and his chief witness had died of pistol shot wounds, the son of the defendant was badly wounded and another relative, said not to have been interested in the case, but merely a spectator, was also wounded, "by accident."

The Birmingham News is responsible for the following: "A story comes from Sims Bros'. railroad camp near Blocton of the killing of a monster rattlesnake by some negroes down there Sunday. Mr. John P. Carpenter received the story from a member of his order, and by him was given to a News reporter. There were several negroes who assisted in the work of exterminating his snakeship. The snake was nine feet in length and was twenty-two inches around the body. There were forty-nine rattles and a button. Negroes living in the vicinity say the snake has been a terror for a number of years. The snake was the oldest ever killed in Alabama."

Mrs. Frank Finch gave an intertainment at her beautiful home on the night of the 19th in honor of her relative, Miss Alice Sanders. All of one accord had a very nice time indeed. Miss Alice, to the regret of those present, departed for her home in Bessemer the next day.

Capt. Christian has been removing the solid iron at the bottom of the furnace. Capt. C. says that it would be impossible for him to have cleared off the solid iron without dynamite. This wonderful explosive seems to bring to bear its greatest force where there is the greatest resistance. He is now raising a block of iron that contains 85 cubit feet and weighs not less than twenty-five tons, with a compound leverage, which is a remarkable piece of ingenuity.

The re-opening of the Shelby Iron Company's store, after being closed for five years, is an act of bad faith that rarely occurs in the transactions with men in civilized communities. No man would have bid, nay, nor attended the sale of lots in April, 1890, had not the company pledged that they would not engage in the mercantile business. Besides a merchant of Shelby three years ago inquired of Capt. T. G. Bush if the rumor was true that the company designed merchandizing, who informed the merchant that the building would never be used for mercantile purposes, over his own signature. The golden rule has been absolutely ignored by the Shelby Iron Company. Perhaps their big pile of money and desire to accumulate a little more cash license them to disregard any scriptural injunction.

BACHELOR.

A horse kicked H. S. Shafer, of the Freemyer House, Middleburg, N. Y. on the knee, which laid him up in bed and caused the knee joint to become stiff. A friend recommended him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did, and in two days was able to be around. Mr. Shafer has recommended it to many others and says it is excellent for any kind of a bruise or sprain. This same remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Negroes for the Kongo Free State.

There are various countries in which the black man would be a welcome immigrant, even if the people of the United States are not pining for the increase of his family. Mexico will take numbers of industrious negro colonists, some of the South American republics have expressed a desire for colored farmers from the United States, and now the Kongo Free State sends out a flattering bid for intelligent colored American farmers. Really the stock of the black man seems looking up.

The Belgian secretary for the Kongo Free State has written from Brussels a letter to C. C. Carter, of Riverside, Cal., making overtures for a large migration of negroes from the United States to colonize the vast African domain. Colonists are wanted whose ancestors came from Africa because these will be able to endure the climate while they cultivate the soil. The vain old dream of forty acres and a mule that haunted for so many years the imagination of American freedmen will be more than realized in the Kongo Free State. Large inducements are offered to healthy and industrious American negro farmers who will go back with their families to the land of their ancestors. It is expected to make a special effort to cultivate tobacco in the Kongo Free State.

A Colony of Soldiers to Settle in Georgia.

The Soldiers' Colonization company of Indiana has just bought 113,000 acres of land in Wilcox and Irwin counties, Ga. It is estimated that 5,000 families, or about 30,000 persons, will settle within the next two years on the land which has been bought. The colonization movement is to begin next September. It is the intention of the colonies to settle on farms of sizes according to their means. They expect to be prepared out of their present savings and resources to tide over the period between this harvest season and the next.

In addition to farmers the colony will include artisans, fruit growers and others seeking more favorable labor, climatic and health conditions. They will come from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Wisconsin and other western states. The company purchasing the property is a joint stock organization formed several years ago and numbering about 7,000 stockholders.

Assessments have been paid in at intervals, and the stockholders will contribute their paid up shares in purchase of farms in the section bought by the company.—New York Tribune.

Press On.

Have an aim that you may unblushingly and proudly exhibit to the light of day and for which you may safely challenge the respect of all. Then pursue it earnestly and steadfastly. No matter what discouragements assail you or place themselves in your way, keep right on in the pursuit of your knowledge. If your progress be slow, still persevere and make it sure. Do sorrows come to you? They come to all. The continued adherence to the great plan of usefulness which you have laid out will do as much as anything to brighten your path, even when grief and gloom overshadow it. Press on, through good report or evil report, through darkness or through sunshine, amid storms or under peaceful skies—still press on and never relinquish the great object of your ambition.—Exchange.

A Dog Barometer.

Landlord Moses of the Brunswick hotel at Eagle Mills has a 14-year-old house dog which is a more correct barometer than many of the mechanical instruments. For two hours before the approach of a shower, and with no visible signs of the arousing of the elements, he is as uneasy as a fish out of its natural element. He will roam from house to house, call on all his old acquaintances, and when the shower is near at hand he will seek a comfortable place at home and go to sleep. This peculiarity has been noticed on a number of occasions lately and has won much renown for the brute.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Thoughtul Chauncey.

A good story is told on Chauncey Depew. He received a letter from a young married friend in Albany asking for a pass for his mother-in-law, who was coming to make him a visit, and closing with the delicate hint, "Don't forget to have the return coupon attached." Mr. Depew is nothing if not worldly wise and sympathetic, and in sending the pass he wrote, "I have not neglected the return coupon and have limited it to three days."

A SONG OF SUMMER TIME.

Oh, the swaying of the branches and the flitting through the trees,
And the music of the voices that come upon the breeze!
Oh, the singing and the winging of the birds that come and go,
And the frisking of the squirrels as they scamper to and fro!
Oh, the ferns and mossy carpets, and the waters dark and cool
That go stealing through the shadows from some clear, unsullied pool!
Oh, the trilling of the songsters
From the branches and the grass,
And the glancing of the sunlight
On the waters as we pass!

Oh, the glancing of the sunlight as it strikes the waters clear,
And the singing of the thrushes, and the other songs we hear!
Oh, the boating and the floating on the waters of the lake,
And the ripples and the shadows that go dancing from our wake!
Oh, the breezy days of pleasure, and the pleasant nights to dream,
When the stars look down and twinkle, and the winged lanterns gleam!
Oh, the summers in the country,
Where the songsters nest and sing,
And the pleasure without measure
That the woods and waters bring!

—Frank H. Sweet.

Last June Dick Crawford brought his twelve-wonths-old child, suffering from infantile diarrhœa, to me. It had been weaned at four months old and had always been sickly. I gave it the usual treatment in such cases but without benefit. The child kept growing thinner until it weighed but little more than when born, or perhaps ten pounds. I then started the father to giving Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Before one bottle of the 25 cent size had been used a marked improvement was seen and its continued use cured the child. Its weakness and puny constitution disappeared and its father and myself believe the child's life was saved by this remedy. J. T. Marlow, M. D., Tamaroa, Ill. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

The Sage of Rocky Creek—Farming With His Mouth.

Bragging on Buck Hasseltine and Making Big Crops—Hard Licks and Big Talk Win the Fight—Quaint Philosophy in Chips and Splinters.

(Copyright 1895.)

The most outdoinest thing you ever heard tell of perhaps, I reckon I have done this year. Did you ever hear tell of a man that could do good farmin all alone with his mouth? Well, that is me to a nat's heel. I have made the bulliest kind of a crop this year over on the old Hasseltine place, and I haven't hit a lick nor spent a cent to make it.

I have been runnin of a one-horse farm over there, you understand, altogether with my mouth.

Remarked of a Farmer.

Year before last old man Hasseltine got sick abed with a fever, and sick unto death, so by-and-by he had to take out and quit. Henceforwards from that time on his son Buck has been livin there on the old place and makin out like he was runnin of a farm. I remember onct upon a time whilst Parson Zeb Newton was ridin the circuit and preachin the gospel, but swappin horses and drinkin whisky considerable between times, old Squire Wilson told me that Zeb Newton reminded him of a preacher. And that has been the way with me and Buck Hasseltine up to this year. You understand Buck was born and bred and brung up on a farm and never did live a day nor bit a lick anywheres else, but till here right lately about the very best that I could say for Buck was that he reminded me of a farmer.

The very first year after the old man died Buck lit in he did and made the old Hasseltine place famous for tall grass and sorry crops—famous for miles and miles around. People would come from way over in the hill country and way down in the Flat Woods and ride around by the Hasseltine place to see the sights. And they poked so mortal much fun at Buck till it was a thousand wonders to me he didn't lay down his hand and jump the game. He made some fodder and a few nubbins of corn and a light sprinkle of bumblebee cotton. But he stayed in, you understand, and played the game out for what little there was in it.

Whereas after all that it was monstrous strange to me to see Buck sail in last spring and pitch another crop. Now as to Buck Hasseltine, he never was what you would call rale low down lazy. The mainest trouble with him was that he never had learnt anything, you understand. He didn't know exactly when to strike, and he didn't know for certain how to hit. He would take one poor little slab-sided, razorback, wobbledy-leged mule and plants crops enough for a pair of fine young mules and three full grown men to work. He would bite off three or four times more than he could chaw, and then gum up the cards and make a general mess and confusionment and failure. He needed somebody to back him with a little judgment and brag on him for every lick, you understand. Some youngsters are like some colts. Sometimes you can lead 'em all right when you can't sorter drive em.

Braggin on Buck.

So finally at last I come to the conclusion that I would try my hand at braggin on Buck. I lowed to myself that plenty of big talk and hard licks mought maybe bring forth a good crop on the old Hasseltine place, and I knowed if Buck would manage so as to do the work I could hustle around and furnish the necessary big talk. And last spring I lit in I did and went to braggin on Buck to beat six bits.

One mornin in the spring, a little after daylight, I was ridin along the Hasseltine place, and bless gracious there was Buck out there at the lot feedin his stock. It stood to reason with me right then and there that somethin was wrong somewheres, you understand, and I found out afterwards that the baby had a bad sick spell that night and kicked up such a howlin rumpus till the onlyest thing for Buck to do was to git up and out at the break of day. But I didn't let on like it was anything oncustomary and went to braggin on Buck as the most earliest riser in the settlement. I likewise also give him that good old song and dance, you understand, which is to say:

"Early to bed and early to rise
Makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise."

"That is the onlyest way for a farmer to farm and farm right, Buck," says I. "Beat the sun up every day and hit a reglar, steady lick till the cows come home and the evenin stars sing together, and you are bound to whip the fight, hands down.

"The seasons went powerful agin you last year, Buck." I went on to say, but that want your fault. Then you waded in ruther deep and planted crops enough for three or four men. That is the trouble with a heap of young men—particlar them that are ambitious like and full of grit and go. You have got the natural stuff and materials in you for the makin of a bully good farmer. You can do more work than any one man in the settlement, but you can't do as much as three men. I am bettin on you this year, Buck, and the money is up. Now if you will fence off some of the hills and hollows and branches for paster, sow down about ten acres in oats and shave the farm down to fit one man and one mule I will win that money as easy as findin it in a gum stump."

I then went on about my business, and the next news I got from Buck Hasseltine he had fenced off a good paster and sowed down a whole passle of oats. The next time I passed along that way I found Buck cleanin off his corn land and burnin brush, as busy as a thousand bees in one tar bucket. But I stopped him long enough to put in a few stanzas of the necessary big talk.

"That's right Buck—that's perfectly all right" says I. "A soon start makes a smooth finish, and by gatlins I can see you are in the fight to win. Now don't forget to give your corn the mainest plowin before you plant it. Go right down into the bowels of the earth when you break your land, and in the first plowin let your bull-tongue scooters run knee deep right clost to the stuff. Then bust out the middles deep and after that stay on top of the ground and keep the grass down with your buzzard-wing sweeps. But I must git on back towards home and whoop up the hands a little. I can't stand still and see other men runnin way yonder ahead of me with the general farm work."

Free Gratis For Nothin.

Then along about cotton plantin time I rode around by the old Hasseltine place onest more, you understand, and put in a few extry licks in big talk. By gracious I bragged on Buck, and bragged on his wife and baby, and bragged on his stock, and bragged on his crops, and bragged on his work, and bragged on everything in sight. Before I left there I had got him worked up to such a terrible high pitch till I could see he was plum nervious and restless for me to start home so he could sail in and go down after some more grass.

By that time, between Buck's hard work and my big talk, we had a stavin fine crop growin over there on the old Hasseltine place. As the hot and swelty weather come on I managed so as to happen along right frequent and do a little braggin at the right and proper time. I wanted Buck and his mule to take all the slack out of the traces and keep it out, you unnerstand. And every time I went over there—every time I heard from there, Buck and that mule was stretched out across the field and stirrin fresh dirt from daylight till dark. Dog my cats if that boy didn't work so hard and so reglar and so constant, till he got as poor as a snake and come blame nigh gittin down on the lifts. Nothin has saved him but a strong appetite and plenty of plain grub and a little big talk from me.

But by gollys you jest ought to come down and ride around by the old Hasseltine place with me and see the crops me and Buck are growin over there. Blast my buttons if that farm aint the talk of the whole entire country for forty miles around. I have got plenty of help now. Everybody is braggin on Buck and his crops, and the onlyest thing that pesters me is for fear, if the braggin goes on at the present lick, the boy will work his fool self to death before cool weather comes.

To be certainly of course, of all the bully crops now growin on the old Hasseltine place, narry lock of cotton, and narry grain of corn is comin my way. But I am bound to maintain, and you are bound to own up that I have done some farmin over there this year. I didn't lose no time, and I didn't sweat no great drops of perspiration to speak of, you understand, and consequentially I don't make no charges for farmin with my mouth.

Buck is now so monstrous thin till a little more and you could see through him. But his appetite is good and his sperits are high. He is happy, and his wife is happy, and so am I. And whilst there ain't no cash money for me in farmin with my mouth, yet still I have got my share in the general results.

"Then do your best for one another,
Makin life a pleasant dream.
Help a worn and weary brother
Pullin hard against the stream."

Chips and Splinters.

You can help your neighbor up jest about as easy as you can hold him down, and then you will sleep a whole lot better at night.

Many a man can write big and talk big about the farmers and the farm, when at the same time he wouldn't know a bull-tongue scooter from a buzzard-wing sweep, or a stack of hay from a covered wagon.

In orderment to make a good farm hand a man must rest a little and work a right smart and eat a whole passle.

The old farm will always keep peace in your mind and plenty in the pantry if you will but only treat her fair and tickle her bosom right frequent.

About the most easiest and quickest way to git there is to hit the grit and hit it a movin.

THE man who sticks to raising first-class cattle and hogs, and does it with good judgment, will find it reasonably profitable.

AN Iowa swine breeder says that a pig that has recovered from a genuine attack of thumps is about worthless for breeding purposes.

THE New York experiment station has been making some practical tests with cows as to the amount of water they drink. It was found that during lactation, or the milk-giving period, the average per month was one thousand six hundred and sixty pounds.

WOOD ashes make the best fertilizer for crimson clover. Although this clover thrives on land that has been used until but little fertility remains, yet it needs plant food and gives the best results when manure or ashes (or both) are applied.

IF the pasture is scant it can be made to go further by herding and allowing the stock to eat down a portion of the field at the time. Even with hogs and sheep this plan can be followed without much extra labor. Movable fences sometimes meet the purpose.

EXPORTS INCREASED.

Prosperity Returning Through the Democratic Tariff.

Among the other facts unmistakably showing the revival of business is an increase in our export trade. New York merchants within the past few days have been commenting upon this; and the reason they assign for it is a remarkable illustration of the solidarity of the commercial nations of the world.

It has pleased a certain school of American politicians for many years past to represent international commerce as analogous to war. They have held out the idea that when one nation gains anything from trade another necessarily loses. They have treated imports as a calamity, and exports alone as worthy of consideration. They have quite ignored the fact that international commerce is mainly an exchange of commodities, and that if a nation does not buy it cannot sell. Occasionally exceptions to this rule may be noted, but it is incontestably true in the long run. There is no nation that can go on for years exporting commodities without importing others to pay for them, for the simple reason that other nations cannot go on paying for their imports in money, for in a few years they would have no money left. As a rule, imports must be paid for by exports. Hence when imports increase exports must increase in a similar ratio.

The protection papers have been making a great outcry about the increase of our imports for the past fiscal year, comparing them with the panic period that extended from July 1, 1893, to June 30, 1894. Our imports then were small because our ability to purchase was limited. Much has been said about the large increase of imports of woolens during the fiscal year just closed. In the first ten months of the fiscal year ended on the 30th ult. our imports of woolens were of the value of nearly thirty millions of dollars, which was in excess of those for the corresponding months in the preceding fiscal year. Hence the howls to which we have referred. But if we go back another year we find the imports of woolens for the corresponding period amounted to thirty-three millions and a half. In other words, we are not yet importing so many woolens as we were before the panic under the McKinley bill, which tends to show that the return of prosperity is not complete, as we know well enough from other sources.

We have alluded incidentally to the reasons assigned by New York merchants for the improvement of the export trade. They say that the higher prices paid by us for many foreign commodities, such as hides, have increased the purchasing power of other countries, and thereby enable them to buy more from us. Then, too, the consequences of the Baring failure are passing away abroad, as those of our panic are doing here. The whole world, with the exception of China, Japan and Cuba, is on the up grade, and it is expected that our export trade this year will be very large.

These views show how silly and baseless is the calamity howl raised over the increase of imports. We are taking more goods from abroad because with the passing of depression our purchasing power has increased. In like manner the purchasing power of most other countries has been augmented, and they are taking more of our goods than they have heretofore simply because they have now found themselves able to pay for more. This does not mean less sales by domestic producers, but increased consumption and more comfort for all classes. Profits may be less in many cases, but this disadvantage is offset by increased sales.

The moral of this is that foreign commerce is a good thing for all, and that the prosperity of one nation is shared by all the others that trade with it. On the other hand, depression in one country extends to others, or at any rate has a tendency to reduce their trade. The long depression in the commercial world seems now to be approaching an end, and all countries will get a share of the improvement.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Returning prosperity is assured, and democratic tariff policy is vindicated!—Albany Argus.

——Benjamin Harrison begins to rather wish he had not been so hasty in uncovering his scarecrow record on the force bill.—Detroit Free Press.

——It was very mean to say that Tom Reed has shaved off his mustache in order to let the country see that he was keeping his mouth shut.—Boston Herald.

——The Wilson bill continues to "crush out American industries" by raising wages in a way which is simply exasperating to the McKinleyites.—Winona (Minn.) Herald.

——Gov. McKinley has at last placed his ear to the ground. In a speech at Freeport, Ill., the other day, he actually admitted that the business of the country has vastly improved under a democratic administration. — Detroit Free Press.

——When wages went down in the steel business it was under the McKinley bill. When they go up it is under the Wilson bill. This may convince some that the tariff does not give every workingman a Brussels carpet and a piano. Prof. Harrison, of Indiana, need to have a theory of that sort. Perhaps he will revise it now. A good many other people are revising it at any rate.—N. Y. World.

DEFICIT OF REPUBLICANS.

The Country Crippled Under the Harrison Administration.

When Tanner said "God help the surplus," he fastened by confession on the republican party all the blame for the deficit which Carlisle finds at the close of the fiscal year.

Treasury embarrassments caused by the mortgages of the Reed congress predestined the panic of 1893 and the deficit of 1895.

It was an embarrassed treasury which engendered the distrusts of the government's ability to continue the redemption of currency notes. It was a McKinley tariff which hampered trade and prevented a normal increase of customs revenues. Long before Harrison vacated the white house every financier in America perceived that trouble was impending, and that the government must issue bonds or default in its payments. Harrison's secretary of the treasury had the bonds ready, and only by sharp practice was able to drag along until the 4th of March, 1893.

Republican extravagance made a deficit and a panic which, by reducing trade and revenue receipts, prevented the immediate success of democratic efforts to administer the government economically and honestly.

A democratic tariff is encouraging trade. The government's receipts are increasing. Wages are rising. Mines and factories are busy. The farmer is getting better prices. The merchant is selling more goods. Exports are more active. American securities are attracting purchasers. A republican administration left financial confusion and universal gloom. The democratic administration will leave confidence in the good faith of the government, a balance in the treasury, a prosperous condition of business and a hopeful people.

If the policy of the Harrison administration and the Fifty-first congress had continued to this date, it would have increased the national debt by hundreds of millions, if it could, indeed, have avoided the disgrace of a suspension of specie payments.

We are dealing with a republican deficit. Under democratic management we shall wipe it out and recuperate from its effects, as we overcame the republican panic and restored the activity of business.—St. Louis Republic.

RETURN OF GOOD TIMES.

A Pointed Suggestion for the Little Napoleon of Protection.

Gov. McKinley is not paying much attention to the financial question in his speeches. The burden of his theme is protection and the tariff, and he also professes great sympathy for the laboring man. He talks about work for idle hands, wages for men who have families to support, and markets for our surplus products. Such a minor question as the nature of the money medium may be left to solve itself. We want prosperity more than we want anything else, he says. The governor should put his ear to the ground. He would hear the rumbling of higher wages all over the country for the men for whom he has so much sympathy; he would hear the satisfaction of the farmer expressed at the higher prices he receives for his produce; and the evidence that from the Atlantic to the Pacific industry and trade are rapidly, healthfully and legitimately reviving would be brought home to him in a manner most convincing. The contents of the strong boxes of the manufacturer, the investor, and the holder of securities are being augmented, and from them labor is getting a fair proportion. The business in New York city is something unprecedented within the last three years, and the wages of thousands of workingmen are increased materially. The dry goods trade is much better than a year ago, and the demand for structural iron is greater than it has been in years past. There has been a sharp increase in the shipbuilding industry and a belief that the advance in work is to continue. Pittsburgh iron and steel works are in full blast and crowded with orders. Coke ovens in the Connellsville district are in operation, and many thousand men who have been idle have found work at fair wages. Many window plate glass manufactories are working to their capacity. Revival of building operations enables them to do business with profit. Wool prices are on the increase and the leather trade is active, the boot and shoe industry fairly booming. There is a marked improvement in the milling business, with good prospects for a continuance. In short, the belief is general that the country is rapidly climbing up the ladder of prosperity.—Detroit Free Press.

——Tariff reform was finally won in spite of a fierce opposition backed by the greatest aggregation of capital this country has ever seen and the treachery of some of those who professed to be fighting its cause. Returning prosperity will intrench it firmly in the confidence and support of the great mass of voters, and the day is not far distant when it will have ceased to be a serious issue. Protectionist manufacturers are already reaching out for foreign trade and they will doubtless be among the first to protest against any change which will curtail their opportunities for selling their goods abroad.—Chicago Chronicle.

——The political sky, which was so cloudy and threatening a short time ago, is beginning to clear, and the "indications" for democracy in 1896—if we may look so far ahead—are distinctly favorable to it in the great presidential struggle.—Baltimore Sun.

PRECIOUS STONES IN AMERICA.

SEVERAL asterias, or star stones, have been picked up in North Carolina and Georgia.

SAPPHIRES of small size but great brilliancy have been found in North Carolina.

AN emerald green sapphire was some years ago found in Franklin county, N. C.

THE California diamonds are generally very small, ranging in value from $10 to $50.

IN 1884 the value of the precious stones mined in this country somewhat exceeded $30,000.

EVERY precious stone known to the lapidary has been found within the limits of the United States.

THE spinel, often sold for the oriental ruby, has been found in New England, Virginia and North Carolina.

RUBIES of small size have been found in North Carolina and Virginia, and, it is claimed, also in Colorado and New Mexico.

NORTH CAROLINA diamonds are usually associated with itacolumite, or flexible sandstone, quite plentiful in certain parts of that state.

Old Rip Van Winkle went up into the Catskill mountains to take a little nap of twenty years or so, and when he wakened, he found that the "cruel war was over," the monthly magazines had "fought it over" the second time and "blown up" all the officers that had participated in it. This much is history, and it is also an historical fact that, it took the same length of time, for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to become the most celebrated, as it is the most effective, Liver, Blood and Lung Remedy of the age. VESSELS WRECKED, CREWS DROWNED

Steamers Are Blown Ashore As If They Were Play Things—List of Those Known to be Lost and Others Not Yet Heard From.

PHILADELPHIA, July 27.—A violent hurricane was reported yesterday by cable to the Maritime Exchange to have swept the coast of Japan, during which many vessels were wrecked and their crews drowned. The information of the loss of life was meagre. The cablegram was sent from Ruehinotzu. The German steamship Helen Rickmers, and the Norwegian steamship, Lyderhornes, and the German steamer, Herman Wedel Jaristrug, the British steamsnip, Rentela, and the ship Manuel Schuel, from Philadelphia, were all blown ashore and all are believed to have been totally wrecked, except the Rontala. The loss of life on shore is reported to be large.

The ship Manuel Schuel sailed from this port four months ago for Hiogo, Japan, with a cargo of case oil, taken on board at Point Breeze. She was a first class iron vessel, worked by a crew of twenty-seven men. She had discharged her cargo and was getting under way for San Francisco when the hurricane struck her.

SUED FOR DAMAGES.

The Florida Times-Union Sued by an Ex-Treasurer For $10,000.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 27.—E. J. Triay, formerly state treasurer and state oil inspector, has, through his attorneys, brought suit against the Florida Times-Union for libel. Triay claims that he has been damaged to the extent of $10,000 by the paper. In the factional fight which has raged in the democratic party in Jacksonville for some years Triay has been a leader of the faction opposed by the Times-Union. In the recent city campaign Triay took an active part and in his speeches frequently boasted that his opponents did not dare attack his character. Regarding these boasts the Times-Union said editorially: "The Times-Union has never attacked Mr. Triay's character and it never will. The Times-Union does not care to go to the trouble of taking out a search warrant." It is supposed that Triay bases his suit for $10,000 on the above paragraph.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

By Which Four Lives are Lost and Another Rescued Just in Time.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 27.—A terrible drowning accident occurred on Aylmar lake yesterday, by which four lives were lost. Alexander, Walter and Eddy Brophy, sons of George P. Brophy, superintendent of the Ottawa river works at Pot Kootenzy Mining Company; Peter Winfield, the 10 year old son of Rev. Mr. Winfield, chaplain of the governor general and countess Aberdeen, and Ray Mail, a son of Edward Mial, commissioner of internal revenue, started from Aylmar in a skiff belonging to Mr. Mial, for a sail. They had been out but a short time when a stiff breeze capsized the boat. The Brophy boys, 22, 19 and 16 years old respectively and young Winfield were drowned. Young Mial was rescued three hours after the accident. He was still clinging to the boat in an almost unconscious condition. A party with grappling irons sleft here at 7 o'clock for the scene of the accident and are searching for the bodies.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., July 27.—James J. Corbett, the pugilist, who was injured yesterday by being thrown from his bicycle, is not badly disabled. He is a little stiff, and the lacerations, although not deep, make the skin stiff and brittle as they heal. Corbett said yesterday he thought he would resume training next week. He did not think the rest would do him harm, as he would be able to hold his own by light exercise while laid up.

ATLANTA INVITES CHICAGO

To the Exposition for Which It Has Done More Than Any Other City.

ATLANTA, July 27.—A public meeting of business men of Atlanta was held yesterday at the chamber of commerce at which a formal invitation was extended to the business men of Chicago to visit Atlanta during the month of November, at which time prominent business men and representatives of the boards of trade of the leading southern cities will be present to meet them.

President Collier, of the exposition, said that Chicago had done more for the expositton than any other city in the country and that the invitation had his most hearty endorsement. Mayor King said the same thing and then the resolution was unanimously adopted.

A few weeks ago a meeting of one hundred of the most prominent business men of Chicago met at the Palmer house in that city and organized a movement for the establishment of closer trade relations between that city and the south. They arranged for the entire board of directors of the world's fair to visit the Cotton States and International Exposition at Atlanta, at which time they will be accompanied by the governor and his staff, and escorted by the First Volunteer Regiment of Chicago, numbering 700 men.

Gen. John C. Underwood, of Chicago, ex-lieutenant gouernor of Kentucky and the man who organized the movement resulting in the building of the confederate monument recently unveiled in Chicago, was present at this meeting and his speech was well received. He said that of the five carloads of flowers sent to Chicago for the dedicatory exercises of the confederate monument, not a wreath was left, all being taken as souvenirs. He said that the desire of the people of Chicago was that they should be brought into closer contact with the south and states that Chicago is ready to meet the south half way in any movement looking to the closer bringing together of the two sections.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted thanking Gen. Underwood and extending a cordial invitation to the business men of Chicago to visit Atlanta in November. A committee of ten was also appointed to go to Chicago to extend the formal invitation and on this committee will be the mayor of Atlanta, the president of the exposition and the president of the chamber of commerce.

VALKYRIE III. IN OCEAN RIG.

Getting Ready to Sail for New York Today.

GOUROCK, July 27.—Lord Dunraven's new yacht, Valkyrie III., accompanied by the yacht Selene, belonging to the Hendersons, the builders of the Valkyrie, arrived at Gourock yesterday.

The boat presented an odd appearance in her ocean rig, in which she will sail to New York, and attracted a good deal of attention. She is rigged as a ketch. Her mainmast is thirty feet shorter than the mainmast she carries when in racing trim and she carries a very short top mast. Her jigger mast is stepped unusually for forward and in height it reaches about level with the top of the main crosstrees.

The yacht will carry her own dingy and cutter, and will also have two large Berthon collapsible boats. Mr. Glennie, a prominent Solent yachtsman, arrived here yesterday as the representative of Lord Dunraven, and is shipping the Valkyrie's stores for the voyage.

It is now intended that the Valkyrie III. shall sail for New York today, if nothing happens to prevent it.

THE PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBIT.

The Plan of Her building Will be the Same as That of Chicago.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 27.—The forestry committe of the Pennsylvania commission to the Atlanta Exposition, met and empowered Secretary Keenan to visit the state college to ascertain what forestry specimens were available in the state collection. Information was received from the president of the Atlanta Exposition that Pennsylvania will be given space in the forestry and mineral building far a collection exhibit, so that instead of its being scattered about in various buildings it will all be together.

The plan of the Pennsylvania building has been decided upon. It will follow the lines of the Pennsylvania building at Chicago, and a foyer in which will be placed the liberty bell suspended in a frame so as to easily removed in case of danger. The commission will go to Atlanta on September 18, opening day, and November 14, Pennsylvania day.

The family were asleep when the fire broke out.

NEGRO LYNCHED,

And Afterwards It Is Discovered He Was An Innocent Man.

FORD, Ky., July 27.—It developed yesterday that the negro, Bob Haggard, who was lynched here last week for having outraged Miss Elkins, was innocent of the crime with which he was charged. The story told of how the deed was done has been proven to be utterly false. The work was done by a few hot headed men who did not take time to inquire whether Haggard was guilty or not.

Stricken By Grief.

NEW ORLEANS, July 27.—Henry Bier, the convicted capitalist who was lately refused a new trial and has been at his home very ill and guarded by two deputy sheriffs, is reported in a dying condition. He has been sick from grief.

OF MANY NATIONS

Are the Delegates Which Have Gathered Together in London.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL CONGRESS.

There are Fifteen Hundred Delegates Representing About Every Civilized Government in the World. Delegates From the U. S.

LONDON, July 27.—Arrangements of a most elaborate kind have been made for the reception of the delegates to the Sixth International Geographical congress, which opened in London yesterday. Fully 1,500 members, including 250 official delegates from governments and geographical societies are in attendance. The congress is under the patronage of the Queen, the Prince of Wales, and the King of the Belgians. The Duke of Connaught and the Duke of York have become honorary presidents and the latter presided at the opening ceremony yesterday at the Imperial Institute. The president is Mr. Clements R. Markuam, C. B., F. R. S., president of the Royal Geographical Society, and the honorary vice presidents include 34 foreign and colonial ambassadors, ministers and agents-general, together with the Lord Mayor of London. Practically every civilized country in the world is represented at the congress, besides which geographical and scientific societies have universally sent delegates. The preliminary work was carried out by an organizing commission, nominated by the council of the Royal Geographical Society, with representations from the Royal Scotch Geographical Society, the Education department, the Imperial Institute, the Royal Colonial Institute and the Society of Arts. The deliberations of the congress will cover the whole range of geographical research, including mathematical, physical, descriptive, historical, applied, commercial and educational geography, cartography and exploration. One of the most generally interesting debates will be that on Polar exploration, Anarctic, by Dr. G. Neumayer and Arctic by Adla A. Markham. Herr S. A. Andree will submit his plan of reaching the Pole in a balloon, and General A. W. Greely will give his opinion on the scope and value of Arctic explorations.

To what extent tropical Africa is suited for development by white races or under their superintendence, will constitute another very instructive subject, to which many celebrated explorers of the country will speak.

Addresses of welcome were made by the Duke of York and Admiral Markham, which were replied to by Justice Daly, of New York. Among the American delegates are Hon. Charles P. Daly, of New York; Henry G. Bryant and Charles H. Hutchinson, of Philadelphia; Cyrus C. Adams, of Brooklyn, a well known writer on geographical topics; Miss Eliza R. Scidmore, W. W. Rockhill and Crosby Noyes, of Washington, Rev. Dr. Vorrsangel, of San Francisco; G. S. Kennelly, of Santa Monico, Cal.; Mrs. French-Sheldon, of Chicago; Peter W. MUCH WANTED RAILROAD.

The Seaboard Announces That It Is a Bidder—Others Also Wish It.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., July 27.—A conference was held here yesterday between Presideet R. C. Hoffman, Vice-President, E. St. John, and Director D. A. Tomkins of the Seaboard Air Line, and President S. B. Alexander, and Directors W. C. Maxwell and J. L. Morehead, of the North Carolina Railroad, with reference to the lease of the State road.

The Seaboard people definitely stated that they would bid for the lease and asked that the matter be deferred for further consideration. The North Carolina road is now one of the most important links in the Southern system.

If the Southern railway Company fails to get the state road, it can be made a through connection over other roads it owns by building about forty miles more on existing tracks. Considerable competition may develop for the control of the State road. It is supposed that the Coast Line may want to bid also.

WANTED IN TEXAS.

A Would-be Suicide Is Charged With Burning a School House.

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 27.—Deputy Sheriff McCormick, of Navarro county, Tex., arrived here last night and will carry back with him J. L. Smith, wanted for arson in Blooming Grove. Smith came here two weeks ago with his bride and three days later attempted suicide in the Arlington Hotel annex, by cutting his throat with a razor. Since then he has been in the hospital here up to yesterday, when on receipt of telegrams from Texas officers would come for him, Smith was sent to jail. He is charged with burning down a school house. He was in love with the young school teacher in Texas and when she kicked him, it is supposed he burned the school house that she might be thrown out of employment and forced to marry him. He will be carried to Texas today.

The Minnesota Editors Coming to Atlanta.

ATLANTA, July 27.—A special committee from the Minnesota Publishers Association, consisting of Mr. Charles C. Whitney, president of the association, of the Marshall News-Messenger; Mr. C. P. Stene, of the Northwestern Printer, of St. Paul, and Mr. Harlan P. Hall, of St. Paul, visited Atlanta yesterday to arrange for the excursion of the Minnesota editors and publishers to the Cotton States and International Exposition. The gentlemen were driven over the grounds and are very enthusiastic over the present fair. They decided on October 2 as Minnesota Press Day, and say they will bring the Minnesota newspaper men in force to the exposition.

BRADSTREET AND DUNN,

What They Have to Say of the Conditions of Finance and Trade.

NEW YORK, July 27.—R. G. Dunn & Company in their weekly review of trade today says:

It is not the season for the tide of business to rise, but there is perceived scarcely any shrinkage except that which comes naturally with mid-summer heat. Lateness of spring trade threw heavy settlements into the second week of July, and clearing house payments are now almost a quarter smaller than in that week, but are 21.1 larger than last year, and only 6.0 per cent. smaller than in the same week of 1892. The volume of new business is small compared with recent months, but large enough to encourage more opening of long-closed works, and more advance in returns of labor. Important strikes show that the advance is not enough for some, but seem not more threatening than a week ago. The small shipments of gold count for nothing and money markets are undisturbed. Prices of iron and steel products still rise, the feature this week being the startling advance of 50 cents per keg in cut and wire nails, with new cards for various sizes which, it is stated, make the advance actually greater than it appears. Angles are also a shade higher and other prices strongly maintained. Bessemer pig does not advance, although the Carnegie and one other company have been buying about 140,000 tons, which is supposed to foreshadow large contracts for rails. In the first half of 1895, orders for rails were 713,000 tons against 502,000 in the first half of last year and a good many small orders appear at Chicago. Otherwise there is distinct halting in new demand, though nearly all iron and steel works are crowded with orders for some time to come.

Textile works have a better outlook with larger demand, both for cotton and woolen goods, a shade advance in print cloths and in most bleached goods, and a much more hopeful market for light weight woolens, which, if scarcely advanced beyond last year's prices, are selling better.

The financial situation is not disturbed by gold shipments, not by large excess of treasury expenditures amounting to about $12,300,000. Receipts are naturally better in July than in most other months, but expenses are also large. Money scarcely begins to go out for crops moving and the demand for commercial loans is not as large locally as it should be. Failures for seventeen days of July show liabilities of $6,599,751, of which $1,993,528 were of manufacturing and $3,924,881 of trading concerns. A year ago corresponding reports covered $5,317,696, of which $4,588,938 were of manufacturing and $1,483,911 of trading concerns.

NEW YORK, July 27.—Bradstreets' today says:

The more striking features of the business week are the influence of improved crop prospects and the continued large demands for iron and steel, with one of the largest makers in the market as a buyer of Bessemer pig. Most of the commercial and industrial features of the preceeding week are retained. The volume of trade has not varied materially, but in instance is larger than at a corresponding period last year. Trade in almost all lines is fairly active for the season and the general tendency of mercantile collections is toward greater ease. Commercial travelers are being sent out in all leading lines and reports from those now on the road, appear to meet expectations. Among larger eastern cities no striking changes in the condition of trade are reported with the exception of an improvement in industrial lines, and in the lake trade at Buffalo and a rather smaller volume of business reported from Baltimore. Pittsburg iron furnaces are sold months ahead and at Philadelphia the strike among the textile workers remain unsettled.

Fair orders are being received by jobbers and merchants at both Chicago and St. Louis, but no pronounced revival in the demand for fall delivery is expected there until after August 1, country merchants preferring to await corn crop prospects at that time before giving out orders. Iron and steel industries there are refusing orders except at full prices. A fair business is reported at Kansas City, although needed rains throughout Kansas are expected to improve the demand in the near future. Excellent crop prospects in Nebraska have resulted in more activity at Omaha, where trade in some lines is in excess of that of 1894.

At northwestern cities—Milwaukee, Duluth, Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sioux Falls—there is the customary volume of mid-summer business with prospects for a greatly improved fall trade. The feature of the week at the south is in the rather more satisfactory report from Memphis, Chattanooga, Augusta and Galveston, where orders have been received in some instances, in excess of expectations, but the volume of business is larger than at the corresponding period last year. At such points as Charleston, Savannah and New Orleans, no material change is reported as compared with a week ago and the like is true at Birmingham. Atlanta reports rather less doing in dry goods, notions and groceries, but that the outlook for trade this fall is good. The volume of business has fallen off at Jacksonville. The most disturbing influence in Louisiana is the withholding of the sugar bounty.

MILL CLOSED DOWN.

Could Not Grant Labor's Request of 12 1-2 Increase in Wages.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 27.—The H. P. Nail Works Company announced yesterday that the rod mill closed last night. The strike committee gave the company until August 1, to decide whether an advance of twelve and a half per cent. would be given the men. The superintendent states that the demand cannot be granted, and it has been decided to cease operations entirely. This means the closing of the entire plant. It is alleged that the H. P. Company has been filling orders for rods for the American Wire Works.

ANOTHER ALLIANCE AFFAIR.

A Spanish War Ship Brings to With Shot an American Schooner.

DELAWARE BREAKWATER, July 27.—The Ameircan schooner Carrie A. Lane Capt. Quick, which arrived from Cuban ports, reports that on July 14, while she was off Cape San Antonio, Cuba, a Spanish man-of-war fired two shots near her, and when the Lane hove to, sent a boat to ascertain what port she was from. The captain has reported the affair which may bring on complications with Japan.

THROUGH ALABAMA

Condensed News of Interest Throughout the State.

A STIFLED SENSATION IN MADISON.

Follows the Failure of a Huntsville Physician to Pass Examination. Other Interesting News Through the State.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., July 25.—A quiet sensation has been just sprung on the public here by the announcement that Dr. Wm. Burritt, had failed to pass his examination before the examining board of the Madison County Medical Society. It appears that not only was he surprised, together with many of his friends, but there is considerable indignation felt by them. It is reliably stated that Dr. Burritt has employed eminent counsel here and will go into the courts to test the matter as to whether his examination papers were fairly dealt with or not. Dr. Burritt was born and reared here, and has been regarded a young man of high professional attainments. He is a homeopathist, and his father was of the same school. If a suit is instituted it will be one of many interesting incidents, and may prove a cause celebre.

SILVER IN ALABAMA.

A Convention to be Held in Birmingham, Irrespective of Party.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 27.—After the adjournment of the state executive committee of the people's party, a number of prominent populists and republicans who favor the free coinage of silver at a ratio of 16 to 1 held a conference with reference to the suggestion which Col. D. S. Troy, of Montgomery, had made in his speech before the committee, that a state convention of all persons favoring silver be held next fall. It was decided to hold such a convention in Birmingham in November, not for the purpose of putting out a state ticket, but to further the silver movement without regard to party lines.

Captain R. F. Kolb, in discussing it, said that men of all political parties favoring free silver will be invited to attend from this and other southern states, as it will not be confined to Alabama, and eminent silver orators of national reputation will be on hand. He expects an attendance of fully 10,000. The formal call is now in course of preparation, and will be issued soon. He says the action of the convention will not be binding upon any who may attend.

AGE-HERALD SOLD.

Birmingham's Oldest Paper Again Changes Hands.

BIRMINGHAM, July 25.—The Age-Herald, the oldest morning paper in Birmingham, has changed hands. Col. Truman H. Aldrich, republican contestant for the seat of Congressman Oscar W. Underwood, in the Ninth district, said yesterday: "As representative of an eastern syndicate, I have purchased the Age-Herald, which will be contiued as a sound money democratic paper."

Mr. Aldrich added that Capt. Frank P. O'Brien, the former owner, will probably be retained as manager. Nothing has been given out as to the price paid, but the sum is said to have been about $10,000. The property was sold at receiver's sale several moths ago to Capt. O'Brien for $33,000.

MURDER AT BLOSSBURG, ALA.

The Victim Was a Young Miner Named James Mitchell.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 26.—At Blossburg a big dance took place. While the dance was in progress two young men, Goodman and Harnes, got into a dispute. A number of other young men joined in the row, and all were ordered out of the ball room. They went out in front of the ball and a pistol shot was heard soon afterward.

James Mitchell, a young miner, was found with a bullet in his abdomen. He will die. No one seems to know shot him, although a young man named Ray is wanted by the officers, who allege that he was responsible for the shooting.

Cameron and William Berney, trustees for the bondholders of the Williamson Iron Company, filed a bill for foreclosure of a $60,000 mortgage on which principal and interest have defaulted, and to sell the company's property, consisting of one blast furnace, machine and foundry shops in this city and valuable mineral lands near here. C. P. Williams is in charge as receiver.

Largest Coal Out-Put in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 26.—State Mine Inspector J. D. Hillhouse, has about completed his report of the production of coal in Alabama for the first six months in 1895. It shows a large increase as compared with the same period of 1894, and if the present rate is kept up during the balance of the year the total out put for the year will be the largest in the history of the state.

Hung Upon Guiteau's Gallows—Visiting Naval Stations—Secretaries Portraits.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Upon the gallows first used for the execution of Guiteau, President Garfield's assassin, Jos. A. Beam, was hanged in the District jail yesterday for murder of his step-daughter. He appeared in the corridor leading to the gallows at 11:34, walking with a firm step and ten minutes the drop fell. Owing to some misunderstanding the signal for pulling the lever had to be repeated two or three times. As Beam's body swung in the air, one of the prisoners cried out, so as to be heard all over the jail: "Another man gone." Beam's neck was broken by the fall and he was pronounced dead after eight minutes suspension.

An interesting feature of the treasury department's exhibit at the Atlanta Exposition will be a high frame containing the portraits of the principal secretaries. They will be properly grouped around the portrait of Secretary Carlisle.

Secretary Herbert is now on his way to the Norfolk navy yard. Shortly before noon he turned the department over to Assistant Secretary McAdoo, boarded the Dolphin and started on his tour of inspection of the North Atlantic station. After inspecting the Norfolk yard he will leave for New York, which he expects to reach by Monday.

Before leaving on his outing, Secretary Herbert approved the report of the board of construction on the two new battleships and directed that the preparation of plans begin at once. In order to facilitate the work of preparing the plans, no leaves of absence will be granted to draughtsmen and others in the construction bureau until the work is finished, which may not be until January 1, next year.

Secretary Morton's antagonism to the existence of the seed division of the agricultural department, reached its logical conclusion today in an order abolishing the division, to take effect October 1, by which date W. F. Fagan, chief of the division by the same order is directed to have its work wound up. This will throw a dozen or two employees out of their jobs.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 27.—The steam yacht Eleanor, in which William A. Slater, a wealthy Connecticut manufacturer, his family and friends are making a tour of the world, arrived here Tuesday. The yacht left New London, Conn., on Oct., 27, last and has nearly encircled the globe. Besides a crew of fifty men the yacht carries eleven passengers.

The Eleanor will remain at San Francisco three weeks and will then proceed to Alaska and call at the places of interest along the shores of Behring Sea. From there she will follow the coast down to Cape Horn and return home, stopping at many of the cities along the Atlantic side.

COLUMBIAN HALF DOLLARS.

Treasury's Supply Nearly Exhausted by The Recent Demand.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 27.—Several inquiries have recently been made at the Treasury for large quantities of Columbian half dollars. It is presumed the intention of inquirers is to procure them for sale at the Atlanta Exposition.

At one time these souvenir coins commanded twice their face value, but under the law the Treasury has to supply them at par for gold. It can exercise no option as to the quantity to be exchanged, and the run on them has been so great that but a few thousand are left.

MAILS ON CABLE CARS,

A Contract With the Third Avenue Road Closed by the Department.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The Post Office Department has closed a contract with the Third Avenue (New York) Cable Line for the transportation of mails over its entire route. Nine cars will be constructed, and during the day seven will be run at intervals of every half hour, with two cars held in reserve.

The night cars will be operated at irregular intervals. The new service will begin about October 1.

THE question of the exact date of the opening and close of the civil war is still being agitated by the Northern press. With some of them like the Inter Ocean the war has never yet closed.

RUSSELL SAGE has been using spectacles for the past twenty years, but discovered the other day, by accident, that he could see very well without them. It has long been known, however, that he could see a cent as far as any living man.

BY abolishing the seed division of the agricultural department the government saves $200,000 annually. The seed distribution by congressmen has been greatly abused, being largely used for political purposes, and it is well that it has been abolished, for it never has served the purpose it was intended for.

FURTHER applications for space at the Atlanta exposition cannot be considered by the management. President Collier announces that there is no more room for buildings, even were there money with which to build them. Every inch of space available has been assigned. The exposition will be a success so far as the show is concerned, and there is good reason to believe that the attendance will make the undertaking financially successful as well.

THE republic of Cuba held its presidential election last week. Owing to circumstances over which they had no control, most of the voters were temporary residents of the United States, Mexico, Jamaica and some of the Central and South American republics. They elected their president, however, and with a unanimity surprising in a Spanish republic they had only one candidate. He is Mr. Thomes Palma, a New York lawyer. The dead General Jose Marti, was the preceeding president.

IT IS the theory of some persons that the devil is especially riotous in hot weather, and it seems to have some foundation in fact. Fearful occurrences are most common when the dog star is in the ascendant. Tragedies of various kinds occur during this period—murders, lynchings, suicides being included. Men who usually hold themselves well in hand in cool and pleasant weather are not self-contained in hot weather, but say and do all manner of foolish and wicked things. The blood gets over-heated and thus our better selves are for the time obscured. It is eminently desirable that we all keep cool during the intensely hot weather through which we are passing.

THE sugar bounty claims now pending before Comptroller Bowler, of the treasury department are about one hundred and forty in number, but they amount to $5,000,000. The bounty subsidy is one of the few remaining features of the McKinley bill, imposed at the time when sugar was attached to the free list, and to make the original $10,000,000 paid to the planters possible the federal treasury was compelled to lose nearly $43,000,000 of a revenue a year. The loss of this revenue has been the cause of infinite trouble, and Secretary Carlisle proposes to contest every future demand from the planters, even though the senators from Louisiana claim that the refusal of payment means the financial ruin of thousands in that state.

PRICES OF COTTON FOR A CENTURY.

The bulletin on the prices of cotton for 100 years, which the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., has had in course of preparation for some weeks was issued Monday. The period considered begins and ends with two of the most important events in the history of cotton culture, the introduction of Whitney's saw gins, 1785, and the production of the largest crop the world has ever seen, 1894-5. The highest and lowest average prices, the crops of the United States, the exports to foreign countries, the supply and consumption in the United States, Great Britain and continental Europe are given for each year, as well as the chief causes that have led to the rise and fall in prices from year to year.

In addition to a series of tables in which these facts and figures are presented the bulletin contains numerous data relating to the progress made from time to time in the production and consumption of cotton in this and foreign countries. These are so arranged as to present a brief historical sketch of cotton production and consumption in the United States during the past century. The object of the department has been to make this bulletin a valuable work of reference as to the production, consumption and prices of cotton and other numerous facts relating to cotton for all who are interested in either cotton planting or in the cotton trade.

Referring to the condition of the market and prices in decade from 1840 to 1850 the bulletin says:

"In 1840 the largest crop ever made up to that time and the largest accumulation of stocks ever witnessed in Liverpool caused a decline to the lowest average for ten years. This was the beginning of the heavy accumulation of stocks in Europe during the next five years, which lead to an extraordinary decline in prices. The highest price per pound in New York in that decade was 13 7-8 cents, in 1850, and the lowest 5 cents, in 1842 and 1845. Shepperson quoted middling in that year as low as 4 cents.

"In 1842," continues the bulletin, "middling to fair cotton reached as low as 4½ cents in New Orleans, and there is on file in the department of agriculture a letter showing that a Marengo county, Alabama, planter sold this year seventeen bales of cotton in Mobile at 4¼ cents. The Price Current of the day quotes middling to fair cotton in New Orleans in 1845 as low as 4⅜ cents and in Mobile the same year 3¼ cents per pound."

A table of the fluctuations in prices shows that in 1825 it amounted to 18 cents per pound; in 1873, to 12½ cents; in 1865, to 1.21; in 1867, to 1.77, and in 1886 to only .86 of a cent, the smallest on record.

DECLINE OF THE PEACH.

Age-Herald.

In this age of apparent political degeneracy public economists have little time to note the rapid decline under the touch of advanced pomology of so valuable a branch of the fruit family as the succulent peach.

May we not be permitted for a moment to turn aside from every-day political and industrial talk and enquire as to why the peach has been allowed to degenerate? Who that is old enough to vote cannot discover that the modern peach is inferior in growth, substance, taste and smell to the fruit which grew in the orchards of years ago, without cultivation? Who that does not remember the old time peach orchard of medium-sized trees, with lanceolate, stipulate leaves, born on long, slender relatively embranched shoots and with the flowers arranged singly or in groups of two or more at intervals along the shoots? Then the fruit, first green, then ripening, then red or yellow or white? How sweet, how juicy and how abundant? We plucked them from the tree, pealed and ate them under the shade of the burdened branches, while the swine noised with their crackings and fattened on the surplus droppings and the clear stones that were made their share.

True in those days there were some "failing years" for the peach, but they did not come often. Sometimes they were liable to the attacks of a parasitic fungus known as mildew, but when freed from this trouble they grew ripe from peel to stone, through and through.

Here in the South we enjoy a peach season of five long months—first the June peach and last the October peach. Nature did all the work.

In our school days we were taught that the peach was the successor of a poisonous almond, which by care and cultivation had been trained and tamed for our delighful use. We were taught to believe that the peach in its purity, sweetness and ripeness had come to stay, and were content for seven months in the year to await each returning peach season.

Science and art finding a way into modern pomology made haste to rapidly, and by new processes of grafting and sprouting have interfered with nature, and are about to prove themselves to be enemies to the peach, by robbing it of its natural power of affording to humanity the most lucious of all fruits given us by the bounteous hand of nature.

Is there not some way to retrieve? Can we not bring back the succulent peach, or is it now too late?

That he has often had to pay

WHO IS THE DEBTOR?

Daniel Smith, in the Mobile Register, gives the following solution to the money question, which we think so good as to publish:

"They are after me again, but their attack is more amusing than otherwise, for they admit my "perfect right to jump on Mr. Bryan's back," as they term it, and I presume it will not be denied that I have the same "right to jump on" any other man's "back" who advocates the same doctrine that Mr. Bryan does, but I shall not attempt to do much "jumping on" anybody's "back" just now, further than to show that their teaching, if carried out, would be more hurtful to the poor man, especially the workingman, than the rich, and I have no defence to make for the banks or any other class of men who are supposed to be rich and, therefore, not affected by "hard times," but are, by reason of their being better off than their less fortunate neighbors, in condition to, and do oppress them. To begin with, they argue for the "independent and unlimited free coinage of silver," and always say "at the ratio of 16 to 1," in order, I suppose, to make more and "cheaper money," as their further argument goes to show, but they never tell us how we are to get hold of any more or cheaper money out of the United States treasury after it is coined than we have now and in support of the cheap money theory, Mr. Bryan and all of his way of thinking argue that the debtor shall have the option as to which coin he shall use in payment of his debts and say: "Now if a man wants to pay a debt he can either purchase the gold or silver, whichever he desires, and pay his debts with it, the option being with him as to which he shall select," and then goes on to say that "the debtor is a selfish man" and that "the creditor is a selfish man" and that, therefore, the creditor will demand the highest, priced money, while the debtor will prefer the cheapest money to pay his debts with, but, as quoted above, "the creditor shall have the option as to which coin he shall use." I am not going to dispute his theory about the debtor preferring to pay his debts with the cheapest money he can get, but will let it stand for what it is worth. Every debtor must have a creditor, every employer is the debtor of his employes till pay day comes, when, if "cheap money, say 50-cent dollars," is "legal tender," the employer, being the "debtor," would have the right, the same as any other "debtor," to pay his employes with 50-cent dollars, and then the employe, if he can and wants to lay any of it aside for a "rainy day" and thinks the bank a safer place to keep it than his stocking would be, puts it in the bank, the bank, therefore, becomes his "debtor," and he the bank's "creditor." The bank would have the right, under Mr. Bryan's system of arguing, to pay this workingman in 50-cent dollars, the other 50 cents going to enrich the bank. So, you see, that by the time he is paid off twice, first by his employer and then by the bank, which is his second "creditor," he has in hand just 25 per cent of what he earned by his labor, and even if he prefers his "stocking" to the bank in which to keep his money, he has only 50 per cent of his earnings by being paid off by his employer in 50-cent dollars.

"Now, I take it that no man will dispute the fact that a bank, by receiving a deposit from a man becomes the debtor of the man making the deposit and as such debtor would have the right to pay its debts in cheap money as any other debtor would have. And now, without knowing the exact amount of money on deposit in the banks in Mobile, I will suppose that the four banks have on deposit $3,000,000, and that they are debtors to their depositors to that extent, many of whom are workingmen and workingwomen, and if cheap money—say 50-cent dollars—are to be provided for the payment of debts, these banks could pay off their depositors, who are their creditors, with the same money, making a clear profit of $1,500,000 for the banks, which are classed by these "silverloon" leaders as "hoarders" of money, for the purpose of increasing its value to pay debts with.

"And now, I deem it due to myself to say that I have tried to give my views in as condensed form as I could on this cheap money question, as I see it, because I have not seen or heard of any "silverloon," as they are sometimes called, giving but one side of this question, and it seem to me that it ought to be viewed from both sides and from every standpoint; and if I have succeeded in showing that the poor, and especially the workingmen and workingwomen, would be the greatest sufferers under the "cheap money" system, then I am amply repaid for any and all criticisms that may be hurled at me by the advocates of one-sided and unjust dealings. And I might as well say now, for good and all, that I am in favor of gold and silver currency, with one dollar as good as any other dollar, and I don't care how much we have of such currency."

Kenneth Bazemore had the good fortune to receive a small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy when three members of his family were sick with dysentery. This one small bottle cured them all and he had some left which he gave to Geo. W. Baker, a prominent merchant of the place, Lewiston, N. C., and it cured him of the same complaint. When troubled with dysentery, diarrhœa, colic or cholera morbus, give this remedy a trial and you will be more than pleased with the result. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use has made it very popular. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Parker & Armstrong.

A PASSING INDUSTRY.

Birmingham News.

It will not be many more decades before the turpentine industry will be a thing of the past in the South. It has already passed high-water mark, and the center of production has moved from North Carolina to Georgia The destruction that has been wrought to timber in seeking turpentine has been incalculable in extent, and will probably continue in the same way until the available supply of trees has been exhausted.

It is estimated that the South has about 1,000 turpentine distilleries. Each farm has on an average of twenty crops of boxes or 210,000 boxes. This covers a territory of nearly 5,000 acres, so that between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 acres are now occupied by turpentine farms. The life of the timber under the present method averages three years, so that every season 1,500,000 acres of new territory is required. The industry is largest now in Georgia, though it is still extensive in North and South Carolina. Nearly all the pines in these two states have been "worked out." Florida is being worked too, and the industry in South Alabama is quite extensive.

Those unacquainted with turpentine farming are probably not aware of the fact that very cold weather cuts the crop short. Such was the case last winter, and today the visible supply of turpentine is 15,000 casks less than it was at this time last year. The effect of extreme cold upon turpentine trees is to cause the pines to become completely dormant and all the sap is driven to the roots. Thus during the past winter an entire dipping was lost, as during normal winters as soon as a box is cut in a tree sap commences to flow and by March 15th the new boxes are filled. Cold weather prevented this winter, causing a lost of 3,000,000 barrels of crude gum, equal to 160,000 barrels of rosin and 40,000 barrels of spirits. The product of last year exceeded the demand, and this year's falling off will probably result in better prices.

An Original Witness.

Sometime since, in southwest Georgia, a murder case was being tried before a certain judge. The state's attorneys had seen the shooting, and they had an old negro on the witness stand. The negro became intensely interested in the story he was telling. His big eyes were fixed upon the lawyer who was questioning him, and he seemed to think there was no other person in the room. He was trembling with excitement, so much so that he stammered, and he told his story as if he was having a strictly private and confidential conversation with the state's attorney.

"And 'en, boss," he said in solemn and awestruck tones, "j-j-jes' cz I war a-coming roun de cornah, sah, I seen him 'long 'o de lamppos.' I"—

"What time was this?" asked the judge.

The witness paused just for a second, as if something had disturbed him, but then, without turning his head, he went on:

"J-j-jes' as I war a-comin roun de cornah, boss, I seen him 'long o' de lamppos.' I"—

The judge rapped the desk before him smartly with his gravel.

"Stop!" he said. "The court is asking you a question. At what time did you come around the corner?"

Again the witness stopped and made a motion with his hand as if he was brushing away a fly from his ear, but he never turned around, and again started to tell his story:

"Ez I wus a-saying, boss, I rounded dat dah cornah, an I seen him 'long o' de"—

The judge brought his mallet down with a noise which almost caused the witness to leap off the stand, and roared out:

"What do you mean, sir? If you do not answer my question instantly, I shall commit you!"

The witness turned, faced the court and said in deprecating tones:

"L-l-look er yere, boss, doan' you see I'm talking to dis gen'lman?"

The lawyers were almost convulsed with laughter, the judge bent his head and shook with merriment, and the witness was allowed to finish his story undisturbed.—Atlanta Constitution.

GINSENG.

This Plant Is Worth Looking for When Strolling About in Summer Time.

Correspondent in Atlanta Constitution.

Knowing my fondness for flowers, the people where I spend my summers usually save any curious plant that they may find for me, and I was pleased when, on going into one of the neighbors, houses, the lady brought me a leaf carefully pressed on white paper and asked me if I knew what it was. I looked at it closely but could see no resemblance to any plant that I had ever seen before. I smelled it and it was odorless, but I tasted it, and the pungent, sweetish savor gave me the answer, and I said: "It is either ginseng or sarsaparilla."

"Yes," she said, "it is ginseng. Cousin Lyman sent it to father and told him that if he could find any in the woods around here, he could sell all he could dig."

"Did he find any?" I asked, interested at once.

"Yes," was the reply; "he walked almost all over the woods around here, and he found enough to buy him a pair of boots. They took it at the drug store, where they buy our sage. It took him most of the summer, for he could only find a little in a place, and the places were a good ways apart. He got six ounces in all, and they gave him $4 for it."

Nearly all the summer I looked for this plant, but it was not until August that I found it, in a rich, dark hollow in the moist woods of central New York.

Ginseng is chiefly valuable as an article of export to China, where it is supposed to possess remarkable virtues for the treatment of nearly all diseases. The name suggests this: panax, pan, meaning all, and akos, a remedy.

It is so esteemed by the Chinese that the right to gather it is reserved to the emperor. It is highly thought of as a remedy for exhaustion of body and mind, and is supposed to prolong life to a good old age. Their physicians have written volumes about it and deem it necessary in all their best prescriptions.

The best roots have a horny appearance, yellow and transparent. This condition is obtained by putting them into hot water, brushing until thoroughly clean and then steaming over boiling millet. The roots that are bifurcated or divided are considered the most powerful, and it is said that to this kind it owes its name, Jin Chen, like a man, and strange to say, the American name, garantoguen, means the same thing.

Before the discovery of the root in America the root in Peking frequently brought its weight in gold and ten times its weight in silver. In 1718 the Jesuits began shipping the root to China and in 1748 they sold for a dollar a pound in this country and five dollars a pound in China. The price fluctuates greatly, having been at one time six dollars an ounce, but now the sun-dried roots bring one dollar an ounce in New York.

New York, West Virginia and Minnesota export the principal amount from this country, and it is worth $700,600.

Up a Tree With Bees.

Once upon a time, about 1877 or '78, I had a swarm cluster about twenty feet up on a tree near my apiary, and as I could not get at them with a ladder on account of the small limbs, I climbed. I could get nothing to stand on in reach of the cluster but two small limbs, about as large as a man's thumb, and held on by a limb about 1½ inches in diameter, and about four feet from the body of the tree. The limbs I stood on being on a small fork that terminated in small branches outside of and around the cluster, I had cut the small limb from around the bees and was about tying a line to the limb to climb, when the two branches I was standing on broke. The limb I was holding to, by the jerk of my weight coming all on it, bent quickly, striking the cluster, and that precipitated a large part of it on to my bare head, my hat having been knocked off while climbing. Think of the joy of my situation—hanging by one hand some eighteen or twenty feet high, with perhaps a hundred lances busily testing the hardness of my head and the sticking qualities of my grit, but I did not fall. I had had a broken thigh once, and I would prefer a thousand bee stings to one broken leg. I quietly pulled myself on to the body of the tree, climbed down, combing the stings out of my scalp, while my wife picked a dozen or two out of my forehead, face and neck, after which I climbed again, knocked the cluster into a basket, let them down by a rope, carried them to the hive and emptied them out. Thus I learned that we could carry bees in an open-topped vessel as well as any way, and with no risk of jarring the cluster off. —Gleanings in Bee Culture.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

THE PLAN.

Each county is organized into a separate organization. Get a policy for thirty years for five dollars per thousand dollars without renewal. You only pay your pro-rata share of the loss of a brother member in your own county. In Kentucky, South Carolina, Georgia and Virginia the average cost has not been more than two dollars per annum in each thousand dollars of insurance.

"For fully two years, I suffered from rheumatism, and was frequently in such a condition that I could hardly walk. Ayer's Sarsaparilla being recommended, I resolved to try it, and, after using six bottles, I was completely cured."—P. H. FORD, Ouachita City, La.

TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

THAT LITTLE AD.

There was a little ad
That sang a little song,
And sang it clearly, sweetly,
To a willing, eager throng.
The people gladly listened
To each lucid, happy thought,
Then hunted that merchant up
And bought, bought, bought.

Tom Weaver is confined to his room by illness.

An almond tree farm is the latest North Alabama novelty.

Miss Pearl Norris is on an extended visit to friends in Renfroe and Talladega.

Miss Minnie Oglesby, of Centerville, is a guest of her grandmother, Mrs. A. Strickland.

A snake charmer was performing on our streets yesterday with lot of moccasin snakes.

Miss Ethel Greek and Nellie Parker are visiting Mrs. C. C. Elliott, at Vincent, this week.

"Kip" Anchors, The Chronicle apprentice, is spending this week with friends near Wilsonville.

A few of our lovers of base ball went to Selma yesterday to witness the game between Selma and Shelby teams.

Miss Elva Greek is teaching school at the McGowan school house, and is having a large attendance of pupils.

Dr. J. W. Newman, of Talladega, preached a most interesting sermon at the Methodist church Friday night.

The Shelby base ball team crossed bats with Selma team yesterday at Selma. Score will be given next week.

Mrs. Mary Spivey, who was on trial at Montgomery for the murder of her husband, was acquitted for want of evidence.

Frivolty may be out of place under many circumstances, but more or less cutting up only adds to the enjoyment of a watermelon party.

Prof. W. B. Greek is now busily engaged nursing Job's comforters, having a large number of all sorts and sizes concealed about his person.

FOR SALE.—A mower and rake both good as new, dirt cheap for cash.
EVANDER MORRISON,
june 20tf Columbiana, Ala.

Mr. J. H. Mason, editor of the Progressive Age, at Ruston, La., was a caller at our office Saturday. He reports business as extra good in his section of the country.

No writer on the subject has asserted that putting a woman's head on the greater part of the national coinage is meant to corroborate the saying that money talks.

Mrs. J. H. Page was called to the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Diana Smith, living near Weldon, who was very ill, last week, but we are pleased to hear that she is slowly recovering.

When moving into our present home I found a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm left by a former tenant. On the label I found the statement that it was good for cuts and burns. I can testify to the truth of this. Nothing in all my experience has found its equal for treating blisters or burns. F. E. Barrett, manager Le Sueur Sentinel, Le Sueur, Minn. Pain Balm is also a sure cure for rheumatism. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Work has begun on Tuskaloosa's fourth cotton mill. Meantime Columbiana has not as yet its first cotton mill or any other business enterprise. Surely it is time we should be moving if we expect to keep up with the industrial wave that is passing over the country.

In order to introduce Chamberlain's Cough Remedy here we sold several dozen bottles on strict guarantee and have found every bottle did good service. We have used it ourselves and think it superior to any other. W. I. Mowrey, Jarvisville, W. Va. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

A match game of base ball between the Hillsdales and Waxahatchies, two local nines, was played last Saturday and resulted in favor of Hillsdale by a score of 28 to 10. The score would have been larger but Will Page's legs got tired and laid down to rest and blocked the game.

My boy was taken with a disease resembling bloody flux. The first thing I thought of was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. Two doses of it settled the matter and cured him sound and well. I heartily recommend this remedy to all persons suffering from a like complaint. I will answer any inquiries regarding it when stamp is inclosed. I refer to any county official as to my reliability. Wm. Roach, J. P., Primroy, Campbell Co., Tenn. For sale by Parker & Armstrong.

Notice.

I will be at the court house on Monday and Tuesday, the 19th and 20th of August, 1895, for the purpose of assessing the city tax of Columbiana for the year 1895. All persons living within 2½ miles of the court house are requested to attend and list their property.
C. W. O'HARA,
Clerk and City Tax Assessor.

To Trustees of Schools.

An enumeration of the children within the school age, must be made during the first days of August.

I shall insist that this census be made with care and correctness. It is a question of dollars and cents; a question of justice and right as regards the school fund in your township for the next two years. See that each race is reported in full, but no more. Blanks will be sent you. Make your report in triplicate, retaining one and mailing the other two to county superintendent by the 12th day of August. At least two of the trustees in each township, with their own hands, should sign these reports before some officer qualified to fill the affidavit on the blank.

Very respectfully,
T. A. HUSTON,
Supt. Education.

Council Proceedings.

The city council met on Monday, July 29th, at 8 a. m., Mayor W. B. Browne, presiding. The following councilmen were present: A. P. Longshore, B. L. Moore, E. B. Nelson, W. A. Tallant and J. R. White.

Rev. C. W. O'Hara was elected city clerk and tax assessor. J. R. White was elected secretary and treasurer of the board of school trustees.

W. B. Greek was elected principal of the Columbiana free school at a salary of $60 per month, and Miss Mary Lyles and Miss Lucy Smith were elected assistant teachers at a salary of $25 per month each.

It was ordered that the school open on the first Monday in September next and continue nine calendar months.

Death of Mrs. J. L. Heffernan.

Just as the king of day was appearing over the eastern hills of Newcomb, Tenn., on Sunday, July 28, 1895, the spirit of Mrs. J. L. Heffernan took its flight to the spirit land, although surrounded by devoted husband, loving mother, affectionate relatives and friends, who did all that earthly help could do. Her deathless soul no power could bind, but she has gone to Him who gave it.

Launa Davis-Heffernan was born in Winona, Carleton county, Miss., July 4, 1870. She was a daughter of Mrs. R. E. McLane, of this place, and was married to Dr. J. L. Heffernan in 1888. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate, kind daughter, and all that could be desired as a sister. She had many friends in every place she was known. Being noted for her charity, no one left her door with an empty hand.

Weep not, broken-hearted mother and sisters. Although you have given up one of your dearest earthly ones, yet God who heals the broken-hearted will pour the balm of His love on your aching hearts. Remember, the cup of sorrow, though seemingly full, can only last a few years, when link by link the chain will be finished in heaven as each responds to the call "Weary child, come home."

The interment took place last Tuesday evening at Lexington, Ky.

No more to pain and grief a prey,
Thine earthly task is done;
Ere time could steal life's bloom away,
The spirit land is won.

We miss thee in our lonely home,
Thou ever kind and dear;
And oh, through tedious years to come
We shall not see thee here.

Death is the door thou hast gone through,
Millions the path have trod;
It is the same all must pursue
To freedom and to God.

Where angels bright walk hand in hand,
In ecstacy complete,
With Heaven's pure and holy band
Thou hast union sweet.

Though faith we hope to meet again,
In glorious realms above,
Where harmony and Jesus reign,
Uniting all in love.

A.

Shelby Siftings.

There is a great deal of sickness, but the cases yield very readily to treatment.

A good rain would be very acceptable for the benefit of young corn and the gardens.

Roy Christian, who has been indoors because of an attack of fever, is on the streets again.

All were pleased to see Miss Leila Parker, Sunday. She and her brother, Ed, dined with Miss Eloise Bell.

Maj. T. H. Hopkins is being greeted by his friends here. He and P. B. Harrell visited Talladega Springs today. He will remain several days.

Will Walker has gone to his old home for recreation and rest and will be absent several weeks. Some surmise that Will has been smitten by Cupid's shaft.

Many of the friends of Mr. John Mosely were gratified to grasp his hand after an absence of five months to his father's near Orrville. He will remain one or two weeks.

Our Sunday schools were thinly attended as most of the members were at Good Hope at the quarterly meeting. Dr. Newman preached several entertaining and instructive sermons.

The many friends of Will Walburn are gratified to know that he has procured a lucrative job at Saginaw, having been appointed engineer of the train to haul logs to the saw mill and foreman of hands that load and unload.

A boiler maker from Birmingham is here to repair the boilers in No. 2 furnace. The will probably blow in the furnace on the 1st of August. They will begin raising ore the first of this week.

Mr. Thomas Shrader, who resides five miles south of here, was visited by a miscreant one night last week who opened his gate and turned in a herd of cattle on his corn, breaking his pear tree limbs, carving his blacksmith bellows and injuring his apparatus for grinding wheat at his mill. A rope around his neck and thrown over the limb of a tree and there left to dance upon the atmosphere is the proper penalty for such a villian.

They will convert the furnace at Ironaton into a coke furnace. Having a quantity of charcoal on hand, they will consume that before beginning with the coke. Capt. Christian and Arnold Sturdevant went to Ironaton Tuesday to blow in the furnace. The latter gentleman will remain until the charcoal is consumed; Capt. C. visiting him occasionally. Hence Shelby is not only noted for the greatest iron makers, but the most gallant and moral young men and beautiful and intelligent young ladies.

Wilsonville Waifs.

W. H. Pope, of Piedmont, is visiting relatives here.

John W. Bolin made a business trip to Anniston, Saturday.

Ed Williamson has been very sick, but is now able to resume work.

Miss Bessie Nimmo is spending a few days with friends in Alpine.

Robert Fowler, of Birmingham, came over Saturday and returned Monday.

Miss Essie Mason, of Columbiana, was the guest of Miss Hammond last week.

There are several visitors at Capt. Fowler's, but I am unable to give any names.

Miss Myra Kilpatrick, of Anniston, is visiting her brother, J. B. Kilpatrick, of this place.

Miss Fanny Montgomery, of Oxford, spent a few days with her brother, of West End, Wilsonville.

Prof. J. B. Kilpatrick filled the pulpit Sunday and Sunday night, as Rev. J. M. McCord could not be here on account of sickness of his little son.

A bow, formed of lace, instead of a hat, has entered the fashion circles of Wilsonville. It is something very beautiful; you just ought to see it.

Jack Taylor, our champion watermelon eater, is ready to accept a challenge from any part of the state. After two weeks practice he is "out of sight."

Miss Maud Williamson, after an extended visit to her brother and family of J. F. Pope, returned to her home in Coatopa, Monday, to the regret of our young people. Miss Maud is a nice young lady and has won many friends while here.

BUTCH.

Items from Sterrett.

Hurrah for the Sterrett boys.

J. L. and John Falkner will visit relatives in Anniston this week.

Houston Goodwin is at work at Saginaw and was up Sunday to see home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Neal, of Easonville, are circulating among relatives and friends here.

Little Bunyon Falkner was quite sick last week, but we are glad to say he is much improved.

Ed Goodwin and Tom Holcomb have gone to Ellisville, Miss., and we learn they have secured a job there.

Several of our people attended an all-day singing at Vandiver last Sunday and report a pleasant time.

Prof. G. H. Green, of Branchville, was down Saturday and Sunday. He received a hearty welcome, as usual.

Prof. Kinnett's school is progressing finely, and you may look for a nice exhibition about the last of September.

Marion Baugh, of Easonville, who has been visiting here several days returned home Sunday, much to the regret of some of our girls.

A. B. Allen, who has been in Atlanta, Ga., for some time for treatment, returned home Saturday. People who have seen him say he has not improved a great deal.

Rev. S. V. McGinnis, the pastor, preached a very interesting sermon here last Sunday. The next regular meeting, the fourth Sunday, will be protracted a few days.

A game of base ball was played here Saturday afternoon between Sterrett and Mt. Tabor, which resulted in a victory for Sterrett; score, 32 to 29. Come and try your luck again, boys.

We are glad to say that Sam C. Perry has so greatly improved as to be able to walk some, and we sincerely hope he may continue till he entirely recovers. Sam has been in a very serious condition for a month, most of the time unable to see anything or scarcely hear anything. We again express a desire for immediate recovery.

BONAMI.

Vandiver Locals.

Crops are needing rain.

Health of the community good.

Glad to know that Mr. Howard is on the mend.

J. M. Rich came to the postoffice and made an order for some books last week.

Prof. D. F. Funderburg's school is increasing. He has sixty pupils. Guess he wishes he had married sooner.

Rev. Jennings is carrying on a protracted meeting at Lawley's chapel. The brother seems to be a thoroughgoing worker, and great good is being done.

Rev. Wm. Brasher filled his regular appointment at Pleasant Grove last Sunday. He preaches the Baptist doctrine, such as the people of this community admire.

There will be an all-day singing at Vandiver next Sunday. Everybody come and bring a basket. Come, boys, and enjoy yourselves; the girls will be there, sure. Come and have a nice time.

Sterrett and Tabor played their match game of ball last Saturday. There were quite a number of spectators. "Reporter" took part in the game. The score stood 33 to 25 in favor of Sterrett. Now, you see that Tabor was left.

MIKE.

He Gave it Away

A few years ago a prominent oil producer of Pittsburg was putting down a well in a territory that had never been tested for oil. He was keeping the fact a profound secret, in order that, in case he got a good well, he might without difficulty secure all the leases he desired in the vicinity. He was on the ground himself, watching with great interest the indications. Everything pointed to success. Two days before the well was expected to "come in," he was called home. Anxious about the result, he arranged with his contractor to telegraph him as soon as the drill reached the sand. He knew however, that secrets will sometimes leak out of a telegraph office, and so he told the driller that the sentence, "Pine trees grow tall," would mean that he had struck oil. The driller promised to do as he was ordered. The mingled satisfaction and vexation of the producer may be imagined when, two days later, he received the following telegram: "Pine trees grow tall. She's squirting clean over the derrick." His hope that he should have no competors for leases was disappointed.—Argonaut.

Busy.

At a recent large country wedding all the carriages, far and near, were engaged to convey the guests from the station and the various country houses to the bridal reception. "I am sorry, ma'am," said the village undertaker, to whom one of the perplexed hostesses had applied in despair for a couple of coaches, "but we had to put off two funerals today on account of this weddin."—New York Tribune.

Only the wise can profit by the experience of others. A fool has to find out for himself that fire is hot.

Love and Marriage.

Twenty years ago if an article had appeared in a newspaper headed, "Reasons for Marrying," it would have created a genuine surprise. In old times there was only one reason for marrying, and that was love—love first and love always.

No matter what came, love was the ballast that steadied the whole structure of matrimony, and it was sufficient for everything—sickness or poverty, toil, labor and privations. They were born with the echo of the marriage vow, "for better or for worse," reverberating in their hearts.

Has the world changed? It would seem so when we come to ask for reasons for marrying, and yet this is what I read in a paper not long since:

"The reasons for marrying are so peculiar. Some women marry because it is the proper thing to do.

"Some women marry because they want a home of their own.

"Some women marry because they haven't the moral courage to remain single.

"Some women marry because they want 'Mrs.' put on their visiting cards.

"Some women marry because their mothers want them to.

"Some women marry because a man has asked them to, and they don't like to say 'No,'

"Some women marry for money—money, and nothing else."

Can one read the above reasons for the marriage of the present day and then wonder at the many suits of divorce we daily read of in the newspaper. If women hold the marriage state so lightly why should not men? Money is the cause of many a woman being selected as a life companion to a trifling lazy man, and when she finds out it was her gold and not herself, her heart grows hungry for that love and affection that she fondly imagined she would find in the married life.

There is nothing on earth so sad to my mind as an unloving marriage. The most pitiful sight the world can give is a true, loving woman who is linked to an unloving husband; to see her yearning for a look or word of affection and I have seen it often. Yes, it is an everyday occurrence and yet women enter into the marriage state in the most frivolous way—meet a young man of pleasing address, and in a few weeks you hear of an engagement, then a marriage—no knowledge of the man, his family or his habits. They simply take them on trust. Under such circumstances it is not surprising that marriage is a failure, and it is only too true there are more failures than successes these days.

But let us turn from the disagreeable side of the picture and the reasons given above, as to why some women marry and see if the writer won't find in her heart—for it was a woman who wrote those reasons—to tell us of the good women who marry for love. This is what she says:

"Some women marry because they love the man, because they want to be his wife, his friend and his companion, because they want to make him feel that there is one woman in the world whom he can love and cherish, and from whom he will receive love and consideration in return, because they want to feel that if sorrow comes he has a sympathizing, loving friend close beside him, and that in the day of joy there is one that can give him smile for smile. These are the women worth marrying."

So, there is a "silver lining," and it is the love and lives of true noble women. Truly they are the only ones worth marrying. In these times of woman's rights and woman's suffrage, where women everywhere are so busily engaged in all kinds of work outside of the home, one fact stands out clear and forcible, and that is that the woman who lives in her own home circle and has a loving husband to tenderly love and care for her, is by all odds the happiest woman. She may not receive the plaudits of society for being public spirited and running this or that club, but she has the love and admiration of husband and children and the approval of her own conscience that she is doing her duty.

Rather Romantic.

Some two years ago Mr. Paul Judge, of Kansas, inserted a little ad. in a metropolitan weekly stating that he desired a female correspondent. In the due course of time he received a reply from Mrs. Routt, a widow lady living a few miles west of town. The correspondence moved along smoothly enough; marriage was proposed and the matrimonial offer was accepted by the lady.

The date for his coming to claim his bride was agreed upon, and after being here for three or four days and constantly visiting her the marriage ceremony was performed Sunday morning last by Rev. T. L. Weatherford in his most agreeable and handsome manner.

The bride is well known and highly respected in this county, and is a daughter of one of our best citizens, Mr. William Harold; and while the groom is, of course, a stranger, he has made many friends by his pleasant manners.—Athens Democrat.

A Sockdolager for Bloomers.

There is not apt to be much of a "Bloomer craze" in Birmingham. It was nipped in the bud Sunday, when there appeared upon the streets of this city a woman, "fat and forty," of ebony hue and perspiring at every pore, costumed in a "Bloomer."

The costume was notable for its baggy proportions, and color effects—a waist of narrow red and white stripes, pantaloons of large blue and white stripes, and bright yellow hose—"a combination and a form" to make a horse laugh.

Bloomers will not be "a go" in the Magic City.—Birmingham News.

Need's New Trousers.

It is frequently that the rents in a ragged suit come home to roost. For instance, note the following from the local columns of the Lebanon (Ill.) Journal:

"The lady (?) who yesterday called the attention of another to our patched breeches, whereat they both laughed so heartily, is informed that a new pair will be purchased when her husband's bill is settled. It has been due nearly a year. Don't criticise a printer's dress too closely while you are wearing silk bought with money due us. Tell your husband to send us $40.78 and save the cost of a lawsuit. We need another pair of pants."

Precaution.

"In taking this albuminate of iron," continued the physician as he prescribed for a fair patient, "you must be careful not to get it on your teeth."

"Why so?" She inquired with mild surprise.

"Because it will decay them. Some take iron in capsules, but I think by taking it through a straw you can keep it from getting on your teeth."

"Well, now doctor, suppose I should leave my teeth up stairs while I take the iron in the kitchen, do you think there would be any danger?"

"Well—er—no. I think that would be a reasonable precaution."—San Francisco Post.

THE FASHIONS.

BLACK and white are certainly in fashion, but in stripes and pekins and not in checks.

ECRU lace is popular, and with net and insertion will form exquisite collars, yokes, berthas and skirt trimmings.

THE plaited and rosetted collars of chiffon are still to be seen; in fact, the lavish use of this material bids fair to last all through the summer.

THE fullness in gigot sleeves is disposed in gathers or plaits at the shoulders, the distended effect being attained equally well by both modes of adjustment.

SLEEVES for plain day dresses are always worn long, sometimes too long. Some end in the form of the mouth of a blunderbuss or of a flute, and are most unbecoming.

Change of Life.

When a woman approaches the change of life she is liable to have a return of all the menstrual derangements, and other ailments that afflicted her in former years. The direct action of McElree's Wine of Cardui on the organs afflicted, make it the best remedy for use during this period.

Mrs. D. Pennington, West Plains, Mo., says: "I had been suffering from change of life and it took the form of dropsy. The doctors told my husband it was useless to prescribe for me any more. About that time we got Dr. McElree's book on the treatment of female diseases and decided to try the Wine of Cardui Treatment. After using nine bottles, I am well."

RUFUS SANDERS.

The Sage of Rocky Creek on the Wishy-Washy Man.

The "Mainest" Trouble With Drury Griffin. Captain Bunting of the Long Creek Horse Guards—Through the Dark Valley.

(Copyright 1895.)

In every condition—in religion and in politics—it will pay a man to choose sides and pick his flag and then stand by the colors. As for me, I would a whole lot rather be somethin or other oncst a year and let everybody know it than to be nothin in particlar the year round. In my day and generation I have covered lots of ground and seen a heap of sights, you understand, but I have never yet seen a wishy-washy man that didn't back himself into a great fret and confusionment before he quit. If he is one thing today and another thing tomorrow and somethin else the next day he is more than probable to draw a blank before the game runs out to a finish.

The Most Unhappiest

Man now in regards to religion, about the most unhappiest and changeful man I ever run up with was old man Drury Griffin, which he used to run a little water mill down on Deer Creek. He was a middlin good farmer and the bulliest sort of a mill man, but somehow or somehow else he never could git along smooth and easy with his church. In religion old man Drury was jest simply two or three times too many for himself. He didn't have the necessary stickin and stayin qualities, whereas he was forever and eternally floppin around from the fire into the fryin pan and back again.

Old man Drury started out when he was a right young man by takin stock with the Old School Baptists over at Cool Spring church. Everything run smooth and easy with him for six months or a year, but late along in the summer they held the reglar three days meetin at Cool Springs, with feet washin on Sunday. Right then and there old man Drury got his back up and kicked over the traces. He didn't believe in feet washin and he wouldn't have no finger in the pie. He didn't make out like he was smarter than the preacher, and he couldn't give any scripture for makin the kick. He jest simply didn't believe in it and he never expected to believe in it if he lived nine hundred and ninety-nine years.

The church then got together and sent a committee to wait on Brother Griffin and talk some sense into his head if such a thing could possibly be done. But it was all vanity and vexation, you understand. Old man Drury got his dander up higher and yet more higher till presently the committee had to give him up as a bad egg and a gone goslin. He stuck to it that he was a genuine Primitive Baptist, borned and bred and brung up in the faith, but he wouldn't take no feet washin in his'n.

The committee reported the general results back to the church, and after short talks from various and sundry members touchin the pecurious conduct of the wayward and wanderin brother, it was settled that the case would go over to the next reglar meetin, hopin maybe old man Drury would git back into the fold. But instid of that he got worse and worse and still more of it till finally at last the church had to turn him out and put up the bars behind him.

A Cussin Methodist.

By this time, you understand, Drury Griffin was mad with the whole world in general, and Cool Springs church in particlar. The more he talked about it the madder he got till the next thing anybody knowed he was cussin worse than a stage driver. Along in protracted meetin times the followin summer all of a suddentlike he bloomed out as a full-blooded Methodist and got his name on the books over at Bark Log church. He was fightin mad with the Old School Baptists and wanted to git as far away from them as possible jest for spite, whereas he run slap out to the other end of the rope. It was a monstrous long jump, but Drury made it at one leap.

But it want many months before they had him up before a church meetin over at Bark Log charged with sayin things unbecomin to a good member of the Methodist church. To put it in plain United States he had been cussin to beat six bits till the church couldn't stand it no longer. When they brought Drury up Elder Smith took the case in hand and put in some straight questions.

"Brother Griffin," says he, "the news has come to the church that you have been cussin and carryin on till it is a plum scandalation. The church is bound to keep her skirts clear and unspotted from the world. Have you got anything to say as to why you should not be treated like a weak and wayward and wanderin brother?"

"I will own up to cussin a little around the edges," says old Drury, but as to my general walk I am willin to show records with any man in the church. I am as good a Methodist as you are Elder, but whensomever I git right mad I maybe mought cuss a little. I have heard tell of cussin Methodists all the days of my life, and my notion is that the best of Methodists will cuss a little when you stir 'em up and git 'em good mad. My mainest weak pint is for cussin, but on general principles I am as good a Methodist as any of the committee. Methodist, Methodist is my name, and Methodist will I die."

They wanted old Drury to take it all back and say he was sorry, but he couldn't see it that way. He went on from bad to worse with his weak pint for cussin, till the church got together and throwed him overboard, and the old ship sailed on and left him.

From Pillow to Post

For a long time after that Drury stuck to it that he was way yonder a better Methodist than any of the crowd that had turned him out. He then give it out that he was goin to build up and establish the true Methodist church. He went out in an old field clost by Bark Log and knocked up a pine pole cabin, which he called the True church. He put in a pulpit and made some benches and bought a Bible. Then he fell in with Parson Zeb Newton—which you understand Zeb had been turned out for ridin the circuit with a squealin chestnut sorrel horse—and put him in to be the preacher of the true church. But it soon come to pass that the True church didn't draw like Drury and Zeb thought it would. Zeb was the preacher and Drury was the church, and there they stood. As time went on they found out that they want turnin the Christian world upside down any to speak of, so they held a few private cussin matches together and adjourned the meetin and took out and quit.

Well, as time went on old Drury put his name in with first one church and then another till he didn't have no where to go. He put in with the Presbyterians but soon got his back up because they set down to sing and stood up to pray. He lowed that want in line with his notions of religion, so he pulled out and quit.

The next thing anybody knowed he had jined in with the Episcopal church, but he couldn't stick there six months. He lowed dancin was worse than cussin accordin to his doctrines, and besides that they didn't do nothin in church but read prayers and sing songs, and kneel down and git up, and then git up and kneel down. So he "riz and fell with 'em" as long as he could stand it, and then dropped out into the cold world oncst more.

The plain unwashed truth is that any church and all the churches was too good for Drury Griffin. The mainest trouble with Drury Griffin, you understand, was the general all-around cussedness of Drury Griffin. He lived on to a good old age, made plenty of money and left his folks in good fix. But he died out of the church and out of sorts and out of line with the whole entire human family. And he died for the good of his country.

Here lately I have seen and heard a right sharp about the soldier boys trapsin around and goin off to their summer camps and drillins. It puts me in mind of Captain Steve Buntin and his soldier boys, and the Saturday evenin drillins they use to have. Steve Buntin stood I reckon about six feet and three axe handles in his socks, you understand, and covered all the ground he stood on.

Soon along in durin of the first year of the war the boys over on Long Creek fell in together and got up a soldier company they called the Long Creek Horse Guards, which Steve Buntin he was the Captain. They had their reglar weekly drillins every Saturday evenin, and whilst they didn't raise no scandlous big lot of fuss and feathers they meant war and war meant fightin, and when the time come they fit like so many tigers all the way from Sumpter's battered walls to the famous apple tree.

But I started out to tell you sometnin more in particlar about Crptain Steve Buntin and the drillins him and his men use to have. It was then in the summer time, you understand, and all the work stock about the farms was busy peepin through their collars and pullin the plows and wagons. So consequentially Captain Buntin and his boys had to hook up their brood mares and ride over to the old field where they had their drillin grounds. And naturally of course there was a young colt followin along at every mare's heels. The boys had made Steve their Captain because he stood way up yonder higher than they rest and made a monstrous fine appearment on a horse. But as to Steve, he didn't know no more about military matters than a mule knows about mathematics. He didn't know but for general orders, and I recollect till yet how he use to give them out to the boys. He needed two to start and then two to stop. In orderment to start up the drillin he would say:

"Company —— attention! Ride your horses."

Then he would ride off ahead and lead the boys round and round, back and fourth across the old field for hours and hours. Then by-and-by in orderment to come to a stop he would say:

"Company —— halt! Suckle colts."

But whilst there want no stars and stripes or fancy trimmins on Captain Steve Buntin, when his country called him in dead earnest he showed down like a thoroughbred, and I reckin no doubts the most gonebyest fighters that ever raised the rebel yell was the Long Creek Horse Guards.

Through the Dark Valley.

The news come through Aunt Nancy Newton from Panther Creek one day last week to the extent that old man Dabny Grayson was dead. It want to say in no ways surprisin to me to hear that old man Dabny had passed on through the dark valley, you understand, but it put me in mind of what Blev Scroggins loves to say—"some folks have sense, whilst others have fits."

Old man Dabny had been a stirrer from base, and a stirrer from his youth up. By hard work ond clost figuration he had managed so as to git ahead of the hounds and buy a good farm and raise up a fine crop of children and save some money. Raley nobody couldn't blame old man Dabny—accordin to the hard fight he had to make—but he was famous as the clostest and most stingiest man in all that region of country.

Two or three years ago a stranger from somewheres up North went down through the Panther Creek settlement and tarried over for a few days. By-and-by he put in and bought forty acres of land from old man Dabny—in woods and hills and hollows over on the creek—for a hundred dollars. In tellin me about it old man Dabny was braggin powerful on the trade.

"That land aint good for nothin, Rufus, except to hold the world together,' says he. "The timber is scrubby and whilst there are some big springs over there, even to the water aint fitten to drink. Blamed if the water don't jest naturally stink, and it smells like rotten eggs."

But the stranger from somewheres up North want gone nowheres, you understand. He soon give it out that he had found the bulliest sort of sulphur water on his land. Then he went off and worked up a boom, and come back and sold out to a crowd of town men for two thousand dollars, which they are now fixin to build a big hotel over there and take summer boarders.

And that was what ailed old man Dabny Grayson—he got the news and I couldn't keep from thinkin about the big things he had missed. Up to that time he was hale and hearty, but after that he moped and moaned till the last shower come and he had to take out and quit.

RUFUS SANDERS.

He Will Not Drown Himself.

(From the Troy, N. Y., Times.)

R. W. Edwards, of Lansingburg, was prostrated by sunstroke during the war, and it has entailed on him peculiar and serious consequences. At present writing Mr. E. is a prominent officer of Post Lyon, G. A. R., Cohoes and a past aide de camp on the staff of the commander-in-chief of Albany Co. In the interview with a reporter, he said:

"I was wounded and sent to the hospital at Winchester. They sent me together with others to Washington—a ride of about 100 miles. Having no room in the box cars we were placed face up on the bottom of flat cars. The sun beat down upon our unprotected heads. When I reached Washington I was insensible and was unconscious for ten days while in the hospital. An abscess gathered in my ear and broke; it has been gathering and breaking over since. The result of this 100-mile ride and sunstroke was heart disease, nervous prostration, insomnia and rheumatism. A completely shattered system which gave me no rest night or day. As a last resort I took some Pink Pills and they helped me to a wonderful degree. My rheumatism is gone, my heart failure, dyspepsia and constipation are about gone, and the abscess in my ear has stopped discharging and my head feels as clear as a bell when before it felt as though it would burst, and my once shattered nervous system is now nearly sound. Look at those fingers," Mr. Edwards said, "do they look as if there was any rheumatism there?" He moved his fingers rapidly and freely and strode about the room like a young boy. "A year ago those fingers were gnarled at the joints and so stiff that I could not hold a pen. My knees would swell up, and I could not straighten my leg out. My joints would squeak when I moved them. That is the living truth.

"When I came to think that I was going to be crippled with rheumatism, together with the rest of my ailments, I tell you life seemed not worth living. I suffered from despondency. I cannot begin to tell you," said Mr. Edwards, as he drew a long breath, "what my feeling is at present. I think if you lifted ten years right off my life and left me prime and vigorous at forty-seven, I could feel no better. I was an old man and could only drag myself painfully about the house. Now I can walk off without any trouble. That in itself," continued Mr. Edwards, "would be sufficient to give me cause for rejoicing, but when you come to consider that I am no longer what you might call nervous and that my heart is apparently nearly healthy, and that I can sleep nights, you may realize why I may appear to speak in extravagant praise of Pink Pills. These pills quiet my nerves, take that awful pressure from my head, and at the same time enrich my blood. There seemed to be no circulation in my lower limbs a year ago, my legs being cold and clammy at times. Now the circulation there is as full and as brisk as at any other part of my body. I used to be so light-headed and dizzy from my nervous disorder that I frequently fell while crossing the floor of my house. Spring is coming and I never felt better in my life, and I am looking forward to a busy season of work."

But when she spied that brindle cow
With crumpled horn and horrid low
She gasped: "Dear George, I'm thine!"

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The Congregationalists in this country number 583,539.

—A St. Paul lumberman has given $50,000 to the University of Minnesota to endow a chair of Semitic languages.

—Gen. Booth is at work on a new book drawn from the results of his observations during his recent visit to this country.

—Rev. Russell H. Conwell, D.D., pastor of Grace Baptist church (The Temple), Philadelphia, has baptized 3,021 persons during his eleven years' pastorate there.

—D. L. Moody has a scheme on foot to put a Bible in the hands of each of the 750,000 criminals in the country, and he generally carries out what he undertakes.

—The action of Notre Dame university (Roman Catholic) in conferring the degree of LL. D. on the well-known Congregational clergyman, Rev. Washington Gladden, is almost unprecedented, and will doubtless excite wide comment.

—The First Japanese Christian church in America was dedicated in San Francisco recently. It belongs to the Methodist denomination, and has about three hundred members, who contributed largely toward the building of the edifice. The assistant minister and the organist are Japanese, and the church organization will be managed by the Japanese members, with very little help or interference by Caucasians.

—Bishop Miadenoff, head of the South Slavic Catholics, has disappeared. He offered some months ago to secede from the Catholic church with a large number of Macedonian Bulgarians and to recognize the exarchate of the Greek church. Soon after he went to Constantinople and dined with the exarch, and has not been seen or heard of since. He is believed to have accepted an invitation to visit an American Catholic convent on the Asiatic side of the Bosporus.

—Dr. D. K. Pearsons, of Chicago, has offered to give Mount Holyoke college $50,000 if it will raise an additional $150,000 in a year and a half. The gifts of Dr. Pearsons to western institutions aggregate about $2,000,000, eight colleges being the beneficiaries. Of these Beloit has received $200,000, Knox $50,000, Chicago Theological school $50,000, while he has recently made Whitman college, of Walla Walla, Wash., a similar offer to that now made to Mount Holyoke, and Drury college has also been aided by him.

—Prof. Simon Newcomb, of the national observatory at Washington, who has just been elected an associate of the French Academy of Sciences, has had degrees conferred upon him by Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Leyden, and Heidelber. He holds the gold medal of the Royal Astronomical society and the great gold Huygens medal of Leyden, bestowed only once in twenty years. It is now thirty-four years since he was appointed a professor of mathematics in the United States navy, and he has been senior professor for nearly twenty years.

—The financial statement of the Presbyterian board of foreign missions for the year ending April 30, 1895, shows that the total receipts were $866,378, against $841,553 for the preceding year. The total expenses, including appropriations for the fields, "Church at Home and Abroad," etc., were $1,015,757. To this must be added the deficit at the beginning of the year, $102,597, making a total liability of $1,118,354. Deducting the income there remains a deficit of $251,976, which is lessened, however, by a gain of $38,872 in exchange on silver and by unused appropriations amounting to $38,221, so that the real deficit is $174,883.

THEY HAD SYMPATHY.

One Phase of Life Illustrated on Chicago's Streets.

She hurried along Elm street, apparently bound for the cable cars and a career of downtown shopping. Her eyes—one must note them in passing—were red from recent weeping; but a face-reader of ordinary penetration could see that her trouble was of a trivial nature. It somehow seemed such grief as might have been caused by a dressmaker's blunder or the short postponement of a trip around the world.
